GAME WARDEN KILLS ANOTHER SMALL BEAR

Bruins Love for Honey Leads to His Destruction

Conservation officer Ed. Deuell reports the killing of another 188 pound bear on the Hubbard Bros. bee farm, south of Boyne Falls, last week.

Bruin's love for honey was the cause of his death in his instance, as has been the cause of the sudden death of several bears in this vicinity in the last year or so.

When the report of his activities came in, traps were set about the apiary. The first night Mr. Bear lapped up a hive of bees, dropped it in the trap, thus eliminating the danger to himself. The next night the trap was reset and the following morning Mr. Bear was found in it.

This killing brings the number up to ten in the last three falls—three so far this season. Ed. is of the opinion that placing the bear on the protected list of game animals is all bunk.

HUGE GATHERING AT MASS MEETING

CROWD OF 1500 HEARD ADDRESS TUESDAY EVENING

Second Rally to Be Held at East Jordan October 23rd—Judge Colgrove Will Speak

Conservative estimates place the number of people who attended the Republican mass meeting and rally held at the gymnasium Tuesday evening at 1500. The gathering was by far the largest ever to attend a political meeting in Charlevoix county.

Preceding the mass meeting a torch light parade, recalling political campaigns of earlier days, assembled at the court house and marched through the business street. Servetus A. Correll, Charlevoix county's venerable probate judge, led the marchers carrying the American flag. Following him was Miller's life and drum corp dressed in comic set-ups, marchers carrying the Republican party elephant mounted on a platform, and then the combined Charlevoix and East Jordan bands, torch bearers and the body of the parade.

Marching to the school building on Mason street the parade dispersed and crowds listened to band music with the local and East Jordan bands augmented by the Boyne City organization, which arrived too late for the parade.

The mass meeting opened by the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Rollie L. Lewis introduced the chairman of the county Hoover-Green committee, Herman Myers of Boyne Falls, who in turn introduced other members of the committee before presenting Louis E. Anderson, Republican nominee for state representative, who responded with a short talk.

Mr. Myers next presented Dr. W. S. Dudley, Republican campaign speaker, whose address, entitled "Three Reasons Why You Should Vote a Straight Republican Ticket," was listened to with great interest.

Dr. Dudley's talk stressed the Democratic presidential nominee's renunciation of his own party's principles; a comparison of the qualifications of the two candidates, Hoover and Smith, and the Republican party's stand on the immigration and liquor issues.

Calvin Campbell of Indian River, nominee for state senator, followed Dr. Dudley with a few remarks and the meeting closed with the singing of "America."

The next political rally and mass meeting will be held next Tuesday evening, October 23rd, at East Jordan. Charlevoix citizens are requested to return that city's favor of attending the Charlevoix meeting in large numbers by getting out in force to go to East Jordan.

The Charlevoix band, Miller's life and drum corp and other of the local parade will participate in the East Jordan parade. The county nominees are also preparing a float which they will enter. Judge Colgrove has been announced as the speaker at East Jordan and Hon. C. E. Holmes, superintendent of the state school for the blind, will address the third meeting at Boyne City, October 30th.

Arthur W. Knowles, Fire Chief, Will Appoint His Men This Week

Central Lake's new fire department will be organized this week, according to action taken at the council meeting held Tuesday evening. A. W. Knowles, village fire chief, brought in a list of names who will be volunteer firemen. The list was approved by the city "dads" and if those named accept, the organization will be perfected within a few days.

All responsibility was put into the fire chief's hands and he is to receive a salary of $50.00 per year. The first seven firemen to reach a fire will receive $1.50 for every time they are called out. These seven men will assist the chief after the fire to put the apparatus in first class condition before they leave. Fire drills will be held frequently to train the men for action. — Central Lake Torch.

SUPERVISORS END OCTOBER SESSION

ROUTINE BUSINESS IS COMPLETED SATURDAY NOON

Office Holders Fail in Effort to Have Former Salaries Established—Appropriations Cut

Saturday noon saw the close of the 1926 session of the Charlevoix county board of supervisors, which opened Monday, October 8, in the court house here.

A tendency to pare all appropriations was noted throughout the session. Annual appropriations of $1000 each for the Charlevoix hospital and the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association were cut to $700. The home for crippled children at Farmington, and the Michigan Children's Aid Society at St. Joseph, were cut from a previous appropriation of $350 to $290.

The amount allotted for the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society was decreased from $2000 to $1000. Other appropriations were $110 for the Northern Michigan apple and potato show at Gaylord, $2000 for county agricultural extension work, and $1000 for maintenance and upkeep of Whiting county park.

The county sinking fund committee's request for 4 1-2 mills to purchase and retire county road and federal aid bonds and pay semi-annual interest on same was lowered to 3 1-2 mills, the same amount as last year. The board authorized an appropriation of $500 to construct steel approaches at the Ironston ferry and voted to authorize the county road commission to build any parcel of road in the county costing $5000 or less without advertising for bids.

The amount to be raised for the general fund this year is 9 mills, the same as in 1927. The report and recommendations of the county road commission were adopted and a 2 1-2 mill tax authorized for road work.

A total of $17,000 of the road money will be spent for maintenance and the balance for equipment and new construction. The commission's report showed total receipts were $122,857.22. Disbursements a $106,677.73, leaving a balance on hand of $16,179.49.

A motion to make the office hours at the court house from 8:30 to 12:00 and 1:00 to 5:00 on week days and 8:30 to 12:00 on Saturdays did not pass.

A move on the part of county office holders to have the board reconsider salary decreases made at the June session failed by a vote of 14 to 7. Two supervisors did not vote on the issue and two were absent.

An investigation into the tax situation revealed that 325 dog owners had failed to pay taxes required by the state law. The prosecuting attorney was instructed to take steps to enforce the law.

CONVINCED THEY NEED SERVICES OF AGENT

The Cheboygan county board of supervisors has decided by a vote of 18 to 5 that the county needs the services of a county agricultural agent and has appropriated $2,400 toward the expense. The agricultural committee favors the plan and will hire the agent within a few days.

CHARLEVOIX LOST MANCELONA GAME

TAKE THIRD DEFEAT BY 12 TO 0 SCORE SATURDAY

Boyer Tied Cadillac Outfit; Petoskey Lost Close One to Soo; Big Rapids Stops Manistee

Mancelona high school marked up their third straight victory in as many starts last Saturday at the expense of Coach Kipke's Red and White eleven by a score of 12 to 0. The game on Mancelona's home field was one between two evenly matched teams, but with the breaks of the game with them, the Atrim county lads crashed in on Charlevoix's errors for their two counters.

Mancelona tallied against the home eleven in the first quarter after a Red and White attack, featured with several long runs by Dick Marshall, captain and quarterback, threatened to end in a touchdown. A fumbled ended the advance, however, and was followed closely by Mancelona's first touchdown when one of her backfield got away for a 40 yard run across the local goal.

Both teams fought on even terms throughout the second and third quarters. Charlevoix had the edge in the final period and, although handicapped by the loss of Captain Marshall, who was injured and taken from the game, uncorked a passing attack that put them on Mancelona's 10-yard line. Here again the breaks went against them and after completing five passes for gains of between 15 and 20 yards, the sixth was intercepted by a Mancelona player who dashed 80 yards for the victor's second touchdown.

Charlevoix's defeat Saturday was somewhat of a disappointment to local fans. It marked their third setback since they romped away with Oshtemo in the opening game 58 to 0. The local eleven was conceded a good chance to win over Mancelona, and a victory would have bolstered the morale of the team after their two previous set-backs.

Results of Other Games
Boyer City ties further knots in the Northern Michigan football championship tangle Saturday afternoon when they played the strong Cadillac eleven to a scoreless tie on the Boyne City field. The east end aggregation has not lost a game so far this season and is a dangerous foe to other teams seeking the Northern Michigan crown. Boyne's game with Traverse City, October 27th, will likely be a big factor in deciding the regional champ.

Soo Defeats Petoskey
Although showing great improvement over former games, Petoskey's football eleven dropped a 6 to 0 game to Soo Saturday in their annual clash. Petoskey had the ball in scoring position several times but failed to cash in on her opportunities, losing her third straight game of the season.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday school: 12:00 o'clock.

Wednesday service: 7:45 p. m.

Reading Room: Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" Was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, October 14.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "But when Jesus perceived their thoughts he answering said unto them, what reason ye in your hearts? Whether is easier, to say, thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, rise up and walk?" (Luke 5:22-23.)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with key to the scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "If a sense of disease produces suffering and a sense of ease antedates suffering, disease is mental, not material. Hence the fact that the human mind alone suffers, is sick, and that the divine Mind alone heals."—(p. 270.)

DODGE BROTHERS
NEW VICTORY SIX

The DeLuxe Sedan

Smarter in Appearance — More Luxurious in Appointments — With Increased Room and Still Finer Performance

Style stands out in all nine new Victory body types. There is an inviting swagger in the sweep of the improved one-piece fenders, an assurance of power in the higher and more massive radiator and hood lines.

Bodies are not only smarter, but larger, providing increased head-room, leg-room and seat-comfort. Deeper, softer cushions and specially selected hardware and upholstery sound a distinctive note of interior luxury, while higher and wider doors facilitate entrance and exit.

The new Victory Six emphasizes the unusual structural advantages first introduced in the original Victory. The chassis frame is so bolted to the body that it literally becomes a part thereof—a simplified, more rugged, and squeak-proof construction that reduces weight, eliminates rattles and lowers the center of gravity.

This unique Victory design provides roadability and riding ease as remarkable and unusual as Victory pick-up, power and flexibility.

There is just one way to find out how different and better Victory performance really is. Drive the car yourself!

"Good night, Billie," he said. "I expect maybe things will break all right for us."

She did not answer as he went out. Waddles balled him in friendly fashion as he passed through the cookhouse, then wiped his hands and stepped into Billie's quarters. Waddles was a fixture at the Three Bar; he had ridden for her father until he had his legs smashed up by a horse and had thereafter retained as cook. He was confidential adviser and self-appointed guardian of the girl. His mind was still pleasantly concerned with the stranger's warm praise of his culinary efforts.

"That new man now, Billie," he remarked. "He's away off ahead of the average run. You mark me—he'll be top hand with this outfit in no time at all." Then he observed the girl's expression. "What is it, Pet? He inquired. "What's afooting you?"

"Do you know who he is?" she asked.

Waddles wagged a negative head. "He's Calvin Harris," she stated. Instead of the blank dismay which she had expected to see depicted on Waddles Wagged a Negative Head.

Waddles' face at this announcement. It seemed to her that the big man was pleased.

"The h—ll!" he said. "Scuse me, Billie. So this here is Cal! Well, well—now what do you think of that?"

"I think that I don't want to stay here alone with him while you're out after the horses," she returned.

"Wrong idea!" the big man promptly contradicted. "You've got to stick it out for two years, girl. The best thing you can do is to get acquainted; and figure out how to get along the best you can—the pair of you. Old Cal Warren had some definite notion when he framed this plan; so it's likely this young Cal is on your side, too."

"But even more likely not," she stated. "Then what?"

"Why, then I'll have to kill him and put a stop to it," the big man announced. "But it's noways probable that it will come to that. Let's use logic. He spoke well of my cooking, which proves him a man of some discernment. No way to get around that. Now a man with his judgment wouldn't suspect for one living second that he could play it low-down on you with me roosting close at hand. Putting two plain facts together it works out right natural and simple that he's on the square. As easy as that," he stated. And in case he acts up, I'll clamp down on him real sudden," he added by way of further reassurance.

His great paw opened and shut to illustrate his point as he moved toward the door and the Three Bar girl knew that when Waddles spoke of clamping down it was no mere figure of speech.

CHAPTER III

Billie Warren heard the steady buzz of a saw and later the ringing strokes of an ax. The men had departed three hours before to be gone for a week on the horse round-up but she had not yet issued from her own quarters. The music of ax and saw was ample evidence that her new and undesired partner was making valuable use of his time. She went outside and he struck the ax in a cross section of pine log as she moved toward him.

"We'll have to get along the best we can," she announced abruptly. "Of course you will have a say in the management of the Three Bar and draw the same amount for yourself that I do."

He sat on a log and twisted a cigarette as he reflected upon this statement.

"I'd rather not do that," he decided.

"I don't want to be a drain on the brand—but to help build it up. Suppose I just serve as an extra hand and do whatever necessary turns up—in return for your letting me advise you on a few points that I happen to have worked out while I was prowling through the country."

"Any way you like," she returned. "It's for you to decide. Any money which you fall to draw now will revert to you in the end, so it won't matter in the least."

His reply was irrelevant, a deliberate refusal to notice her ungenerous misinterpretation of his offer.

"Do you mind if I gather a few Three Bar colls round here close and break out my own string before they get back?" he asked.

"Anything you like," she repeated. "I'm not going to quarrel. I've made up my mind to that. I'll be gone the rest of the day."

Five minutes later he saw her riding down the line. She was not seeking companionship but rather solitude and for hours she drifted aimlessly across the range, sometimes dismounting on some point that afforded a good view and reclining in the warm spring sun. Dark was falling when she rode back to the Three Bar. She heard the sound of saw and ax as Harris worked up the dry logs into stove lengths. At least he was making good his word to the cook. The sounds ceased when the sun was an hour high and when she looked out to determine the reason she saw him working with four colls in one of the smaller corrals.

He had fashioned a backmore for each and they stood tied to the corral bars. He left them there and repaired to the big gates of the main corral. The two swinging halves sagged until their ends dragged on the ground when opened or closed, necessitating the expenditure of considerable energy in performing either operation. She watched him tear down the old support wires and replace them with new ones, stretching a double strand from the top of the tall pivot post to the free ends of the gates. Placing a short stick between the two strands of heavy wire he twisted until the shortening process had cleared the gate ends and they swung suspended, moving so freely that a rider could lean from his saddle and throw them open with ease.

This completed to his satisfaction he fashioned heavy slabs of wood to serve as extra brake-blocks for the chuck wagon. Between the performance of each two self-appointed duties he spent some little time with the colls, handling them and teaching them not to fear his approach, clucking his saddle on first one and then the next, talking to them and handling their heads.

For three days there was little communication between the two. It was evident that he had no intention of forcing his society upon her. In the afternoon of the third day she saw him swing to the back of a big bay, easing into the saddle without a stir, and the colt ambled round the corral, rolling his eyes back toward the thing clamped upon him but making no effort to pitch. He dismounted and stripped off the saddle, clucked it on a second horse and let him stand, leading a third out to a sunbathing post near the door of the blacksmith shop where he proceeded to put on his first set of shoes.

The girl went out and sat on the sill of the shop door and watched him. The colt pulled back in an effort to release the forefoot that the man held clamped between his leather-clad knees, then changed his tactics and sagged his weight against "You, Babe!" the man ordered. "Don't you go leaning on me." He patted down the hoof and fitted the shoe but before nailing it on he released the colt's foot and addressed the girl. "If I'd light him now while he's spiky and half-scared it would spoil him maybe," he explained.

"I gentle-break him, too," she said, and the man overlooked the indication which, as plainly as words, was intended to convey the impression that his ways were effeminate. "If every man used up his time gentling his string he'd never have a day off to work at anything else."

"Why, it don't use up much time," he objected. "They half-way break themselves, standing round with a saddle on and having a man handle them a little between spells of regular work—like cutting firewood and such. And it's a saving of time in the end. There's three hundred odd days every year when a man consumes considerable time fighting every horse he steps upon—if they're broke that way to start."

"So your only reason for not riding them out is to save time," she said.

"If you mean that I'm thinkin' he observed, "Why, I don't know as I'd bother to dispute it." He moved over and sat on his heels facing her, twirling the ever handy cigarette. "Listen," he urged. "Let's you and I try to get along. Now if you'll only make up your mind that I'm not out to grab the Three Bar, not even the half of it that's supposed to be mine—unless you get paid for it—why, we're liable to get by liking each other real well in the end. I'll give you a contract to that effect."

"Which you know would be worthless," she returned. "The will speculatively states that any agreements between us prior to the time of dissolution are to be disregarded. A written contract would have no more value than your unsupported promises and in view of what's happened you don't expect me to place a value on that."

He pulled reflectively at his cigarette and she rather expected another of the irrelevant remarks with which he so often repaid to her pointed thrusts.

"No," he said at last. "But it's a fact that I don't want the Three Bar—or rather I do if you should ever decide to sell."

"I never will," she stated positively. "It's always been my home. I've been away and had a good time; three winters in school and enjoying every second; but there always comes a time when I'm sick to get back, when I know I can't stay away from the Three Bar, when I want to smell the sage and throw my leg across a horse—and ride."

"I know, Billie," he said softly. "I was raised here, up until I was eight. My feeling is likely less acute than yours but I've always hankered to get back to where the sage and pine trees run together. I mentioned a while back that I was tied up peculiar and stood to lose considerable if I failed to put in two years out here—which wouldn't have been of any particular consequence only that I found out that the Three Bar was going under unless some one put a stop to what's going on. I'll pull it out of the hole, maybe, and hand it back to you."

"You!" she flared. "And what can you do against it—a man that was raised in squatter country behind a barbed-wire fence, who has to gentle his horses before he can sit up on one, who has hitched a gun on his belt because he thinks it's the thing to do, and has stowed it in a place where he'd have to tie himself in a knot—or address—to reach it. And then you talk of pulling the Three Bar out of a hole! Why, there are twenty men within fifty miles of here that would kill you the first move you made."

"There's considerable sound truth in that," he said. He looked down at his gun; it swung on his left side in front, the butt pointing toward the right. "It's easier to work with it sort of out of the way of my hands," he explained and smiled.

She found herself liking him, even in the face of the treachery he had practiced against her father and was correspondingly angry, both with herself and at him. She left him without a word and returned to the house.

He listened putting the shoes on the colt and as he turned him back into the corral he observed a horseman jogging up the line at a trail trot. He knew the man for Slade, whose home ranch lay forty miles to the south and a little west, the owner of the largest outfit in that end of the state; a man feared by his competitors, quick to resent an insinuation against his business methods and capable of backing his resentment.

Slade dropped from his horse and accented Harris only a casual nod as he headed for the house. He walked through the cookhouse and opened the door of the girl's quarters without the formality of a knock, as if a frequent visitor and sure of his privileges.

"How many times have I told you to knock?" she demanded. "The next time you forget it I'll go out as you come in."

Slade dropped into a chair. "I never have knocked—not in twelve years," he said.

"It was somewhat different when I was a small girl and you were only a friend of my father," she pointed out. "But now—"

"But now that I've come to see you as a woman it's different," he inquired. "No reason for that."

She switched the channel of conversation and spoke of the coming round-up, of the poor condition of range winter; but it was a monologue. For a time the man sat and listened, as if he enjoyed the sound of her voice, contributing nothing to the conversation himself, then suddenly he stirred in his chair and waved a hand to indicate the unimportance of the topics.

"Yes, yee; true enough," he interrupted. "But I didn't come to talk about that. When are you coming home with me, Billie?"

"And you can't come if you insist on talking about that," she countered. "I'll come," he stated. "Tell me when you're going to move over to the Circle P."

"Not ever," she said. "I'd rather have a man's horse than his wife. Men treat women like little tinzel queens before, and afterward they answer to save a cook's wages and drudge their lives out feeding a bunch of half-starved hands—or else go to the other extreme. Wives are either work horses or pets. I was raised like a boy and I want to have a say in running things myself."

Slade rose and moved over to her, taking her hands and lifting her from her chair.

The girl pushed him back with a hand braced against his chest.

Football News

The game at Manelona, Saturday, October 13, started off with a seventy-yard run to the credit of "Dick" Marshall, but no touchdown was made. That didn't last however, for Manelona made their first touchdown during the first quarter. Toward the end of the quarter Bill Novak took David Coulter's place. Thus the first quarter ended.

Nothing of any importance happened during the second and third quarters except a few minor accidents and the paying of a few penalties.

During the fourth quarter "Dick" had an accident and was rushed to the doctor's office. Oscar Stroud took his place. After "Dick" was taken out we saw that Bill Novak could really play football. He made several good runs, punts and passes. The last minute of the game Manelona made another touchdown, but like the first, it only counted 6, thus making the score 12-0 in Manelona's favor.

English Department

By all the rules of addition, subtraction, multiplication and division, one month of school has passed away; and Mrs. McKinley's English classes are gradually recovering from the shock of monthly examinations which occur at the end of the four weeks constituting a school month. In fact the freshmen who have often heard the expression, "Ignorance is bliss," have come to the conclusion that the wise person who uttered those words, certainly was not thinking of examinations. Also the sophomores who had conceived the idea that they had everything to forget and nothing to learn have discovered much to their surprise it will be necessary for them to study while rushing to class. As for the juniors, they are fast realizing that they escaped the clutches of grammar only to fall into the lair of American literature and regard it as jumping from the "frying pan into the fire."

However, I believe that after a few months of school have passed the English students will regard a monthly examination as a mere written lesson, which is not worth the effort of reviewing.

In spite of the dreaded week of monthly tests, things are not as humdrum as they might seem. Recently, while slumbering peacefully in English 3 class, I was startled by the question, "Who was Increase Mather?" Instantly twenty hands were raised and waved frantically in the air, and being called upon, one person replied: "His father." Still another eager student said: "His son." All hands were now motionless and the students looked puzzled. Suddenly the hand of one student was raised, while a look far surpassing that of ordinary intelligence passed over her face. "Mary," said Mrs. McKinley, and the answer came quickly: "He was both." Increase Mather was truly a wonderful man.

New Spartan Barley Available
The latest variety of barley developed by the Michigan State College during the last two years is now available to Charlevoix county farmers and will gradually replace the other varieties commonly raised as they become more familiar with its many advantages.

Spartan barley was placed in many counties this year in small amounts and placed in the hands of hand selected farmers for the purpose of comparing its yield with other varieties and to have a supply for local farmers to obtain to better their own seed.

Jay Adams of Charlevoix, is our first farmer to secure this new variety and on a very small acreage threshed something like 70 bushels which has been registered by the Michigan Crop Improvement Association and can be eligible for re-inspection, or in other words sold as certified seed by new growers.

Spartan barley is Michigan's outstanding barley, excelling by reason of its smooth high productivity, early maturity, stiff straw and adaptation to a wide variety of soil types.

There is no reason in the world why this should not be used locally either as a foundation stock for improved seed or as a means for improving your own commercial crop by securing a small quantity for next year, and used as seed plot.

If interested speak early and place your order with either Mr. Adams of Charlevoix or your local County Agent at Boyne City.

Nutrition Project For Ladies Starts With Bang

The first meeting for leaders carrying on the nutrition project, available through the County Extension Service was held in Boyne City, last Wednesday, October 10th, with a splendid attendance and much pep. At this early date at least eleven the county were represented with leaders as well as several visitors, who are receiving the instruction from Miss Muriel Dundas, nutrition specialist of M. S. C. and then similar meetings in their respective communities and giving the instruction to their friends and neighbors.

The first meeting was devoted to organization matters in the forenoon and to giving the first lesson on table etiquette and table manners in the afternoon. With a subject of such vital interest to every lady, it is any wonder that some 100 and more ladies have already enrolled in the work and are anxious to get the three other meetings yet to be held. The greatest wonder is why are not more communities represented.

Owing to the fact many changes will no doubt take place before the next meeting a complete list of leaders and communities represented will not be given until a later date.

However, we cordially invite communities that are interested but not as yet organized to get in touch with the County Agent at Boyne City and assistance will be only too gladly

Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles

The modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in.

Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free Inspection Service at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A check-up by experienced mechanics, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

The new Buick is the new Style

Men and women on every street--
--in every city and town--are pronouncing the new BUICK with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day--

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick with new Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher!

Sweeping into the market at a time when motor car lines were practically standardized--when imitation was destroying individuality--these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode--

A mode of body-symmetry--of size and magnificence--of soft contours instead of straight lines--of embossed side and hood panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car in the world!

And as the weeks have passed--and the full significance of Buick's achievement has become apparent to the public--enthusiasm for this car has swelled and grown to unprecedented proportions!

Buick sales records have been broken! Production schedules have been increased again and again! The great Buick plants are working to the limit of their capacity to supply the demand.

To the Voters of the 29th Senatorial District

In presenting to me the Democratic nomination for State Senator--my well-meaning friends may have overestimated my qualifications for this honor. However, the implied compliment is appreciated.

To the voters whom it may not be my pleasure to meet personally, I take this method of presenting myself and assure them their support is cordially welcomed.

Native of Indiana--but, since 1888 a resident of Michigan, and for 27 years directly interested in developing Northern Michigan's agricultural resources, the writer should be fairly qualified to sense the problems of Northern Michigan and the importance of all measures affecting its welfare.

Locally, conditions are too serious to ignore. Improved farms are unsalable at any price. Wild agricultural areas are slipping back to the State as a result of exorbitant taxes, menacing the existence of many rural schools. As a result of hidden property escaping taxes, the property that cannot be hidden from the assessor is compelled to pay practically a double tax. Many progressive states levy no property tax. Michigan must get in line. If elected, the writer will support all reasonable measures to this end.

Quoting our candidate for governor, William A. Comstock, a gentleman of recognized ability, integrity and public spirit: "The property tax is unfair. Property should be used for local taxation only, and the state find other means of raising money." If elected, Mr. Comstock promises to do all in his power to remedy this situation, and to effect other reforms.

Born in Alpena and having resided there forty years, the citizens of Northern Michigan recognize in me a man who does not desire the governorship to the extent that he is willing to feel the voters with false promises of reform. He is entitled to the loyal support of every voter interested in tax relief.

In Alfred E. Smith for President, the Democratic party presents a candidate whose interest in the common people ranks with Jefferson, Lincoln and Wilson.

He was never known to trail with the hounds and run with the hare to fool the voters, nor was he ever known to betray his constituents or conceal his intentions with weasel words.

In describing the Democratic party's candidate for President the writer has taken the liberty to quote Clem Shaver.

ruptcy, while favored industries remain prosperous.

If it is regarded as necessary to sacrifice agriculture, "that guardian of the people's liberty," in order to make other industries more prosperous, which in effect is the policy of the Republican party, there is but one hope for the farmer, the merchant living off the farmer, and the laboring man--and that is a Democratic Administration.

If there is any class of voters that have been hounded, beautifully by their self-anointed leaders, if there is any class of voters that are entitled to grateful remembrance by the Republican party, even to the extent of sharing the profits of privileged beneficiaries, though it be tariff fed, bounty fed or subsidy fed, for supplying the necessary votes to elect all of its presidents, it is the miracle-minded farmers now compelled to rob the fertility of their farms to pay taxes and mortgages.

Governor Smith promises that, if elected, he will name a non-partisan commission of farm leaders and students of agriculture without waiting to take the oath as President, to work out the details of the principle of the equalization fee, and he pledges himself "that no stone will be left unturned" to give immediate and adequate farm relief by legislation carrying into practice this definite principle for which his party stands and for which he stands.

Quoting Governor Smith further, "As I read the McNary-Haugen bill, the fundamental purpose is to establish an effective control of the sale of exportable surplus with the cost imposed upon the commodity benefited. For that principle I squarely stand." Mr. Hoover stands squarely opposed to this principle by which the farmer could get the benefit of the tariff.

Governor Smith, in a direct way, does not claim to be familiar with farming, nor is it necessary for him to comprehend that the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar is impaired by adverse legislation, which requires him to sell in a cheap market and buy in a dear market.

Compelled to sell in the home market his major grain crops at prices established in the world market at Liverpool, while the various interests that supply his wants from cradle to grave remain shielded from world competition, by a high tariff wall, which he can never scale, as long as the Republican party's one-sided protection policy prevails, the farmer is the victim of exploitation. In a practical way, Woodrow Wilson was no more familiar with banking--by direct association--than Governor Smith was with farming. Nevertheless, he was able to cope successfully with a panic-breeding currency problem that embarrassed the best minds of the Republican party, from the civil war down to the Wilson administration.

In Herbert Hoover's message of acceptance ascribing industrial activity the last eight years to Republican administration and purposely ignoring the most important contributing factor responsible for our industrial activity during this period, and for years to come, regardless of either party, and to which Europe at the present time owes its comeback--"our sound, elastic, panic-proof currency system"--made possible only by a Democratic war president, restoring to government its sacred function of controlling the circulating medium, the very life blood of a nation of free people, and be it understood, opposed to the last ditch by a Republican Senate--we have here Hoover revealed in his message, a hard boiled partisan who assumes that the average voter will swallow anything, but what can one expect from a political party that habitually claims all and concedes nothing?

Without the Wilson Federal Reserve Act, in which control of the circulating medium was wrested from the banking power and restored to the government, America could not have financed a world war. It could not have stabilized European credit. It could not have prevented panics and soup houses at home, and could not have permitted industrial activity in the Harding and Coolidge regime, during which period farm values declined 20 billion dollars.

Agriculture, constantly harassed by droughts, frosts, floods and bugs, can not enjoy prosperity exposed to world competition.

It is the one important industry that can not, like the manufacturers, retailers, organized labor and other professions, pass on their products to the consumer on a cost-plus profit basis.

It is the one important industry that must depend upon crop failures abroad, for its occasional ray of sunshine, as long as tariff barons control the Republican party.

If there is one industry that is entitled to equal protection from a paternalistic government--for that government's protection against panics and all that peasantry implies--it is agriculture.

The writer is not an economist, nor the son of an economist, and does not believe in the feudalistic idea that all material blessings seep down from the top structures of society to the hand that tills the soil or sows the seed, but has always labored under the impression that "Capital is the fruit of labor," that capital is the son, not the daddy, that unless agriculture is first profitable other industries must naturally languish.

The writer does not agree with the suggestion of farm experts that one million inefficient farmers in America should leave the farm for the city, where they would be better off.

Bartering their home and muscle for an existence in the city, where machine production is so rapidly displacing human labor, and powerful chain stores eliminating individual enterprise, to release more job-hunters, is not a solution of the farm problem.

Let factory lights dim for a prolonged period, how empty stomachs crowding the bread line will cry out: "Oh, merciful God, lend us to a turnip field."

A permanent home, which from within, yields to the whole family food, shelter, raiment and numerous other comforts, is the very foundation for a stable government, and security of a free people.

No matter what relief Mr. Hoover or promises to the farmers for their votes, this fact must not be overlooked. He is pledged to carry out Harding and Coolidge policies, which never contemplated, regardless of statements to the contrary, that agriculture should share equal protective privileges with the manufacturer.

Quoting Henry A. Wallace, editor of a farm magazine--and the son of the late secretary of agriculture, Henry C. Wallace, Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee, stood for "all that was good for an industrial nation," but no matter how much he would like to do for agriculture, there are men about him who will not permit him to give a share of industrial benefit to agriculture.

Film Actors Just Escape Dangers of Bursting Dam

Only bad weather prevented Tim McCoy and his Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company from being in the path of the devastating flood which swept through San Francisco Valley while "Beyond the Sierras," which comes Tuesday to the Palace theatre, was being made.

Two days before the great dam burst and claimed many lives in the onrush of raging torrents, the McCoy company, under direction of Nick Grinde, left their location in the canyon because of poor weather.

In the new McCoy action picture the charm and beauty of the valley before the flood laid waste the fertile land will be seen, virtually all of the outdoor scenes having been filmed there.

Everyone will admit that there is no more positive proof than "What Price Glory." As a stage play it was a sensation. Now comes along this most powerful and searching of all agencies that reflect and recreate the motion picture, and the sensation takes on all the widespread and interest arousing energy of furor.

This is exactly what has happened to William Fox's screen presentation of this elaborate play, which comes to Palace theatre for Saturday and Sunday.

Three projects were allowed with the provision that work must start at once and be completed as soon as possible. W. C. T. U. NOTES

The following officers were elected at the Woman's Christian Temperance Union meeting last Friday to serve for the year 1929, viz:

President, Mrs. Mary Rife.

Vice President, Mrs. Mary E. Burns.

Cor. Sec'y, Mrs. Ella Usher.

Rec. Sec'y, Mrs. Alice Gornell.

Treasurer, Mrs. Lyda Benton.

From all over the country comes the prediction that the women of the nation are going to decide the present election. The members of the Union are particularly interested in the campaign because the Democratic candidate went back on the dry plank in his party platform and declared in no uncertain terms that he favors a change in the Volstead act permitting each state to fix its own standard of alcoholic content.

He also favors amending the Eighteenth Amendment so that each state can have prohibition or not as it desires. He also favors the states that want it going into the liquor business as Canada has done.

Of course the president has not the power to bring these things about but his attitude has made the coming election virtually a prohibition referendum. The W. C. T. U. is nonpartisan but we are turning all our support to Mr. Hoover because he favors the amendment and its enforcement. And we believe that with his record for solving big problems he will suggest wise enforcement measures which will change the whole aspect of things.

A change in party administration would mean a new cabinet and all probability an entirely new prohibition bureau. The president appoints in all 40,000 government officials and of course these will be from the ranks of his own supporters.

And so the members of the Union are helping to enroll the women of the community in the Hoover-Green Club; they are circulating campaign literature; they are sponsoring the ringing of the church bells on Nov. 6th to remind the people of their civic duty; they will observe the day of prayer set by the national officers and will work in every way to elect the man they believe to be best fitted for the office of president because of his administrative ability which is combined with his interest in prohibition enforcement and many other good causes included in the plan of work of the Union.

MIGHTY THEME AND GREAT MORAL LESSON

"The Road to Ruin" on Palace Screen October 24-25

There was once an idea prevalent that only simple minded or weak willed girls became delinquent but the fallacy of this idea is now quite generally recognized. In fact the morons, white slavers, "Good Time Charlies" and "foxes" do not trouble with unattractive girls. The more beautiful and spirited, the more desirable and worth while a girl may be, the more eagerly she is possessed.

And the brightest girls are often the ones who seek most eagerly to probe the mysteries of life.

The sad finish that often overtakes these gay little adventures, who pit their puny strength against the mighty forces of life, is the theme of "The Road to Ruin" which will be shown at Palace theatre, Wednesday and Thursday.

This picture which is intended for adult consumption, is a very forcible dramatization of an actual case of Juvenile Delinquency and is startling frank in its handling of a very delicate question. Helen Foster, an exquisite little blonde renders a remarkable characterization as the school girl who goes astray, while the work of Virginia Royce and Grant Withers is also noteworthy. Others in the cast are: Tommy Carr, Florence Turner, Charles Miller, Al Rader and Ed Dunn.

Fine Display Shown From Ed. James Farm Near Barnard

That Charlevoix county must be taken into consideration as potato producing country is evidenced by the display of tubers in the window of Stanley Brothers' hardware this week.

The output of one hill, brought in by Charles Hyers from the Ed. James farm, near Barnard, was 16 potatoes weighing of total of 11 1/4 pounds. The other display, dug from the same field by Jos. Gornell, contained 17 spuds weighing 8 pounds.

We note by a report in the magazine Roads and Pavements that the state auto ferries added $27.00 to the state exchequer last week, carrying 48 passengers, two cows, and four horses between Mackinaw City and St. Ignace and Mackinac Island. That looks as though business was perk'ing up tolerably well, and maybe 'fore long the state will be justified in making Mackinac Island a regular port of call by the auto ferries by heck.—Cheboygan Observer.

C. H. S. AGAIN IN DEBATE LEAGUE

CHARLEVOIX GETTING READY FOR OPENING ENCOUNTER

Four Schools Are to Be Given Special Gifts by University of Michigan at End of Race

Charlevoix high school has become a member of the Michigan High School Debating League this year and will compete for the interscholastic debate championship of the state, according to an announcement by Professor G. E. Densmore of the University of Michigan, Manager of the League.

The first step in the forensic race for state honors will be taken on November 16 when the local high school debating team, coached by O. P. North of the high school faculty, will meet one of the neighboring schools, to be announced later by the university, in a debate on the subject: "Resolved, that a Federal Subsidy for the development of an American Merchant Marine Would be a Wise National Policy."

Three other state-wide debates on December 7, January 11, and January 25, will constitute the four preliminary debates in which all schools will participate in order to compete for entrance in the elimination series of debates which begin on February 15.

Sixty Four Stay In
Only the sixty-four schools with the highest percentage of victories will be entered in his elimination series and each of these sixty-four schools will receive the University of Michigan Wall Plaque Trophy through the co-operation of The Detroit Free Press. This trophy is in the shape of a shield, the design of which taken from the well-known University of Michigan shield. Its base is of American walnut, 17 inches in height and 15 inches across the top, and the medallion, superimposed upon the shield, is 9 inches in diameter, three-eighths of an inch thick, and is cast in solid bronze with all lettering artistically embossed.

While the elimination series, beginning on February 15, is in progress the sixty-four schools will debate among themselves with the defeated schools dropping out after each debate until only two undefeated schools remain. These two schools will be taken to Ann Arbor at the expense of the university, for the state championship debate, on April 26. Each of the six debaters participating in this final debate will be presented with a gold watch by The Detroit Free Press and both schools will receive a large bronze trophy cup, one engraved First Honors, the other engraved Second Honors, presented by the University of Michigan Extension division.

This year for the first time the University of Michigan Extension Division will recognize the success attained by the two semi-final schools by presenting each with a bronze trophy cup properly engraved.

Want 244 Schools
A large number of high schools from all parts of the state have already joined the league, and it is expected that by October 20, the date when the league enrollment close, the membership for the year will surpass last year's record membership of 244 schools.

Any four-year high school in the state may become a member of the Michigan High School Debating League by applying for membership to Professor G. E. Densmore, Manager, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

The Michigan High School Debating League, the largest forensic organization of its kind in the United States, was organized by the Board of Regents of the University of Michigan, in 1917 with a membership of sixty-four schools which has steadily grown to the membership of 244 schools of last year. With this largest enrollment in the history of the league, 1200 high school debaters participating in 600 debates which were heard by 125,000 people of the state. The final State Championship Debate last year, held in Hill Auditorium in Ann Arbor, where Royal Oak school defeated Zeeland high school, was attended by 40,000 people, which is the largest audience ever to attend a debate in this state.

The Lady Macabees will give a Halloween party at the E. O. O. K. hall, Tuesday evening, October 30. Cards and lunch. Admission 25c. Adv. 431t.

STATE PARK MATTER IS UP AGAIN

STATE PARK SUPT. HOFFMASTER SURVEYED PROPERTY

Expressed Satisfaction of Site's Adaptability for Purpose—Further Sanction Still Necessary

The proposition of converting into a state park 400 acres of state-owned property on the Lake Michigan beach 4 miles south of Charlevoix received the personal recommendation Tuesday of R. H. Hoffmaster, superintendent of state parks, who, with P. Vogelsang, member of the recreational division of the state highway department, and L. S. See and F. E. Cartier, members of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, made a survey of the site.

The matter has been urged by the Charlevoix chamber of commerce and other local civic organizations for several years, but not until Tuesday had any definite action been taken by the state on the project.

Mr. Hoffmaster expressed his complete satisfaction in regards to the property's adaptability for park purposes. The land has 1 1/2 miles frontage on Lake Michigan with excellent sandy beach and is greatly enhanced by McGeagh Creek, which runs through the 400-acre piece into Lake Michigan.

Charlevoix business men, meeting Tuesday evening with the state park superintendent at the Hotel Charlevoix, heard his opinions on the matter, and gave assurance that a road connecting U. S. 31 would be built into the property if accepted by the state administrative board and the conservation department for park purposes. A county road extending to within a short distance of the proposed park, has been abandoned at the request of the Newaygo Portland Cement company, inasmuch as the highway intersected the site for their new cement plant to be built early next spring. However, a township road leading to Lake Michigan near the state property will be improved and extended, and may eventually be built along Lake Michigan to Norwood, a distance of 12 miles.

Sensing the value of a state park near Charlevoix on Lake Michigan as a tourist attraction, local business men are leaving no stones unturned in their efforts to bring the project to a successful conclusion. An improved highway from Charlevoix to Norwood along the lake would throw open thousands of acres of desirable land for real estate development, and those more optimistically inclined foresee a new era in resort expansion if present plans materialize.

SMALL GAME SEASON IN MICHIGAN OPENS

Rabbits About the Only Game Abundant in Local Cover

The big date on the calendar of Michigan gunners arrived today with the opening of the hunting season on upland game.

With the Michigan law giving but one week of sport on pheasants, squirrel and woodcock, and with this game very scarce in northern Michigan game cover, the prospects look none to bright for local hunters.

Rabbits open Thursday as well, but they may be shot until January 31 except the snowshoes which may be hunted to February 1. In the upper peninsula the season on rabbits is already open.

The law covering the rabbit allows but five to be taken in one day and the hunter must not have more than five in possession. There is no open season on partridge this year and a limit of 15 squirrels may be taken with the number in one day 5.

FARM WOMAN BADLY BITTEN BY COON

Mrs. George Kipp, living on the Mrs. Peter Hultz farm in Benton had a distressing and unusual experience the other day. She was in the woodshed of her home when she discovered a large coon behind a vinegar barrel. She attacked the animal and as a result was badly bitten, the four large teeth of the coon penetrated the calves of both her legs. Her husband heard her cries and jerked the coon away by the tail and the animal got away. Dr. Moyer was called to dress the injuries and said the bites were no vicious looking as anything he had ever treated.

LAKE SUPERIOR REMAINS TOO HIGH

Docks and Basements at Duluth Are Entirely Flooded

The report comes from the American Sault that billions of gallons of water were pouring from Lake Superior into the lower Great Lakes in an effort by the Canadian and American government engineers to lower the level of the upper lake approximately three feet.

Many beaches on Lake Superior have disappeared altogether since 1926, because of the high water, and in Duluth and some other towns, basements are reported flooded and docks under water.

All sixteen gates of the International Compensation Dam at the head of St. Mary's rapids were opened last week, after a month's run of twelve gates had failed to appreciably reduce the high water.

Engineers said that dams of the Sault Electrical companies may be ordered opened also if desired results are not obtained.

And a couple of years ago the government placed restriction on the amount of water allowed to run over the dams, and we were up in arms locally over the low lake level. Conditions certainly do change.

This country has brain power enough to secure good government, but it needs more leg power to enable people to walk to the polls and vote.

In all the world - - No Other Car Like This

A New and Larger Victory Six by DODGE BROTHERS

Until you have seen, experienced and passed upon Victory smartness and performance, you can't possibly realize what a great car the new Victory Six is—and why the world is so emphatically sold on its amazing value.

NEW AND EXCLUSIVE Victory Six construction sets the highest standard yet known for riding ease and roadability.

BODY AND CHASSIS are mutually designed for each other. The body is bolted directly to the chassis frame, replacing the usual body sills and eliminating body overhang.

RECENT AND VITAL improvements have been announced including still greater roominess and luxury, wider doors and windows, greater vision areas, more generous leg room and still richer interior appointments.

BRILLIANT Victory Six performance is unparalleled for quick pick-up, instant acceleration, speed and flexibility.

Three Great Driving Advantages of Exclusive Victory Construction

Lowering the center of gravity brings the weight of body and passengers nearer the ground. You feel that you are riding IN the car and not ON it. The Victory grips the road more firmly, and is safer and easier to handle on sharp curves.

Victory riding ease on all kinds of roads is nothing less than marvelous. The strength and rigidity of Victory coachwork contributes to the enjoyment of passengers by eliminating squeaks and rattles.

The perfection of Victory balance benefits all phases of performance. Steering is amazingly easy, acceleration is faster and smoother, and hydraulic four-wheel braking is extraordinarily efficient.

"Stop it!" she said. "You're getting wilder every time you come, but you've never pawed at me before. I won't have people's hands on me," and she made a grimace of distaste.

The man reached out again and drew her to him. She wrenched away and faced Slade.

"That will be the last time you'll do that until I give the word," she said. "I don't want the Circle P—or you. When I do I'll let you know."

He moved toward her again and she refused to back away from him but stood with her hands at his sides.

"If you put a finger on me it's the last time you'll visit the Three Bar," she calmly announced.

He stood so close as almost to touch her but she failed to flinch a hand or move back an inch, and Slade knew that he had found one who could match his own.

He had found one who did not fear him. He had found one who was not a woman to be trifled with. He had found one who was not a woman to be trifled with.

"You can prove it," she said at last. "Prove it by going away for six months—or three!"

He shook his head.

"Not that," he said. "I've told you I was sewed up to a right peculiar way myself—which wouldn't matter a d—n if it wasn't for this. I'd have tossed it out in a second if the girl on the Three Bar had turned out to be any other than you. Now I'm going to see it through. The Three Bar is going under, the brand book one folks helped to found unless some one pulls it out of the hole. Believe me if you can and if you can't—why, you know that one remark about my being unbalanced here will clear the road for you, like I mentioned a few minutes back."

He turned away without touching her and she had not moved when the door closed behind him.

An hour past noon on the following day a drove of horses appeared in the lower extremity of the valley and swept on toward the ranch. As Harris threw open the gates of the big corral he saw her standing in the door of the farmhouse watching the oncoming drive. Riders flanked the bunch well out to each side to steady it. There was a row of heads and a stilling cloud of dust as three hundred half-wild horses clattered past and crowded through the gates, scattering swiftly across the pasture lot back of the corral. A dozen sweat-soaked riders swung from their saddles. There was no chance to distinguish color or kind among them through the dust which covered every face.

One man remained on his mount and followed the horses into the pasture lot, cutting out fifty or more and leading them back into the corral; for Waddles had decided that they could have the rest of the afternoon off for a hunt to Bill's store and they waited only to change mounts before the start.

Slade stood looking after the drive of the smaller ones and Harris moved away at once, intending to follow over with the rest of the men.

"The horse said for you to ride him," Harris called to Harris as he passed the group at the apex of the corral. "His name is Blue, and he's a fine horse."

The man looked up in surprise. The horse had not been in the house to receive him, but he had been told that the horse was a fine one as to the other man.

Harris stood looking at him, then shook his head.

"You've got to ride him," Harris said. "He's a fine horse, and he's a fine horse."

A rainy blue rain swept past with the life of a storm. At once Harris was on his feet, and he was on his feet.

Charlevoix Public School Notes

General News

A few changes have been made in the assembly room during the vacation over Thursday and Friday. The double seats have been removed and placed in single aisles. Perhaps this will help keep order in the assembly(?)

A few repairs were made downstairs also. The work on the typing room will soon be completed.

Senior Class

The senior Halloween dance will not be given because of certain confusions. They are, however, looking forward to Thanksgiving as a suitable time for one.

The play committee is very busy reading plays and trying to decide on four of the best ones to be voted on by the class. We hope to make our play much better than the one of last year.

Football News

Charlevoix lost another game last Saturday to St. Ignace. The game was played on the latter's field, which was terribly muddy. Dick Marshall was unable to play. Bill Novak was hurt, and altogether it was a bad day for the team.

This Saturday the squad go to Kalkaska to play. We hope they will have better luck this time than they had in most of the past games. The majority of the high school students have been unable to attend most of the outside games, but this coming game will no doubt draw a crowd of students to Kalkaska to root for the team and show them they are back of the Red and White to the last.

Humor Department

Mr. Coleman in English III class: "I would like you students to write a poem for Monday. Even if it is not more than:

Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Horse's neck,

"And so do you."

Junior High School

The seventh grade gave a party last Wednesday evening at the gym. They spent the evening playing games and all enjoyed it very much. The Michigan state library sent a large assortment of books to our junior high school library and we are all enjoying them.

The attendance in our two grades is very good and we hope we can keep it up.

The eighth grade are planning to have a Halloween party soon.

The girls from the junior high school who are selling lecture course tickets, are doing very well.

Soon we are going to have a "pep" meeting and select some junior high school songs and yells.

Every Wednesday morning our junior high school orchestra plays and we have singing.

County Normal Notes

We all enjoy the new victrola purchased recently for the county normal very much.

The county normal class attended court session Tuesday. We wish to thank Judge Gilbert and his attendants for the courtesy shown us.

The grades in the training room will give a short program October 31, commemorating the important days, also Halloween, which occurs during the month.

LECTURE SERIES TO OPEN FRIDAY

PRIVATE PEAT APPEARS HERE EVENING OF NOV. 2

Tells Story of Experiences in World War With Force That Sweeps Audiences

Private Harold R. Peat, who speaks here next Friday evening on "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," has visualized the drama of the World War as few other soldiers have done. He has a phenomenal gift for making his experiences live for others. He "gets over" to his public his own flaming impressions of war gained from actual experiences, and the experiences of others which he has seen with his own eyes.

When the war ended, its tragedy was too fresh to bear recounting. The world wanted to forget. Now, ten years later, the true story of the war can be told. The tide of public interest has swung back to the days of the Great War. People everywhere demand to know what really happened.

In response to this demand the market is being flooded with novels, motion pictures and plays dealing with the war. Some of them are accurate and finely done, many are pure fiction.

Private Peat is a soldier who can speak with authority upon this vital subject. One of the first Canadian volunteers, he was plunged into the hell of the Western Front when only a lad. He knows war—its mud and blood and filth, its thrilling adventures and sublime heroisms.

He tells his story simply, clearly, but with a dynamic vitality that sweeps through his audience like an electric thrill.

"The greatest story of the war" is the verdict passed by the metropolitan press upon this remarkable lecture.

NORTHERN OFFICERS GET TRAPPING LAW VIOLATOR

Conservation Officer Weber and Sargeant Aldrich of the State Police were out in the vicinity of Long Lake last week upon a couple of occasions looking for some trappers and were rewarded by finding Fred Dixon, a farmer living near the boat skimming a rat. He dropped the rat over the side of the boat when he discovered he had company, but the rat wouldn't sink and the officers took him charge. He lead the men to his home where they found 23 more hides which they confiscated along with his gun, traps and trapping equipment and advised him to appear before Judge Pew next morning, which he did, pleading guilty and was fined $30 and costs which he paid.—Cheboygan Tribune.

DRIVE DEER INTO HEAVY PROTECTION

Consider Use of Dogs To Force Deer Into Swamps

It is said that conservation officers are seriously considering a plan to prevent a repetition of a condition that has existed in certain parts of the Upper Peninsula during the winter months.

For a number of years back, during the period of heavy snow, it has been found that deer inhabiting lands that had been lumbered over became trapped in these areas and faced starvation. The suggestion has been made that immediately following the close of the deer hunting season on November 30 that conservation officers make an attempt to drive the deer from areas of this nature into swamp covers.

This could be accompanied through the use of dogs. One hound with a good lusty voice will drive every deer to cover within a radius of several miles. With these dogs under control of the wardens there is little danger that deer would suffer any ill effects from the drive and it would place them in areas where danger from starvation would be practically eliminated.—Cheboygan Tribune.

"Doctrine of Atonement" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, October 21.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." (Romans 5:10.)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The atonement is a hard problem in theology, but its scientific explanation is, that suffering is an error of sinful sense which Truth destroys, and that eventually both sin and suffering will fall at the feet of everlasting love." (p. 23.)

The Baptist ladies will hold a Rummage Sale at the Holly Kay Shop on Saturday, October 27.—Adv. 43-11.

McGEAGH SCHOOL
Edith Krafka visited school Tuesday afternoon.

The fifth grade are now having fractions in arithmetic.

The second grade are learning, "The New Moon," for language.

We didn't have school last Friday on account of the institute at Cadillac.

The boys have enjoyed making giggly ghosts and felix cats for decorations.

We are planning on organizing a Sewing and Handicraft Club, shortly after Halloween.

The sixth and seventh grades have just finished the study of the Revolutionary War for history.

We are planning on having a party on Wednesday of next week. If the weather proves favorable we will enjoy a ramble through the woods after lunch.

Don't forget the date of the program which is to be given Tuesday, October 30, at eight o'clock. After the program we will serve squashed apples and witches' fingers free. The witch will be here with her magic brew and also four little fairies who will gladly tell your fortunes.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Let's Keep This Advantage For Michigan

United States Senator A. H. Vandenberg

Senator Vandenberg is the Republican candidate to succeed himself. He has a powerful place in Washington which Michigan cannot afford to lose. Vice President Dawes says he knows no Senator "who has started so auspiciously or who gives such promise of statesmanship" as Vandenberg. He has important committee places which can be reached only by the "seniority" which he now enjoys. He has demonstrated that he is a dependable friend to Agriculture and to Labor and to Industry. He is Michigan's prime reliance in the fight for the St. Lawrence Waterway which means so much to our state. He is a man of unchallenged moral character and ideas and honor and integrity. He is one of the leading Constitutional Authorities in the United States. Michigan cannot afford to lose this advantage. Think of your own welfare when you vote for U. S. Senator. If you do, you will unhesitatingly vote for Vandenberg. (You have to vote for him TWICE—Long and Short Terms—because one follows the other.)

Charles Delany Advancing Day by Day in Movies

Charles Delany, who plays the juvenile part in "The Young Day," Charles Delany's latest starring vehicle for East National pictures, which comes to the Palace theatre, on Tuesday and Wednesday, was one of the most popular leading men on the legitimate stage before turning to the screen for fame and fortune.

Ruth Elder Embarks on Screen Career Opposite Richard Dix

Ruth Elder, the plucky aviatrix who with Capt. George Handman braved the Atlantic in a futile attempt to span the ocean by air in the plane, "The American Girl," in the fall of 1927, and who was rescued at sea after her plane had failed, makes her motion picture debut at the Palace theatre playing opposite Richard Dix in "Moran of the Marines." The picture opens Saturday for a two day engagement.

Miss Elder has proved herself a capable actress, according to film critics who have witnessed her performance on the screen in the new Paramount picture with the ever popular Dix. Frankly skeptical of her histrionic ability when the announcement was made that she was to make her motion picture debut, these same critics were the first to hail the famed aviatrix with her first appearance on the screen in a featured dramatic role.

METHODIST CHURCH
John E. Lockyer, Minister

The pastor will begin a series on "The Beatitudes" at the 10:30 service on Sunday next. The first one having been previously preached we shall turn to "A Treasure in Tears."

are always included in this service. The church school meets at noon each Lord's day. We would like to be helped with you in religious education of your children.

Epworth League is at 6:30 with a topic on "Platforms, Parties and Personalities."

At 7:30 the pastor will speak on "Politics and Religion." The Methodist church is receiving much publicity today for its stand on the questions now before the public, much of it is adverse criticism, so it is important for the public to know just what is the position of the church amid the controversy.

The L. and S. club meets Thursday with Mrs. Fred Trimble on West Garfield.

It is important that large numbers of our people attend the convention at Petoskey under the auspices of the State Council of Religious Education.

The Home Guards will meet Tuesday afternoon.

NEW CABLE LINE ACROSS STRAITS

LAYING OF LINE INVOLVES UNUSUAL DIFFICULTIES

Construction Crews Already on the Job—Cost of Job Will Approach $75,000

One of the most important and difficult telephone engineering feats of a decade in Michigan, the laying of another submarine telephone cable across the junction of Lake Michigan and Lake Huron, at the Straits of Mackinac, was started Saturday, October 20, by engineers and plant crews of the Michigan Bell Telephone company.

Nearly four miles of especially made, heavily armored cable, weighing 238 tons, or 476,000 pounds, will be sliced and dropped into place on that date, connecting the two peninsulas of the state, according to J. J. Foley, of Menominee, commercial superintendent of the telephone company in Northern Michigan.

The project is one that involves unusual engineering and construction difficulties, because of the nature of the floor of the straits, the great depth of the water at various points and the possibility of severe storms, interfering with the work. Construction crews are on the job at St. Ignace, where the preliminary work is being done preparatory to the laying of the cable.

The cable will cross the straits from points approximately two miles west of St. Ignace and Mackinaw City, and will be 19,400 feet in length. It will be laid from the northern shore, where it now is being loaded onto the cable boat. The cost of the job will approach $75,000, Mr. Foley says.

Two earlier cables are in service at this point, one of which was laid in 1899 and the other in 1918. The latter was expected to care for the telephone traffic between the peninsulas for approximately fifteen years. However, following the breaking up of heavy ice in the straits in the spring of 1927, it was found that several circuits in the cable were out of order. Investigation showed that the cable had been severely damaged by ice packs and it was necessary to raise more than a mile of it to make repairs. Similar trouble developed again last spring, thus making the life of the cable uncertain, and the placing of a new and larger one was decided upon.

* THE POLITICAL PARADE *
* By Harry R. Blackmon *

Immigration can't be an issue in this campaign, say Democratic leaders, because both candidates are equally firm in their stand for its restriction. Governor Smith did his best to encourage that impression in his St. Paul speech by declaring that he, like Herbert Hoover, is in favor of dropping the national origins provision, which is included in the 1924 immigration act, but has never been made effective.

These same Democratic leaders carefully avoid reference to Governor Smith's assertion in his speech of acceptance, that he is "opposed to the principle of restriction based upon the figures of immigrant population contained in a census 38 years old." He has never altered that statement, which has reference to the use of the 1890 census in the present act.

If the governor opposes the continued use of the 1890 census, supported by Herbert Hoover, he evidently favors a change to either 1910 or 1920. The 1910 census would increase the number of immigrants admitted annually from 164,667 to 240,350, under the present method of computing quotas. The 1920 census would increase the total to 241,246. If either the 1910 or 1920 figures should be used, the number admitted from Great Britain, Germany, Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and France would comprise but fifty per cent of the annual total, instead of 82 per cent as at present. So there is, after all, a considerable difference in the ideas of the opposing candidates about immigration restriction.

There is one part of Herbert Hoover's record that receives much less attention than it deserves. That is his campaign against industrial waste, which he began some time before entering the cabinet as secretary of commerce. A survey made by a committee which he appointed discovered an average waste of 39 per cent in industry, due chiefly to excessive variety of types of products.

Entries From Four New Counties Listed This Year—Interest in Big Event on Increase

Everything is ready for the biggest Top O' Michigan Potato and Apple Show ever held at Gaylord, according to A. C. Lytle, secretary of the Top O' Michigan Potato Show Association.

This show, which will be held from October 31 to November 2, has had a phenomenal growth since 1923 and now stands out as not only the first show, but the best exhibition of potatoes in Michigan.

Additional space has been provided this year to take care of requirements which taxed the facilities of the Association last year. There will be plenty of room for all entries and all the visitors. Indications point to an unusually large list of exhibitors this year.

Entries from four new counties will be on hand this year to compete with the eight old members for the $1,600 in premium money and prizes. E. A. Hardenburg of Cornell College, Ithaca, New York, one of the judges of the first show held, will be back to do the judging of potatoes. He will be assisted by H. C. Moore of the Michigan State College.

There will be a program for each day and evening of the show. Wednesday morning, October 31, at nine o'clock all exhibitors will have their apples and potatoes in place. At ten o'clock the show will open with various contests.

Wednesday afternoon will be devoted to talks and discussions on apples.

Wednesday night a banquet for certified seed potato growers will be held.

Thursday is potato day—also Boys and Girls day. Following contests in the morning, a program will be held in the afternoon.

Thursday night the annual banquet will be held. Governor Fred Green will deliver the main address of the evening.

Friday morning at ten o'clock the church choir singing contest will be held. Friday afternoon will be devoted to contests.

The Top O' Michigan Potato and Apple Show is an institution. Here it is that farmers come to exhibit and learn the latest information in production and marketing and discuss with their Northern Michigan neighbors their mutual problems.

Elsewhere in this issue you will find an advertisement relative to this show.

RED AND WHITE LOST SATURDAY

ST. IGNACE TAKES 13 TO 0 VICTORY FROM LOCALS

Harbor Springs Upset Boyne City in Northern Michigan Title Scramble—Other Games

Handicapped by the absence of their captain and quarterback, Dick Marshall, Charlevoix's Red and White football eleven went down to their fourth straight defeat at St. Ignace last Saturday by a score of 13 to 0.

Marshall was kept from the lineup by injuries received at Mancelona the previous Saturday and more woes fell upon the local team when Bill Novak, who had been groomed for Marshall's position, was also taken out when injured. The straits lads scored twice, but the locals were unable to muster enough punch to put the ball across when scoring opportunities did present themselves.

The big upset in Northern Michigan gridiron circles was Harbor Springs unexpected defeat of the previously unbeaten Boyne City veteran eleven. Harbor's victory came by the aerial route, McBride to Winegarden, who made both touchdowns. Harbor led 8 to 0 at the quarter with one touchdown and a safety. The final score was 14 to 6 in their favor.

Petoskey showed its best form of the season by holding the crack Manistee team to a 13 to 0 score. Petoskey consistently out-played Manistee in the first half and was often in scoring position. From a start with green material, the Emmet county eleven has been improving with each game. Saturday they met Harbor Springs in a game that never lacks of intense rivalry. Harbor's win over Boyne's veteran team will make them slight favorites.

Cadillac won 31 to 0 over Mt. Pleasant high Saturday in a game having no bearing on the Northern Michigan title race, while Traverse was holding the Alma college freshman team to a scoreless tie in another non-title mix-up. Traverse meets Boyne City this coming Saturday in a game that will draw the interest of the entire region.

Charlevoix hopes to vindicate her bad record by a win over Kalkaska Saturday at the latter place.

Miss Eva Adams gave a dinner last Wednesday evening at her home on Michigan avenue in honor of Mr. Frederick W. Sass of Grand Rapids. Covers were laid for ten on a table beautiful with its unusual array of dishes and linen which were formerly the property of Miss Adams' grandmother. The room was tastefully decorated with pink roses and chrysanthemums.

Mrs. C. B. McClellan and Mrs. William H. Emery of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Raleigh Nelson of Ann Arbor were out-of-town guests, with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stelter, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Sloan and Rev. and Mrs. B. G. Mattson the Charlevoix guests.

LOCAL COUPLE WERE MARRIED WEDNESDAY

Miss Helen Newman and Albert Cook United by Rev. Mattson

A wedding of interest to Charlevoix people was that of Miss Helen Newman and Albert Cook, which was solemnized shortly before noon Wednesday at the Congregational parsonage by Rev. B. G. Mattson.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn See attended the couple as matron of honor and best man and accompanied them to the home of Mr. Cook's parents at Marion Center for a wedding dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Cook left the same afternoon on a wedding trip to Creighton Mines, Canada, home of the bride's parents.

Both young people are well and popularly known among Charlevoix residents and will have the best wishes of a host of friends.

WOMEN ACTIVE AROUSING VOTERS TO ACTION

Predict Largest Poll in History at November Election

Women's organizations everywhere are sponsoring the ringing of the bells at frequent intervals on election day to remind people of their civic duty. Getting-out-the-vote is one manifestation of the democratic adventure and ways of democracy are lusty and picturesque. After all, democracy is a bandwagon, and there are too many empty seats.

In 1924 only about 51% of those eligible voted in the United States. In Michigan we did a little better and the average was 56 per cent.

Both the Democratic and Republican candidates made mention of the women in their addresses of acceptance. Mr. Smith said, "I believe in that true equality of women that opens to them without restriction all avenues of opportunity for which they can qualify in business, in government service, in politics."

Mr. Hoover said, "The participation of women in politics means a keener realization of the importance of the moral and spiritual welfare of our people. I would wish that the women of our country could embrace this problem in citizenship as peculiarly their own. If they could apply their higher sense of service and responsibility, their freshness of enthusiasm and capacity for organization to this problem, it would become as it should become, a patriotic issue."

NEW MANAGER AT THE A. & P. STORE

H. E. Buddy, Formerly of Onaway, Now in Charge

The past few days has consumed several changes in the management at the local A. & P. store. Cliff Heller and wife, who have had charge of the store since its establishment several years ago, has been transferred to East Jordan, where we are told, they will have charge of the company's interests there.

B. L. Proctor, who has had charge of the meat department for several months, has gone to St. Ignace to assume a similar position. His place in the Charlevoix store will be filled by Fred Stafford, well known among our local people.

The new manager of the store is H. E. Buddy, formerly of Onaway, who comes highly recommended by the A. & P. interests.

Card of Thanks
We desire to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to those who so kindly rendered assistance and to those who sent flowers at the time of the death of our beloved son and father. Mrs. Viola Ward and Calvin Ward.—Adv. 4311.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEET A SUCCESS

OVER FIVE HUNDRED PRESENT AT PETOSKEY GATHERING

Sectional Group Meetings Were Helpful With Main Sessions
Providing Inspiration

The Michigan Council of Religious Education is holding its 68th annual convention in two regional groups this fall. One section is in session this week at Adrian. The other was held last week in the neighboring city of Petoskey and was largely attended by people in this part of the state. Thirty counties were represented, 541 persons registered, nearly one hundred of whom were from Charlevoix county.

Eighteen denominations co-operate through this inter-denominational organization to extend and deepen the interests and activities of Sunday school and other religious education efforts in Michigan. The challenge and goal briefly stated is "Instruction and training in religion and morals for every child, youth and adult in Michigan."

The report of the business superintendent of the council showed the following accomplishments during the past year:

Institutes for 3,500 teachers of little children.
Many leaders of young people have been gathered in county councils.

2,500 young people themselves have come into conferences.
12,000 copies of the Michigan S. S. Advance distributed.

Numerous county picnics and rallies.

Tens of thousands of pieces of literature distributed.

3,000 county and district officers have been at work.

1,000 personal interviews with county workers.

Thousands of books loaned by state library.

3,500 have taken ten hours class room work in our training school.

Hundreds of S. S. workers in state convention.

In spite of the fine work done the state council is financially embarrassed and will have to retrench because counties and individuals for economic reasons are unable to meet the demands. The statement was made that all money raised by the counties for S. S. work doesn't amount to as much as it costs to transport criminals to state institutions.

It was a great convention, helpful and inspiring. Miss Irene Catton formerly of Charlevoix, who is now state children's division superintendent, had her department headquarters at the Baptist church, with an exhibit of handwork on display. She met the county children's division superintendents at a banquet and conference on Thursday evening and Friday afternoon all children's workers met with her in a group session. At the same time sessions were conducted elsewhere for other groups of workers.

Prof. M. A. Honline of Pasadena, Calif., delivered three outstanding lectures during the convention, using the topics, "The Bible as a Basis of Education," "Religion and the Younger Generation," Christianity and Modern Thought." The speaker asserted, "God has made two revelations to man, one scientific, the other religious. One through nature the other through a book. These revelations have been progressive. The Bible was written to teach religion, not for instruction in science. We have no right to go to the Bible for instruction in science. We should go to nature. Don't travel a road so narrow you can't turn around if you find you are wrong. Nature makes us religious. Man's lower nature says, go the limit. His higher nature says, 'thou shalt not.' Between these two extremes lies the whole field of religious education. This is largely a problem of self control. What will it profit us if we gain the whole world and lose boys and girls? They are our greatest asset."

HALLOWEEN PARTY AT M. E. PARSONAGE

Missionary Society Host to Gathering Monday Evening

About fifty assembled at the Methodist parsonage Monday evening to have a little Halloween fun and add to the Missionary Society funds.

The rooms were profusely and tastefully decorated with the seasonal witches, cats, jack-o-lanterns and yellow candles. Lights were draped to cast the colored glow that befits the season.

Readings by Messrs. Lockyer and McMillan and Mrs. E. Stewart, songs by Mrs. Edgar Smith and the Methodist men's quartette, together with general games and stunts, furnished the entertainment features.

Then refreshments were served including an immense birthday cake, which was the general souvenir of the occasion. Congratulations are offered to Mrs. Beeman as president, and to Mesdames Belding, Simmons and A. Edwards for decorations and program.

COUNTY TAX IS HIGHER IN 1928

INCREASE OF $6,292.45 SHOWN
IN SUPERVISOR'S REPORT

City of Charlevoix Will Pay Over
One Thousand Less Than Year Ago—School Tax Less.

One of the most interesting reports adopted by the board of supervisors at their October session was that of the apportionment committee. To apportion the taxes to the various townships and the City of Charlevoix takes considerable time, as each tax has to be handled separately.

The total amount of taxes assessed in the county this year including school, state, county contingent, county road and county sinking fund is $393,439.60 and this was divided by the cost of schools $202,047.77 and all other taxes $191,391.83. In 1927 the amounts were: Schools, $190,584.68, all other taxes, $196,562.47, or a total of $387,147.15.

The total tax levied in the county this year is $6,292.45 higher than in 1927, the biggest item of increase being in the county sinking fund, which received a boost of $9,877.15. Of the above amounts the City of Charlevoix will be asked to pay for school purposes $49,326.00 and all others $58,794.25, totalling $108,120.25. In 1927 the city was asked for schools $49,941.00 and other taxes $59,301.51, or a total of $109,242.51. The net decrease this year is $1,122.26.

The amount of taxes other than school is divided among the following funds for 1928:

State.....	$ 28,145.06
County.....	96,342.36
Co. Road.....	29,437.64
Co. Sinking Fund.....	37,466.47

On a whole the school tax of the several townships was slightly increased, while in other instances it was decreased. Charlevoix's school tax is a trifle over six hundred dollars less than last year.

STEPS TO FORM A FAIR COMBINE

Steps to form an association of county fairs of Northern Michigan were given impetus at a meeting between officials of the Manistee county fair and four officials of the Northwestern Michigan fair, of Traverse City at Manistee last Thursday.

Representatives of the Oceana county fair and the Wexford county fair were unable to be present. Definite organization was postponed until early in November, when a meeting will be held, probably in Traverse City, to include those already interested, as well as officials of the fairs at East Jordan and Petoskey. Arrangements for this gathering are left to J. L. Keddie of Bear Lake, secretary of the Manistee fair, and Arnell Engstrom, secretary of the Northwestern fair at Traverse City.

Among the speakers were C. B. Dye, Fred Pratt, Robert Barney and Arnell Engstrom of Traverse City.

WOMEN RALLY TO SUPPORT HOOVER

COUNTY COMMITTEES URGING ALL CITIZENS TO VOTE

Registration in Charlevoix Last Saturday Larger Than That of Any Previous Entire Year

"Through the length and breadth of Michigan women are rallying to the standard of Herbert Hoover," says Mrs. Craig C. Miller organizing chairman for the state (outside of Wayne county and the metropolitan district) of the Woman's Hoover Committee. "Not only in cities but in small towns and rural districts are women volunteering to work for Hoover's cause, and taking an active part in rousing their sisters to the importance of this election to the future of this nation."

"Women do not wish the United States again to give the sanction of law to the gratification of a purely sensual desire which leads to misery, disease, poverty and crime. They recognize that prohibition means protection to the American home, the American woman, the American child and they rally to the leader who fearlessly holds aloft this banner—a man who 'wishes protection to succeed.'"

The home makers of Michigan heed well the call of one of the best known and best loved women of Michigan, Mrs. Dorian Russell of Grand Rapids who thus addresses them. "I do not know whether you are a Republican or a Democrat; it makes little difference for it is expected that the home makers of the country generally will support Herbert Hoover who has demonstrated his confidence in woman as an important factor in nation and world wide citizenship. I am urging that you stand by Mr. Hoover as he stood by us during the war. Herbert Hoover will not be an experiment. Experience has been such that his vision will be measured by facts as well as dreams."

The heaviest vote by women in the history of Charlevoix county is freely predicted for the election November 6. Mrs. Cornelia Bailey has been active in promoting the work of the Woman's Hoover Committee in Charlevoix, while Mrs. Annie B. Saltonstall, an officer of the Charlevoix county Hoover-Green Club, has been active, along with others, in getting the women of Charlevoix to register. That their efforts have not been without results is proven by the fact that more people registered with Deputy City Clerk Payton last Saturday than have previously done so in an entire year's time. Committees have also been active in Boyne City and East Jordan and a record vote is expected next Tuesday.

Burgess Women Organize Club
On Tuesday, October 23, a nutrition meeting was held and organization of a club completed by Mrs. Otto Kane and Mrs. A. Evers, leaders, at the latter's home. Eight were present and officers elected as follows: chairman, Mrs. Orson Cook; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Platt Webster. The name adopted for the club was "The Burgess Nutrition Club." Time and place of the next meeting will be announced.

The children of the primary department of the Congregational Sunday school were entertained in the church dining room, Saturday afternoon with a Halloween party.

Twenty-seven members of the department were present to enjoy the games under the leadership of Mrs. Claire Webster and Miss Lila Tillotson. This was followed by the usual party; ice cream served in individual orange paper pumpkins and cakes. Lollipop arrived in a large pumpkin coach drawn by six toy mice and driven by a kewpie fairy, which pleased the small guests. Refreshments and decorations were under the supervision of the primary superintendent, Mrs. E. J. Miller, assisted by Mrs. A. Weststaff.

Mrs. Edwards Entertained
Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Edwards entertained twenty friends Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. Clarence Bridge, who is leaving soon to spend the winter in Grand Rapids.

The early part of the evening was spent playing bridge the playing being followed by a pot-luck supper.

ELECTION OF SENATOR IS IMPORTANT

SAME CANDIDATE SHOULD BE CHOSEN FOR BOTH TERMS

Would Impair Effectiveness if Different Man Was Elected for Long and Short Terms

In view of the results of the September primary vote, there is a specific point in connection with the November ballot in Michigan to which the Michigan electorate needs enlightenment in the interest of a wholly intelligent poll.

In the September primaries there was a 20 per cent smaller vote cast, in both parties, for the short term United States senator than for the long term United States senator. This proves a lack of popular understanding as to why two votes must be cast in connection with the senatorship. Many voters do not understand that Mr. Vandenberg's appointment under the law ran only until an election could be held, that at the election, November 6, a senator must be named to fill the balance of Senator Ferris' term running from December to March (the short term) while the "long term" is the regular six year term beginning, March 4.

It is vital to consecutive public service that the same senator should be elected to BOTH places. In other words, it seems necessary to emphasize the fact that the voter should vote for the SAME CANDIDATE for BOTH places—regardless whether his choice be Mr. Vandenberg or his opponent, John Bailey. Otherwise, in the event of a close election, the default of 20 per cent of the ballots might produce two different senators for the short and long terms.

It is not necessary to point out that this would impair the usefulness to Michigan of whomsoever shall be chosen for the long term, because it would rob him (and therefore his State) of the seniority advantage to be gained during the brief months of the short term. This seniority advantage is of paramount importance in the senate. For example, the brief term which Mr. Vandenberg already has served in the senate puts him ahead of all other new senators who may qualify at the December session; and this advantage wholly governs committee places and precedence. By the same token Michigan's short term senator in December will gain kindred advantage for his state over all other new senators who qualify next March.

For the sake of its own influence in Washington, Michigan should elect the SAME SENATOR—who ever he may be—for both the short and the long term.

POSE OF LIGHT DOCKET

Burke Found Not Guilty on Liquor Charge—James Earl Placed on Probation on Wet Count

The October term of circuit court closed last Thursday afternoon following a four-day session in which several cases of a small docket were disposed of.

James Earl, who had pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law was placed on probation after he and his wife signed a perpetual search warrant allowing officers to search their premises at any time. Earl was arrested several weeks ago when a quantity of home brew was found in his place following an automobile smash in which two young men claiming to have obtained beer from Earl were injured.

A jury brought in a verdict of not guilty in the case of Edward Joseph Burke of St. James who was tried for violation of the liquor law.

Howard Labreck and Robert McClintock, Boyne City youths who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering, were placed on probation until the first of February term of court, with Miss Caroline Geiken as their probation officer. The lads were given a good talking to by Judge Gilbert, who ordered them to go to work and make a report to him at the end of the probation period.

Judgment in the sum of $2000 was returned in favor of plaintiff in the case of Alexander Banks vs. administrator of the estate of Agnes V. Banks, deceased, et al. The case was decided by a jury.

Other cases on an exceptionally light docket were carried over until the next term of court, while several others will be disposed of the latter part of this week when Judge Gilbert will make a special trip here for the purpose.

KALKASKA BEATEN BY LOCAL ELEVEN

CHARLEVOIX WON FRIDAY TILT
BY 19 TO 0 SCORE

Victory Was First After Four Successive Defeats—Team Showed Improvement Over Other Tilts

Coach Kipke's Red and White warriors tasted victory again last Friday afternoon when they handed Kalkaska a 19 to 0 trimming on the Kalkaska field. It was the local team's first win after four straight defeats.

Scoring honors for the Red and White were evenly divided between Captain Dick Marshall, Bill Novak and Joe Arvilla, who garnered one touchdown apiece. One try out of three was successful for the extra point. Kalkaska was out-played in every department of the game and the local squad showed decided improvement over previous encounters.

Kipke's men will have a hard test Saturday afternoon when they meet Gaylord on the home field. Gaylord has an impressive string of victories to their credit, including a win over East Jordan, one of the strongest class C aggregations in this region. If they can trim Gaylord Saturday it will be a very good indication that the team has returned to its early season form when Onaway was snowed under 58 to 0.

Results of Other Games
Harbor Springs, conquerors of the hard-hitting Boyne City eleven, were unable to stop a determined Petoskey team at Harbor last Saturday, and one of the most sensational games played in Northern Michigan this season ended a 6 to 6 tie. Petoskey scored with 40 seconds to play to tie the count.

Boys City Defeated
Boys City felt the sting of defeat for the second time this season last Saturday when Traverse City romped away with an easy victory 14 to 0. Reports of the game state Traverse scored early in the game and then held off the Boys City thrusts throughout the remainder of the battle. Boys City tackled Alpena this coming Saturday and will hit tough opposition from this eleven.

Mancelona Beat Petoskey Reserves
Mancelona kept a clean slate for the season by beating the Petoskey reserves at Mancelona Saturday by a 24 to 0 count.

Cadillac was held to her fourth tie Saturday afternoon by Manistee on the latter field. Petoskey takes on Cadillac Saturday and an interesting contest is looked for.

PIONEER ENGINEER
DIED LAST SUNDAY

Illness of Two Month's Duration
Fatal to John Withers

John Withers, pioneer resident and highly respected citizen of Charlevoix, died Sunday, October 28th, at the Robert Withers residence on Antrim street, following an illness of two months.

Mr. Withers, who was 62 years old, came to Charlevoix when he was eighteen and had since made his home here. He was for many years engineer at the electric light plant and also had been engineer on the Inland, sailing under the late Capt. Timothy Smith. For many years he had been engineer at the Inn, Pere Marquette railway company summer hotel.

Deceased was married in 1886 to Viola Estella Smith, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Timothy Smith, who, besides her children, Allan of Syracuse, N. Y., and Charlotte of this city survive, also two brothers, William of Marion township and Robert of this city.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence, 211 Antrim street, Rev. John E. Lockyer of the Methodist church officiating. Interment in Brookside cemetery.

O. E. S. Entertain Husbands
Charlevoix Chapter, O. E. S., entertained members and their husbands last Wednesday evening under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. Rolfie Lewis, assisted by Mrs. Lilo Shanahan and the W. M. of the chapter, Mrs. Leo Carey. A six-thirty pot-luck supper was followed by community singing and cards.

The Campaign for Votes Is Open

It is said that there comes a day in the life of every handler of bad horses when he will mount one and ride him out, tame or untame, and dismount—and forever after decline to ride another. Billy Foster was evidence of this. For three years Billy and Bangs had been inseparable, riding together on every job, and the shaggy youth to feed off the animals in Foster's string before the older man would mount them. As Bangs went about his work his faded blue eyes were ever turned toward the Three Bar boss who stood in the door of the blacksmith shop.

The girl was vaguely troubled as she noted this. Bangs and Foster had returned for their second season at the Three Bar. All through the previous summer the boy had evidenced his silent admiration, his eyes following her every move.

The scene round Billie was one of strenuous activity, every effort bent toward whipping the remuda into shape for the calf roundup in the best possible spare of time.

Green horses were led out, one after another, to be saddled for the first time, and those previously broken required a few workouts to knock the wild edge off their unwillingness to carry a rider after a winter of freedom on the range.

Three men were shoeing horses tied to snubbing posts at ten-yard intervals before the shop. One animal that had fought viciously against this treatment had been thrown and stretched his four feet rigid to convenient posts, and while he struggled and heaved on the ground Billie Foster calmly fixed and nailed the shoes on him. Cal Harris finished shoeing the calf he was working.

"That's the last touch," he said. "My string is all set to go."

"You have five colts gentled for your circle bunch," she said. "But you didn't pick a single cow horse. The boys have sorted out the best ones and the few that are left won't answer for a man that insists on a gentled string."

"Creamer and Calico will do for me," he said. "I broke them myself and maybe I can worry along."

"Did you break them like that?" she asked. Bangs was topping a horse that strenuously refused to be conquered and as they looked on the animal threw himself.

"Like that? Well, no—not precisely," Harris said. "They're not breaking horses. They're proving that they're bronc-peggers that can ride 'em before they're broke. A horse started out that way will be a bronc till the day he dies."

Three men were lashing their bed rolls and war bags on three pack horses and when this task was completed they rode down the line, each one leading his pack animal. Harris knew this as evidence that they would start after the calves on the following day. The custom was to exchange representatives to ride with each wagon within a reasonable distance, the reps to look after the interest of the brand for which they rode.

"How many reps do you trade?" he asked.

"Three," she said. "Halfmoon D, V L and with Shale."

The Halfmoon D lay some fifteen miles eastward along the foot of the hills; the V L the same distance to the west, but angled away in a pocket that led well back into the bare of the range, a comparatively small outfit owned by the Brundons, father and four sons, who made every effort to keep the bulk of their cows ranging in their own home brand and changed reps only with the Three Bar.

Slide's home place lay forty miles south and a little west and his cows grazed for over a hundred miles, requiring three wagons to cover his range.

During the afternoon the three reps came in to replace the men who had left. The surplus horses had been cut out and thrown back on the range, only those required for the remuda remaining in the pasture lot. The chuck wagon was wheeled before the cookhouse door and packed for an early start. Before the first streaks of dawn the men had saddled and breakfasted. It was turning gray in the east when four horses, necessitating the attentions of four men, were hooked to the wagon. A man hung on the bit of each wheel horse while another grasped the bits of the lead reins as Waddles made on last hasty trip inside.

"This will be a rocky ride for a mile or two," he prophesied, as he mounted the seat and leaped himself. "These willow-tails haven't had on a strap of lariat for many a month. All set, turn loose!"

The men stepped back and the four horses hit the collars ragedly. One wheel horse reared and jumped forward. The off leader dropped his head and pitched, shaking himself as if struggling to insert a rider, then the four settled into a jerky run and the heavy wagon clattered and lurched down the lane.

The wrangler, whose duty it was to tend the horse herd by day, and the nighthawk who would guard it at night sat on their horses at the far end of the corral and urged the herd out as the gates swung back. The remuda streamed down the valley, the two first riders swinging wide to either flank while the nighthawk and wrangler brought up the rear.

Shortly before noon the wagon was halted in a broad bottom threaded by a tiny spring-fed stream. The tents were unhitched; mounts were unsaddled and thrown into the horse herd, which was then headed into the mouth of a branching draw and allowed to graze. Waddles dumped off the bed rolls that were piled from the broad lowered tailgate to the wagon top and each man sorted out his own and spread it upon some spot which struck him as a likely her ground.

It was not long before Waddles was dispensing nourishment from the lowered tailgate, ladling food and hot coffee into the plates and cups which the men held out to him. They drew away and sat cross-legged on the ground. The meal was almost finished when six horsemen rode down the valley and pulled up before the wagon.

"What's the chance for scraps?" the leader asked.

"Step down," Waddles invited. "And throw a feed in you. She's still a stomping."

Four of the men differed in no material way from the Three Bar men in appearance. The fifth was a ruffian with little forehead, a face of gorilla cast, stamped with brute ferocity and small intelligence. The last of the six was a striking figure, a big man with pure white hair and brows, his pale eyes peering from a red face.

"The roanest albino is Harper, our leading bad man in these parts," Evans remarked to Harris. "And the human ope is Lang; Elsher, Coleman, Barton and Confield are the rest. Nice layout of murderers and such."

Harper's men ate unconcernedly, conscious that they were marked as men who had violated every law on the calendar, but knowing also that no man would take exceptions to their time, and as they had heard the wagon each man had scanned the faces of the round-up crew to make certain that there were none among them who might bear some more specific and personal dislike.

The Three Bar men chatted and fraternized with them as they would have done with the riders of any legitimate outfit. Harper praised the food that Waddles tendered them.

Billie Warren forced a smile as she nodded to them, then moved off and sat upon a rock some fifty yards from the wagon, despatching the six men who ate her fare and loyally raged at the conditions which forced her to extend the hospitality of the Three Bar to men of their breed whenever they chanced by.

Harris strolled over and sat down facing her, sipping tobacco into a brown paper and deftly rolling his smoke.

"Has it been on your mind—what I was telling you a few nights back, about how much I was loving you?" he asked.

"You had your chance to prove it by going away," she said. "And refused; so why bring it up again? The next two years will be hard enough without my having to listen to that."

"Our families must have been real set on throwing us together. He observed. "I was cut off without a dime myself—unless I spent two full years on the Three Bar."

She was angry with herself for believing him sincere, for being convinced that he, too, as he had several times intimated, was tied in much the same fashion as herself. The explanation came to her in an illuminating flash. The elder Harris must have nursed a lifelong enmity against her father, who had believed him the most devoted friend on earth.

She had often heard the tale of how her parent had, in all friendliness, followed old Bill Harris step by step from Dodge City to the Platte, to old Fort Laramie and finally to the present Three Bar range. Perhaps the one so followed had felt that Cal Warren was but the latest symbol of the whole clan of squatters who had driven him from place to place and eventually forced him to relinquish his hope of seeing the Three Bar brand on a hundred thousand cows; that his friendliness had been simulated, his civility nursed and finally consummated by leaving his affairs in such fashion that his son must carry on the work his trickery had begun.

Harris resumed where he had broken off.

"And I'd have tossed it off, as I told you once, if the Three Bar girl had turned out to be any except you. You've had a tough problem to work out, girl," he said. "I sold out my life for you, and for more than it was worth—and figured to see the leak at the Three Bar and put the old brand on its feet."

His calm assurance on this point exasperated the girl.

"How?" she demanded. "What can you do?" She pointed toward the six men near the wagon. "During the time you spent prowling the hills did you ever come across those men?"

"Not to put round with them," he confessed. "But I did cut their trail now and then. They're not the outfit that's going to be hardest to handle when the time arrives."

"What do you mean?" she asked. "No one has ever been able to handle them up to date."

"Did I ever strike you as queer that Slide could come into this country twelve years back, with nothing but a long rope and a running iron, and be owning thirty thousand head today?"

"He has the knack to protect his own and increase," she said. "They're afraid of Slide."

The girl shook her head impatiently and looked across at the six men who ate her fare.

"Look at them," she flared. "Eating my food; and in a few nights they'll be larding a bunch of Three Bar steers toward the Idaho line. Why doesn't some man that is a man kill that stinking fiend and all his whelps and rid the country of his breed? Even Slide lets them put up at his place."

"If they're pestering you I'll order them off," he said.

"And what effect would that have?" she inquired scornfully.

"The effect of causing them to climb their horses and nuzzle off down the country," he returned. He sprawled on the grass, his head propped on one hand as he regarded them.

"Then probably you'd better order them off," she suggested. "You have my permission. Now's your chance to make good the lordly brag of being the Three Bar out of the hole." She instantly regretted having said it. A dozen times of late she had wondered if she were turning bitter and waspish. If she would ever again be the even-tempered Billie Warren with a good word and a smile for every one.

Harris was, as always, apparently undisturbed by her words. Far down the bottom she could see a point of light which she knew for a white sign that read: "Squatter, don't let me down and you here." The man before her had defied these sinister warnings scattered about the range and put up any amount of money to put in on his claim, knowing that he was a marked man from the hour he turned the first furrow. Whatever his shortcomings, lack of courage was not one of them.

"I take that back," she said, referring to her words of a few moments before. Harris straightened to a sitting position in his surprise at this impulsive retraction, and as he smiled across at her she divined that this man, seemingly so impervious to her sarcasm, could be easily moved by a single kind word.

"Thanks, Billie," he said. "That was real subtle of you."

He rose and wandered toward the wagon and Billie Warren felt a sudden clutch of fear as he laid his eyes on her and she realized that he had taken her words literally and intended ordering them off.

"I've been made temporary foreman of the Three Bar—just so the boss could try me out on that job for an hour or two," he remarked conversationally. "So I'm putting in a new rule that goes into effect right off. When you boys ride away, in a few minutes from now, you can tell folks that the grub line is closed as far as the Three Bar is concerned."

Lang took a half-step toward him, his face reflecting his gathering rage as his slow brain comprehended the fact that this speech was but another way of announcing that he and his men would find no welcome at the Three Bar from that moment on. Harper caught his arm and jerked him back. The albino was an old hand and could rightly read the signs.

"The gentleman was remarking to me," he said to Lang; "not you." He turned to Harris. "There's no law to make you feed any man," he said. "From now on we'll pay our way—as far as the Three Bar is concerned."

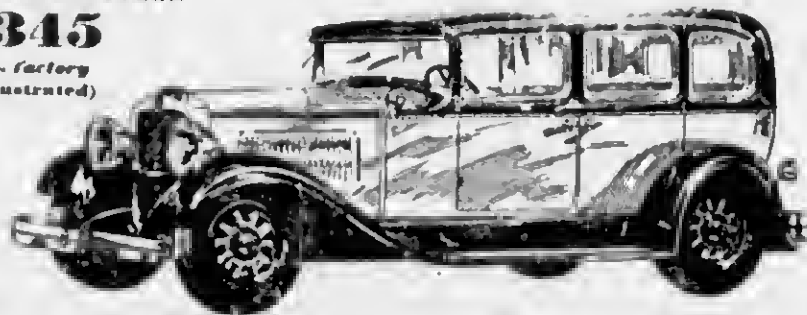

His tones were casual; only his pale eyes, fastened unblinkingly on Harris's face, betrayed his real feeling toward

Charlevoix Public School Notes

Junior Class News

The Juniors have it last selected their class ring out of many. It won't be long now before they will be sporting them around to the envy of the Sophomores and freshmen; maybe to the Seniors?

The class also elected members to read over some plays. The best play will be selected and then will come the task of selecting proper characters for the parts.

The Juniors hope to make their first play a complete success and hope the public will join in and make a good turn-out to boost the class for they need the money to give the Seniors the annual "J" hop.

Let's go everybody.

Sophomore News

After much delay we have finally given our party to the Freshies. The grand event took place on Friday evening. We heard rumors that the Freshies were very much frightened, but I guess they were pretty curious to know what would happen because a goodly number of them turned out. The Grand March was led by Freshmen carrying green posters on which was, "We're green, we know we're green." Of course there was much hesitation about the choosing of partners, and it finally ended in the girls having to pull the boys along. After the initiation (which will not be explained) we played games until the refreshments were served. Our six gallons of ice cream was devoured without delay and then we retired to give some yells. The yells were led by our two yell leaders, members of our class, and we had a rousing sing of "Red and White." After that the guests left after a very "spirited" party.

Freshmen News

The freshmen had a class meeting Monday night and chose as their class motto: "Start right, and stick to it." A committee was chosen to choose the class flower and class color and will report on them at the next meeting.

We attended the party given in our honor by the Sophomores last Friday night and a good time was had by all. We wish to say that they were certainly generous with the icecream.

ATHLETIC NEWS

Charlevoix Scores Another Victory

Who said we didn't have a good team? Thanks to Max Novak, Joe Arvilla and Dick Marshall respectively, who made a touchdown apiece, we won the Kalkaska game by a score of 19 to 0. Were the kids surprised and glad. Oh, quite a bit in their happy glee the teller was hit and batted and what not. The receiver of the good news, was not responsible, he was both stunned and glad.

Everything favored our team, all fellows were in good shape and every detail went fine. The weather was favorable and one of that snap-

When we met the fellows on the street that night they had a look on their faces that seemed to say, "Take off your hat to us, look what we did today." Don't blame them a bit for looking that way because if you went to Kalkaska wouldn't you look the same? Well, I guess you would.

Don't forget we play Gaylord here next Saturday. Let's see every body who knows what football means out. We guarantee your money's worth.

Pep Meeting

Last Friday morning the whole assembly joined in a chorus of peppy yells, speeches were made by the fellows. We also had a speech from Coach Kipke telling us when to yell and why to yell harder when the team's losing. This is good practical advice and we shall heed it. We closed the meeting by singing, "Red and White," our school song.

General News

An intelligence test was spruag on the 11th school Tuesday morning. We were given one half hour to answer 75 questions. The questions being simple, but some of them rather catchy. A good many of the students are above the average, for instance, Harker Kirby, but a few will find that their I. A. is way below par. (Example will not be given.) As a whole the students rather enjoyed the test and here's hoping their enjoyments will not be ruined when they find out their score.

BAN ON LAKE TROUT LIFTED SATURDAY

Lifts and Spawns Obtained So Far Are Very Light

The closed season on lake trout, which has been in effect since October 20th was lifted Saturday afternoon when the required 40 per cent of ripe spawn was obtained from fish taken in test nets on Dahlia Shoals north of the Beavers.

All commercial fishermen operating out of this port set Saturday, but with a couple of exceptions, were unable to lift until Tuesday on account of a heavy northwest blow with accompany snow flurries Sunday and Monday.

Lifts brought in up to this time have been very light, and for this reason little or no spawn has been obtained. The general consensus of opinion is that the season was opened too early. Last year it was claimed the season was opened too late, so it appears that conservation officers are having a hard time satisfying all concerned.

STICK TO THE OLD PARTY

That has given our country all its prosperous times. To the party that always talks in constructive terms, and never in fault-finding, pessimistic, complaining terms. The old party needs the support of every Loyal Republican. It has nominated a ticket of men that can be vouched for, men of tried experience, men of sterling worth, men that have been responsible for our country, state and nation's progress. You will be inclined to split your ticket for this one and that one as a favor, or a compliment or through friendship. Don't do it. Party solidarity is essential to party success. Your vote, wrongly placed, may do an irreparable harm. The principles of our glorious old party are worth fighting for, and the least you can do is to put a cross at the head of the Republican ticket and you will not thereafter be called upon to make excuses for your action.

To the 5000 who daily become owners of the new Ford car

THE service obligation of the Ford Motor Company and its dealer organization is now growing at the rate of 5000 cars a day. It is to these new car owners that this message is addressed.

The new Ford is a remarkably fine car for one that costs so little. It is simple in design, constructed of the finest materials, and built to unusually close measurements.

These are the reasons it performs so wonderfully. These are also the reasons its service requirements are so few and the up-keep cost so low.

When you receive your new car, the dealer will explain the simple little things that should be attended to at regular intervals to insure the best performance. He will also tell you something of his own facilities for doing this work promptly and at small cost.

With the purchase of your car, you are entitled to Free Inspection Service by your dealer at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. This service is due you and we urge you to take full advantage of it. Proper care during this breaking-in period means a great deal to the life of your car.

Included in the Free Inspection Service is a check-up of the battery, the generator charging rate, the distributor, the carburetor adjustment, lights, brakes, shock absorbers, tire inflation and steering gear. The engine oil is also changed and chassis lubricated.

No charge whatever is made for labor or materials incidental to this inspection service, except where repairs are necessary because of accident, neglect, or misuse.

The labor of changing the engine oil and lubricating the chassis is also free, although a charge is made for the new oil.

We believe that when you see the good effects of this inspection you will continue to have it done regularly throughout the life of your car.

Wherever you live, you will find the Ford dealer very helpful in keeping your car in good running order for many thousands of miles at a minimum of trouble and expense.

He operates under close factory supervision and has been trained and equipped to do this work promptly, thoroughly and economically.

FOR THOSE WHO GAVE

"No more important duty falls on the government of the United States than the adequate care of its veterans. Those suffering disabilities incurred in the service must have sufficient hospital relief and compensation. Their dependents must be supported. Rehabilitation and vocational training must be completed. All of this service must be clean, must be prompt and effective, and it must be administered in a spirit of the broadest and deepest human sympathy."—President Calvin Coolidge.

"LOYAL CO-OPERATION"

Lord Melchett, head of the Imperial Chemicals, Ltd. in the following paragraph, points out the value of local co-operation between the members in a business organization: "There is an asset in the balance sheet of companies which appears nowhere. No accountant values it. It does not appear in the securities and no stockholder tells you how much it is worth. That asset is the loyal co-operation of those who are working with you day by day right through your organization. It is an asset of a magnitude which I can assure you far outweighs the millions which are put down for bricks, mortar, and steel in the so-called as-

FOREIGN TRADE REPORTS

Foreign trade of the United States during the month of August was very favorable, with exports running more than $2,000,000 ahead of July. Merchandise shipments abroad during the month were valued at $381,000,000 against $374,751,000 in August of last year, while imports totaled $347,000,000, against $317,804,000 in July and $368,875,000 in August 1927. The balance of trade in favor of the United States on the month's international business was $34,000,000, compared with $5,876,000 in the corresponding month a year ago. Preliminary figures compiled by the department of commerce showed that our export trade for the eight months ended with August totaling $3,136,941,000 was approximately $54,000,000 greater than for the corresponding period last year while imports totaling $2,750,660,000 were nearly $61,000,000 less. The total for the eight months was greater than for any similar period for more than five years preceding, while imports were lower than for the same period in either 1927 or 1926.

ENJOY WHILE YOU MAY

Some people take politics too seriously. Take an interest but not too keen. Politics is an American institution. The fact that many people may not like the candidates for which you stand is no reflection upon you.

Political discussion is always interesting but it need not be too personal. One of the greatest privileges of the nation is that any citizen may hold to views with discrimination. In most nations that privilege does not exist.

Make the most out of the political season. Get what information, inspiration and pleasure out of it you can. It will be four years before another national campaign rolls around—four good, long cold winters without so much to talk about.

THE TRAFFIC GRASSHOPPER

The "grasshopper" has no respect for law or decency. He dives in ahead of you with three inches to spare, confident that your brakes are in order and that you will slow up to let him in. From one side of the avenue to the other, perhaps crossing half a dozen traffic lanes, he weaves in and out like a shuttle, serving a thousand deaths, but usually escaping through the unmerited kindness of his victims.

We have road hogs and speed maniacs, cutout fiends and honkers, light crashers and boulevard stop violators; but without hesitation we award the medal for general bedevilment to the "grasshopper." Our fond but not overconfident hope is that some day justice will overtake him.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE TENANT FARMER

Those who want to make out that the farming industry is in bad way frequently quote statistics to show that the farms rapidly are becoming operated by tenants. The implication is that the original farm owners have succumbed to the mortgages and now are leasing their lands from the rapacious money lenders.

The United States Department of Agriculture has been looking into this matter and has made some interesting discoveries. From these studies it appears that in more than half the counties of the Central States more than 30 per cent of the tenants are related to their landlords; in Wisconsin, about 40 per cent are so related. And 84 per cent of all those tenants related to their landlords bear the relationships of sons or son-in-law.

The study might have been pursued further with good results. It would be significant to learn what percentage of the tenants are young men, born farmers, who temporarily are renting farms to get a start in life. If a questionnaire were sent out among the most successful and prosperous farmers in the country, probably it would reveal that in the early days of their career they worked as farm hands, then rented farms and later acquired their own farms by down payment and the slow process of paying off the mortgage.

That percentage of tenants who are sons and sons-in-law makes plain a healthy condition, the new generation following in the footsteps of the fathers. That sort of tenant farming is promising.—Detroit News.

HOOVER AND FARM RELIEF

In the present campaign the effort is being made to convince the American farmer that Herbert Hoover is not their friend. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Because Herbert Hoover has opposed unsound ideas regarding farm relief, because he has opposed having the farmer made the victim of a gang of farm-relief agitators, whose only interest in the farmer is his vote, he is being assailed as the enemy of agriculture.

With Herbert Hoover the answer to every problem, is to face that problem honestly and squarely and with sympathetic understanding proceed to its solution in an orderly and intelligent fashion, regardless of what the popular clamor for the moment may be.

The American farmer can rest assured that with Herbert Hoover in the White House the interests of agriculture will be given the same careful and painstaking consideration that has enabled him to solve other great national and world problems. There will be no flow of demagogic oratory, no shedding of crocodile tears, just an application of plain businesslike methods of which he is so capable.

BUSINESS EFFICIENCY

It is amusing to note the persistence with which one party exploits prosperity and the other party decries that prosperity. It would seem as if one party or the other must at all times be the fundamental inspiration of our prosperity. There is no question that prosperous times can be helped by intelligent government and intelligent thrift in economy and public expenditures. But prosperity is not dependent on politics or government. Prosperity is largely due to business efficiency, and it is this efficiency which has been steadily increasing in the United States which has given us the large measure of prosperity, which we have had in recent years. Economic conditions are, of course, the fundamental basis of prosperity, but without business efficiency these economic conditions cannot be converted into prosperous times. To say that politicians or government can create prosperity is as much as to say that governments can create fiat money and maintain it at a parity with gold. The Year-Book issued by the Department of Commerce points out that the high level of prosperity enjoyed by the United States in 1927 reflects the steadily increasing efficiency of both industry and trade. That is a accurate presentation of the fact. No one can confidently predict the character of business during the next few years. But those who are making the closest study express great confidence in the business outlook. Let us hope that nothing will happen politically which will bring about a restraint on business or interfere with its efficiency.

The fact is that to much recreation is business, that too much sport is not sport.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald Review.

Proper Range Management

The benefits of conservative stocking, or allowing no more cattle on the range than the annual growth of forage will provide for, were well demonstrated on the Jornada Range Reserve this year, says the forest service, U. S. department of agriculture. There were very few outfits on neighboring ranges which did not do considerable supplementary feeding in the spring. Although the grass was dry, there was sufficient on the reserve to carry stock through the dry spring in good shape. The stock on many ranges nearby were too poor to start branding, but branding operations were carried through on the Jornada without difficulty.

Groom the Timber Tract

Some tracts of timber may profitably be cut for saw logs, poles or pulp wood, by taking out the larger trees, the smaller ones being left to grow and make the next crop. Other timberland tracts may be greatly improved by another method of cutting or thinning. Trees of the less valuable kinds and the smaller, overcrowded, crooked, and large-limbed or "horny" trees should be cut out. This will leave the straight, thrifty, larger trees for developing high-grade and high-priced forest products.

In judging dairy heifers it is desirable to have in mind not only good looks based on general appearance and conformation, but also their possible development and their production when mature. The fact that animals change somewhat in many points of conformation from calfhood to maturity makes the judging of heifers more difficult than that of cows. The outstanding points to be considered in judging heifers are length and depth of body, fullness of barrel and chest, and dairy temperament (that is, that quality which shows their tendency to convert feed into milk rather than into body fat and flesh). The development of the udder should be noted, but this point should not receive so much consideration as with cows in milk. Heifers should be large for their age and show vigor and a thrifty, growing condition, indicated by a sleek coat and a soft pliable skin.

It is claimed the young people fail to listen now, but the girls can hear all right if you ask them to marry you.

BELOW on this page is the Republican Ticket we ask you to look over and familiarize yourself with before you go to the polls on Election Day, Tuesday, November 6th. It will be the first ticket on the huge ballot that will be handed you when you apply for a ballot at the polls. Remember, it is the first ticket and is headed with Lincoln's picture.

No other person's picture is shown on the ballot, and right under Lincoln's picture is a circle. To vote a straight Republican Ticket all you need to do is to draw a CROSS X in this circle, and then fold the ticket, and you will have performed the highest service you can render your country, your state and your county.

The National Ticket insures a continuance of the institutions and policies that have made our country the best place to live in the world. An endorsement of the State Ticket places us in a position in harmony with an administration that can be pointed to with unusual pride and satisfaction. An Administration that in one year did more for Northern Michigan than any other administration ever did during all its term of office.

A note for the County Ticket: The Republican Party has a list of candidates it can well be proud of, a list upon them. You will agree there is not a county in the state as efficiently and as truly served by its officers as is Charlevoix County. The Republican Party has a list of candidates it can well be proud of, a list upon them.

Go to the polls election day and make just one mark on your ballot and that a cross at the head of the ticket, and you will be performing a service you will never regret.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY COMMITTEE

REALTORS BACK- ING AMENDMENT

MICHIGAN ASSOCIATION TAKES AFFIRMATIVE STAND

Point Out Excess Condemnation Amendment Passed Would Be Benefit to Entire Public

The Michigan Real Estate Association officially reaffirmed its stand in favor of the proposed amendment to the state constitution granting to communities the right of excess condemnation, in a statement given out recently by executive secretary of the association, John A. Doelle of Lansing. "This is in line with action taken when the amendment was previously brought up for the consideration of the people of the state, but was defeated, due, Mr. Doelle believes, to a general misunderstanding of the real saving its enactment will mean to tax payers.

"The proposed Michigan amendment," Mr. Doelle pointed out, "would merely permit the community which is creating an improvement, a boulevard or high school or library or park, to condemn more property than is actually required for the work. It would pay owners what their property is worth. Then, after the improvement has been completed and property values around the project have been materially enhanced, the community may sell the excess condemned at an increased valuation, and thus or partly or wholly recoup the cost of improvement, rather than pay for it by increasing taxes."

Mr. Doelle emphasized the fact that realtors are vitally interested in all civic improvements, and at the same time placed equal emphasis on the need for keeping the taxpayers burden where it is, or lowering rather than increasing it. "This proposed amendment," the executive secretary continued, "offers a splendid solution to this problem by forcing public improvements to pay, or at least partly pay their own way. It has numerous other advantages also, and, insofar as we can see, no disadvantages or injustices, but its outstanding achievement will be the remedying of the serious injustice under which the American community has long labored, needlessly, as a penalty for its desire for better things in the way of public improvements."

JOSEPH LEMIEUR CALLED BY DEATH

END CAME MONDAY MORNING AT MASON STREET HOME

Injuries Received in Auto Accident Near Cheboygan September
25th Proved Fatal

Injuries received in an automobile accident between Maclewan City and Cheboygan on September 25th proved fatal to Joseph Lemieur and resulted in his death at 4:30 Monday morning at his home on Mason street.

Following the unfortunate accident, Mr. Lemieur had been confined to his bed, completely paralyzed from the shoulders down. His condition was such that no hope for his recovery was held, and, while causing great grief to his family, his death relieved him of going through the remainder of his life a cripple. Joe was well liked by all who knew him and his passing will sadden the entire city.

Mr. Lemieur was born September 25th, 1876 at Leland. He came to Charlevoix about thirty-five years ago with his parents, and had since made this city his home. About 21 years ago he was married to Miss Nellie Shiers, whose parents lived in Oregon. Three children were born to this union, viz: Mary, Madelyn and Ralph, all of whom survive. Mrs. Lemieur died at the birth of the son, Ralph. Other members of the family surviving are four brothers, Louis, Albert and Archie of Detroit, Phillip of Charlevoix, and a sister, Adelia, of this city.

Funeral services will be held Friday morning from St. Mary's church with Rev. Fr. Theodore officiating. Interment at St. Mary's cemetery.

RAIL LINE EXTENSION DENIED BY COMMISSION

Proposal of G. R. & I. Turned Down
By Interstate Commerce Body

The Interstate Commerce Commission has denied an application of the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad to build a 1.79 mile extension in the city of Petoskey, Mich., to connect with Portland cement plant there.

The plant is located on Little Traverse Bay. Construction of the line was opposed by the Pere Marquette railway. The G. R. & I., a Pennsylvania subsidiary, may ask for a rehearing of the case, it was indicated.

Utilities commission had approved the Pennsylvania request. Commissioner Eastman in a minority finding declared the ruling gives the Pere Marquette "something resembling a proprietary interest" in the freight traffic involved.

A fellowship supper and business meeting of the executive committee of the Charlevoix county council of religious education and pastors of co-operative denominations was held at the Methodist church at Boyne City, to discuss Sunday school extension. A county-wide religious survey was planned, also regular meetings of the council, which included the executive committee, pastors and Sunday school superintendents. HERBERT HOOVER NEXT PRESIDENT

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE GIVEN OVERWHELMING MAJORITY

Charlevoix Polls Largest Vote in History to Elect Full Republican Ticket

Climaxing a presidential, state and county election without rival from a point of interest, reports given us by the United Press wire through the courtesy of the Petoskey Evening News reveal the greatest victory on record for Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate for president of the United States.

Latest reports give Hoover a majority of 4,000,000 votes, with the count still mounting as results are obtained from more remote districts. Predictions are made that his plurality will be even greater than that of Harding in 1920, which was a record. With the states of Utah, Montana, Massachusetts and Texas still doubtful, Hoover has 416 electoral votes against Smith's 87. It will undoubtedly be the greatest Republican victory on record.

While the country was generally piling a majority for the Republican candidate, Charlevoix was busy making a record for herself by polling 1,037 votes, the greatest in years, if not the greatest ever. Throughout the day committees were busy seeking out those who had so far failed to visit the polls, with the ultimate result of probably a 90 per cent vote being cast. Charlevoix was not alone either, for the entire county fell in the line of march to voting booths.

The county went overwhelmingly Republican as it always had, although a new slant the number of Democrats within its boundary is now available. A matter in question in the minds of Republican nominees for county office is the identity of the one and only Republican voter in Peaine township, Beaver Island, who fearlessly cast his vote amid 71 Democrats. If his identity is learned it is probably a banquet will be arranged in his honor.

With the results of all 11 out of 25 precincts obtained, it is apparent all three amendments lost in this county, although no certain statement can be made until after the vote is canvassed.

The vote cast in the 25 precincts of the county for presidential, state and county officers, is as follows:

BOYNE FALLS MAN IS TAKEN ON WET COUNT

Still and Quantity of Liquor Found
By Local Officers

Edwin C. Ewing, whose farm is located three miles east of Boyne Falls, was arrested last Saturday by Sheriff Dave Vaughn and Deputy Charles Marshall for violation of the liquor law.

Officers searching Ewing's place found 100 gallons of mash, a still, coil and about a half gallon of alleged moonshine whiskey. Ewing waived examination in Justice Withers' court Monday morning and was bound over to the February term of circuit court under $800 bond, which was furnished.

The complaint leading to Ewing's arrest came from Mancelona, where four young men claiming to have obtained liquor from Ewing became unruly and smashed up the furniture in a hotel in that place.

SPAWN TAKEN SO FAR VERY LIGHT

ONE HUNDRED FORTY QUARTS TURNED IN AT HATCHERY

Lifts of Fish Are Also Far Below Average—Better Results Looked For Later

Unless the amount of spaw taken increases materially during the next two weeks of fishing, present indications are that the government hatchery here will have the smallest amount of eggs for the winter run in any previous year.

Up until Monday of this week, just ten days after the opening of the closed season, October 27th, 140 quarts of spaw had been brought to the hatchery. Of this amount, 40 quarts came from boats operating out of Beaver Island and the remainder from boats fishing out of this port.

At the same time lifts of fish have been exceptionally light, probably averaging around 800 pounds to a boat. The largest so far, a lift of 1800 pounds, was brought in Monday by John Nordrum. Other lifts of from 1000 to 1400 pounds have been made, although the average is light for this time of the year.

At the present time, 14 boats are operating out of Beaver Island and 10 out of Charlevoix. Conservation officers supervising spaw-taking here are still hopeful that as the season advances a greater percentage of spaw will be obtained. It is the belief that the spawning run is not at its height and it will take at least another week before satisfactory results may be had. Of the 800 pounds of trout lifted in illegally set nets off Gull Island Reef last Saturday, only one fish in twenty-five was a spawner, which would indicate that the season had been opened too soon.

TRUCK AND PLOW IS PURCHASED BY CITY

U. S. 31 and Streets in Charlevoix
Will Be Kept Open.

This winter will find Charlevoix well prepared to deal with the snow-removal proposition which confronts every Northern Michigan city.

"At a regular meeting last Monday evening, the council voted to purchase a truck and a snow plow for snow removal on U. S. 31 inside the corporate limits, for use on streets and highways leading into Charlevoix, and for maintenance and other street work during the summer months. Cost of the equipment is $4,201.50 with snow plow attached.

The truck purchased is a three and a half ton model with dump body and hoist. It is powered with 6-cylinder Continental motor developing 88 h. p. with 4-speed r. p. m. A dual clutch with 4-speed transmission, gives a range of eight speeds forward and two in reverse. The truck is a powerful one, built for the type of work for which it is intended.

The Charlevoix county road commission has also purchased a truck of the same model, only without dump body, to add to their present equipment.

FOOTBALL TEAM GOES TO E. JORDAN FRIDAY

Game Will Close 1928 Season for Red and White Squad.

Charlevoix high school will close her 1928 football season Friday afternoon when they meet the powerful East Jordan eleven at East Jordan. The game will commence at 3:00 o'clock Friday afternoon instead of Saturday as previously announced.

Efforts are being made by the athletic association to provide free transportation for 16 members of the team and about 12 members of the school band to East Jordan. Those planning to attend the game who have room for passengers are requested to call O. P. North or Bud Gill at the high school.

Coach Kipke is pointing his men for a victory over East Jordan, Friday, and a win will give them an even break for the season, with victories far offsetting four defeats received when the team went into a slump earlier in the fall. If they defeat East Jordan here last Saturday, East Jordan is due for an upset.

Dill Pickle Time. See announcement in this paper.—Adv. 44-11.

RED AND WHITE UPSET THE DOPE

WIN FROM HEAVY GAYLORD TEAM HERE SATURDAY

Marshall and Novak Star in Most Thrilling Football Battle Here in Many Years

In a game filled with thrills from the opening whistle, coach Kipke's Red and White football warriors evened the count with Gaylord Saturday afternoon on the home field by winning 13 to 7 from a team which came here top-heavy favorites to repeat their early-season victory over the local eleven.

While it cannot be said Charlevoix out-played the heavier Gaylord team, they out-smarted them and then displayed a brand of defensive football that checked the advances of the heavy Gaylord backs on several instances in the final period of the game when it seemed certain the visitors would make the touchdown to tie the count, or, by making the extra point, win the battle.

The two teams fought through the first quarter on even terms, this period ending with the score 0 to 0. Early in the second quarter, during an exchange of punts in which Marshall of the local team had a decided edge, Charlevoix recovered a fumble deep in Gaylord's territory. This bit of luck paved the way for the Red and White's first counter, made on a center lineback by Bill Novak, who also place kicked for the extra point.

Charlevoix did not enjoy a lead for long, for after receiving the kick-off Gaylord started a drive down the field which resulted in a touchdown and tied the score. Their counter came after an advance of over 60 yards on line smashes, first through one side and then the other. The local eleven were unable to stem the pile-driven attack of the Gaylord backs.

Gaylord received to open the second half and after failing in four attempts lost the ball on downs. On Charlevoix's first play, Marshall got away for one of his numerous thrilling runs skirting left end and outrunning Gaylord's secondary defensive for the second touchdown. A pass failed for the extra point.

Trailing by 6 points end with defeat facing them, Gaylord uncorked an attack of end runs and passes after the kick-off which looked good for a touchdown until they fumbled deep in Charlevoix's territory. Twice in the fourth quarter Gaylord advanced to within easy scoring distance, but it was in this period that Charlevoix displayed a defense which alone saved the situation and gave them victory. Twice Marshall pointed from almost beneath his own goal. To climax one of the most thrilling struggles seen on the local field for many years, the game ended with the ball on Charlevoix's 1-yard line.

Marshall and Bill Novak were the outstanding stars for the Red and White, while Miller was the consistent ground-gainer for the visitors. Charlevoix's victory Saturday evened the count with Gaylord, who won from the local squad earlier in the season. The victory also marked the home team as a serious threat to class C championship aspirants in future years.

You remember the laughs from "Flapper Grandma?" Just another swell play, even bigger, and better. See "Cupid-Up-To-Date" next Tuesday night.—Adv. 45-11.

NEW FISH LAW TO BE ASKED

WOULD DIVIDE STATE IN THREE DIFFERENT ZONES

Temperature Belts Would Be Basis
For Open Season Dates in Lower and Upper Peninsulas

Michigan will be divided into three zones, each with a different fishing season from the others, if the bill sponsored by the department of conservation is approved by the legislature.

The bill, drafted after a four-year survey, has been submitted to the governor and was discussed by the conservation commission in session last Friday. It provides for a division of the state, with different fishing seasons, according to temperature belts. Temperature it has been found, has an important bearing on the spawning time of the fish.

Lower Michigan, under provisions of the plan, will be divided into zones; the upper peninsula will comprise the third. Starting at Lake Michigan the division line for the lower peninsula will probably be the northern line of Oceana, Newaygo, Mecosta, Isabella and Midland counties, and will cut Bay and Huron counties into two sections along town line 16.

In the northern zone the season on bass and bluegills would open on July 1 instead of June 16 as at present. In the northern part of the lower peninsula the season would open on July 8, and in the upper peninsula the season would open on July 16. At present the season in the upper peninsula opens July 1. Graduations in the opening dates of the season would be made to give fish in different waters a chance to finish spawning before sportsmen could get at them. The season for bluegills will close on March 31; the bass season will close on January 1, both remaining at present.

Governor Fred W. Green and Conservation Director George R. Hogarth have termed the bill one of the most important pieces of conservation legislation being considered.

SECOND CLOSED SEASON VIOLATION UNCOVERED

Trout Lifted Last Saturday

A second violation of rules governing fishing in Lake Michigan during the lake trout spawning season was uncovered Saturday by officers in charge of the conservation department patrol boat Rambler, when they lifted five boxes of illegally-set nets and 800 pounds of trout off Gull Island Reef.

According to Warden Henry Fike, no arrest has been made at this time, although the acts are known to belong to James Martin of Beaver Island. Besides setting on closed ground, the violator must answer to charges of setting without buoy and using more than one gang of nets.

MONEY COMES BACK THREEFOLD

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY FAR-MERS WINNERS

Eveline Orchards Highest Winners of All Exhibitors—Harry Behling a First Winner

This year's Top O' Michigan Apple and Potato Show, held in Gaylord last week, was the largest and best ever held in Northern Michigan. A careful check up showed that a total of 510 exhibits of apples and potatoes competed for the fine premium money offered.

Charlevoix county was represented by a far better group of exhibits than last year, both in number of exhibitors and quality of exhibits. For the first time it was possible to have a county exhibit, which consisted of twelve individual pecks of Russett Rurals and "which was placed third in competition with six other counties. Otsco county again won the county exhibit, thus having a record of six successive triumphs. As near as can be determined, Charlevoix farmers won $269.00 in cash in addition to several special prizes, giving us the honor of being one of the largest winners in the show.

In the potato division, Harry Behling, Boyne City, won first on a bushel of certified seed of the Russett Rural variety. Harry merits this honor, as last year he won 4th in the same class, thus showing it was not luck, but skill. Again Chas. Koteskey, Horton Bay, repeated winning second in the same class, while last year he won first. Lee Sneathen, Charlevoix, gave us more glory by placing fourth on his bushel of certified seed. In addition, A. B. Todd, Boyne City, and W. H. Henley, Charlevoix, won awards of merit. Out of $100.00 offered in this class, Charlevoix was successful in winning $65.00. Not so bad. Lee Sneathen won first in the certified seed bushel class, with Irish Cobblers for another win. His peck of the same variety of potatoes won third, and his peck of Russett won an award of merit in the open class thus making him one of the heavy winners of the show.

In the peck class of Russett Rurals, W. H. Henley, Charlevoix, was our highest winner. His peck was the best in Charlevoix county, third in the beginners class, and seventh in the open class. Joe Lau of East Jordan, won fifth in the beginners class. A. Jensen, Walloon Lake, and A. B. Todd, Boyne City, won awards of merit, in the same class. A total of $130.00 was won in the potato section.

In the Apple division, the Eveline Orchards of East Jordan, repeated their feat of being the highest winner of the entire show. They were first in plate of Wolf River, Jonathan, and Starks Delicious, third in Wealthy, Spy, Golden Russett, and Grimes Golden, first in trays of Wolf River, Wagners, Jonathan, Golden Russett, Starks Delicious, Wealthy, second in trays of McIntosh, Snow, Spy, Grimes Golden, and any other variety, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and two awards of merits in the bushel class, and second, third, and fourth in the fancy pack class.

The Charlevoix Board of Supervisors appropriated $110.00 to permit the farmers' showing at this great show. For this $110.00, close to $300.00 in cash and special prizes came back to the county. Not a bad investment.

THE HAPPY FAMILY

"They do have such good times together."

Little Mrs. Turner's eyes followed wistfully the disappearing figures of the MacDougalls, her neighbors across the way. Lunch and camera and sweater-laden, with the dog bounding joyously before them, they were off—father, mother, and the three young MacDougalls—for a Saturday tramp in the woods.

"I was asking Mrs. MacDougall only yesterday," little Mrs. Turner went on, "how it is that although they all have special friends and hobbies of their own, they still manage to work and play and plan together so many good times. And do you know what Mrs. MacDougall answered. She laughed and said, 'Well I really think more than anything it's The Youth's Companion. In fact, I'm so sure of it that I should like to order it for a year as a present from our family to yours. Six months from now you can tell me if I wasn't right.'"

She realized the soundness of this statement. The one unalterable code of the country, a code that had been fostered till it eclipsed all others, decreed that a man should be loyal to the brand for which he rode. The whole fabric of the cow business was based on that one point.

"But now they'll work their deviltry all the stronger against the Three Bar," she predicted. "They could wreck us if they tried. You couldn't get a conviction in five years. Not a man would testify against one of Harper's outfit."

"Then we'll put on a fighting crew and hold them off," he said. "But that's not the layout that will be hardest to handle in the long run. Slade is the one real hard nut for the Three Bar to crack. He can work it a dozen different ways and you couldn't prove one of them on him to save your soul. He's one smooth hombre—Slade."

Harris rose and headed for his bed roll and the girl sought the shelter of her teepee for a rest. Her mind was busily going over the events of the day. She reflected that Cal Harris was at least possessed of self-confidence and that procrastination was certainly not to be numbered among his failings. It came to her that his interest in the present was identical with her own. As half-owner in the Three Bar it would be as much to his advantage as to her own to build it up. Waddle's warped legs prevented his acting as foreman on the job and it might be that the other man would find some way to prevent the link that was snipping the life from the Three Bar. His half-ownership entitled him to the place. Billie Warren loved her brand and her personal distrust of Harris was submerged in the hope that his sharing the full responsibility with herself might be a step toward putting it back on the old-time plane of prosperity.

She fell asleep with the crooning voice of the night hawk drifting to her ears.

It seemed but a few fleeting moments before Waddle's voice roused her.

"Holl out!" he bawled. "Feet in the trough!"

There was instant activity, the jingle of belts and spurs and in five minutes every man was fully clothed and splashing in the creek. It was showing rose and gray in the east when the meal was finished.

When, most of the men were mounted Billie urged Purpose over near Harris' horse.

"Do you know how to throw a circle?" she asked.

"After a fashion," he said. "I've bossed one or two in the past."

"Then we'd better be off," she suggested. "Since you're the Three Bar foreman it's for you to say when."

"I only pre-empted that job for ten minutes or so," he explained with evident embarrassment. "You surely didn't think I was trying to boost myself into the foreman's job for keeps?"

"No," she said. "But you're half-owner—and you can handle men. I'm giving you free rein to show what you can do."

Harris straightened in his saddle and motioned to the men.

"Let's go!" he ordered, and headed his horse for the left-hand flank of the valley. They ascended the first slopes, picked a long ridge and followed it to the crest of the low divide between that valley and the next. As they reached the head of the first draw that led back down into the valley Harris waved an arm.

"Carp," he called, and a middle-aged man named Carpenter, abbreviated to Carp, wheeled his horse from the group and headed down the draw.

A half-mile farther on they reached the head of another gulch.

"Hanson!" the new foreman called, and the man who repped for the Half-moon D dropped out. One man was detailed to work each draw and when some five miles up the divide there were but half the crew left. The foreman led the way to the opposite divide and doubled back, sending a man down every gulch.

Harris and the girl worked the last draw themselves and when they drove their cows out of the mouth of it they found a herd already milled, two hundred yards above the wagon. Harris left her and circled the bunch, estimating it.

When the last rider appeared with his bunch and threw it into the herd Harris signaled all hands to change mounts. Half the men repaired to the rope corral and caught up cow horses while the balance of the crew held the herd, each one relieving some other as soon as he had saddled a fresh horse.

A singebrush fire was burning fifty yards above the wagon and each man rode past it, leaped from his saddle and dropped his running iron in the flame.

The men worked round the edge of the bunch and slipped a noose on every calf that was thrown to the edge of the constantly shifting mass. Morrow roped the first calf and dragged it to the fire.

As much as she loved the round-up, many times as she had seen it, Billie Warren had never become calloused to the brutalities perpetrated on the calves. She withdrew and sat in the shade of the wagon. She was downwind and the dust raised by the trampling hoofs floated down to her, mingled with the odor of steaming cows, the acrid smoke of the sage fire and the hint of scorched hair and flesh.

In a short space of time the herd had been worked, the last calf branded, and Harris led the men up the bottom. Five miles up the valley, at the spot where he had crossed it a few hours before, they found the wagon waiting at the new stand, the corral refashioned and the remuda inside it. It was but ten o'clock but the first circle had commenced at four. The noon meal on the round-up was served whenever the first circle was completed. The men felt ravenously on the hot meal, changed to fresh circle horses and started again.

It was falling dusk when the herd gathered in the third circle had been worked and the last calf branded for the day.

At the end of the first week out from the ranch Harris pulled up his horse beside the girl's and showed her his tally book.

"We've run Slade's mark on more calves than we have our own," he said. "That's one way he works."

"But that's not his fault and it doesn't mean anything," she said. "His cows are sure to drift. This first strip we've worked is the southernmost edge of our range and his north wagon works the strip right south of us. We're sure to find a number of his cows. As we double back out our next trip we'll not find the same proportion."

"Not quite—but plenty," he predicted. "We've marked more calves for Slade in one week than all his three wagon crews will mark for the Three Bar in a year. The first three weeks of each season your men do a little more work for Slade than they do for you. It's a safe bet that the Half-moon D does the same, and so on through every brand that joins his range. That puts him way off ahead."

"But that is pure accident," she said.

"It's pure design," he stated. "His boys are busy shoving his cows from the middle all ways so that when fall comes they only been lightly fed over. They fall back on that for winter feed. Last winter, when cows were dying like rats, his men were out drifting Slade's stuff back toward his middle range."

"That's true enough," she admitted. "But—"

"But you thought he was doing it as a favor to you—getting his surplus off your territory so your own cows would have a better chance. That's the same kind of talk he floated all round the line; playing the benevolent neighbor when in reality the old pirate had deliberately planned, year after year, to overcrowd your range and feed you out."

"But his men would know," she objected.

"Not many of them would grasp the whole scheme of it," he said. "You hadn't thought of it yourself, and what if a few of them did surmise? They're riding for his brand."

The girl nodded. That unalterable code again—the religion of being loyal to one's brand. Not one of Slade's men would balk at doing it knowing, by each would do anything to advance his interests as long as he drew his pay from Slade.

As they talked Harris detailed men for each draw but when they reached the point where they were due to drop down and cross the valley he pulled up his horse.

"You take the rest of the circle, Carp," he instructed Carpenter. "I'm going to ride off up the rise a piece." The girl regarded him curiously. No less than three times in the last week he had stopped midway of the circle and asked her to complete it. Now he had turned it over to Carp and he signaled her to remain with him.

"Where are we going?" she asked as she watched the men ride down toward the bottoms. "And why?"

"Back the way we came," he said. "And maybe I can show you why."

He headed back the divide they had just followed until he came to the saddle at the head of a draw that led down to the valley. Far below them they could see a rider hazing a bunch of cows out into the bottoms. High on the right-hand slope of the gulch lay a notch, a little blind basin watered by the seepage from a slide-hill spring, and there on the green bed of it a dozen cows with their calves grazed undisturbed. For perhaps five minutes Harris halted slide-wise in the saddle and watched them. Then a rider appeared on the ridge that divided that draw from the next, dropped in below the cows and headed them back over the ridge into the draw from which he had appeared. Even at that distance she recognized this last man as Lanky Evans. Harris resumed his way down the divide and she knew that he had discovered some irregularity for which he had been seeking.

"Who was the man that overlooked those cows?" she asked. "Who worked that draw?"

"Morrow," he said. "His eyesight is getting bad. That's the second time this week—and the last."

"Then Morrow is an inside man for Harper," she said. "Drawing Three Bar pay and working against us, too."

"Yes," he said. "Only he's an inside man for Slade."

"But how could his leaving those calves behind benefit Slade?" she demanded.

"How could it benefit Harper?" he countered. "Can you tell me that?"

She could not and motioned for him to go on.

"None of Harper's men has a brand of his own," he said. "They're living on the move. They can't wait for calves to grow up. The way they work is to run a bunch of beef steers across into Idaho. They'll pick up another bunch there and shove them across the Utah line and repeat by moving a drove of some Utah brand up in here. Only beef steers—quick turning stuff. You know about the reputation of the O V and the Lazy H Four."

She knew all too well. There was a half-fend, a smoldering distrust displayed between cowmen on each side of the three state line, a triangle of ill feeling. It was current rumor that the O V and the Lazy H Four, ranging far southwest of the Three Bar, would traffic in any steers that came from across either the Utah or Idaho line. In the corner of those states were similar outfits that were receiving stations for rustled stock from the opposite sides. The triangular feud had been fostered to a point where the thieves were immune. Even if a direct complaint should be brought against them they had but to ride across into another state and a sheriff following them would be helpless, the inhabitants resenting this intrusion into their affairs by an officer from another state, truly having no right there, and refusing to aid him even if they did not actually oppose his passage.

"But how would it benefit Slade?" she repeated.

"Why, suppose that Morrow overlooked a nice bunch of Three Bar calves all along this first strip next to Slade's range," Harris said. "Then some Slade rider happens to drop along after our wagon has moved on and he hawks them off south. Later another picks them up and shoves them along another half-day's drive—way beyond where one boy ever work even beyond the strip covered by Slade's north wagon, the only one that carries a Three Bar rep; what then?"

John Gilbert in "THE MASKS OF THE DEVIL," a Victor Seastrom production with Alma Rubens. The drama all America is talking off. Greater than "Flesh and the Devil." Bigger than "Love." The story of a man without a conscience seeking and finding women that appeal to him—setting the pace in a life of magnificent abandonment. John Gilbert, the lover, adds to his usual ardor, a calculating disregard of all proprieties that might limit the scope of his enjoyment. You must learn what happens when such a personality is confronted with the first pure love of his life. A fiery, forceful role that will be ranked, without doubt, as among John Gilbert's greatest.

PRIVATE PEAT AT GYM LAST FRIDAY

WANTS WORLD TO MAKE PEACE WORKERS ITS HEROES

Says Trouble Has Been That Only Thrilling and Sublime of War
Have Been Told

Private Peat, lecturer, entertainer, historian, teacher, educator and traveler, paid Charlevoix a visit last Friday and in the evening told a large audience at the high school gymnasium his plan for world peace. The speaker came here as the first listed on the lyceum course sponsored by the board of education.

Peace, he explained, can only come through a direct and complete right about face on the part of the world historians, teachers, preachers, etc., who up to now have made war heroic and builded monuments only to war heroes. Peace must be made the thrilling adventure and peace heroes—preachers, teachers—doctors, etc.—must be the ones to whom monuments are erected; youth must be told all the tragedy, the terrible, and uselessness of war; nations must find some other way to settle international disputes.

Dedicates Life to Peace

He has dedicated his life, he says, to this end, and is attempting to tell in his clear manner the real story of war's hell in order that both young and old may understand.

He has phenomenal gift for making his experiences live for others. He "gets over" to his public his own flaming impressions of war gained from actual experiences of others which he has seen with his own eyes.

"When the war ended, its tragedy was too fresh to bear recounting. The world wanted to forget. New, ten years later, the true story of the war can be told. The tide of public interest has swung back to the days of the great war. People everywhere demand to know what really happened."

"I believe that people are entitled to hear the true story of the war—to know what war really is from the lips of a soldier who has lived it and seen it in all its grim reality. That is why I am telling what I know to be the true story of the war."

Private Peat is one of the unique personalities of the world war. When the war broke out Peat, a mere lad, was plunged into the crucible of the western front and baptized in war's concentrated hell. Wounded so grievously it seemed beyond the bounds of possibility for him to crawl back to life, through sheer luck he did come back with the fighting smile that made him famous.

"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, November 4.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished; but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered," (Prov. 11:21.)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health and key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let us remember that the eternal law of law which makes sin in its own execution, exempts man from all penalties but those due for wrong doing. Whatever it is your duty to do, you can do without harm to yourself," (p. 385.)

Gaylord Goes Down Before the Red and White

Last Saturday afternoon many spectators were present at the local field to witness one of the most exciting games of the year, the outcome of which was 13 to 7 in favor of old C. H. S.

The final whistle blew just as Gaylord was 2 inches from the Red and White's goal line, which if they had gone over would have meant a tie and perhaps defeat for old C. H. S.

Once before earlier in the game the Gaylord eleven were about a yard from the goal line when they fumbled and the ball was regained by the Red and White thus saving them from another touchdown to be placed against them.

Fight. Fight. Fight. That was the main thought of the fellows on the field, fighting for another victory for C. H. S.

Yell Harder. Was the supreme thought of the student spectators on the side lines and yell they did.

Next week the boys go to East Jordan for the last football game of this season for old C. H. S. East Jordan was defeated by the Gaylord's so why can't we win. Let's go over with the boys and yell for them to show we are still with them. Get the old pep and yell 'till you're speechless if you have to but yell and make a big noise so that East Jordan will find out what kind of a school we have and the sportmanship that goes along with the fellows whether in field or in hall.

Let's go gang—Everyone head for East Jordan next Saturday.

Lecture Course

The first lecture course number Private Pent gave us a very interesting talk, on the subject "War" last Friday night, November 2. We are sure that any one who attended the lecture was not by any means disappointed or felt that their evening was wasted. Private Pent brought out the horror, fury, uncanniness and hell of war. His stirring tale of the first Christmas Day and the temporary Armistice was full of tragedy, horror and bloodshed.

Armistice

War, the cry rang out through all the world. It called our men and boys to the front. They answered it heroically and fought bravely for their country. The loved ones at home were fighting day by day as great a battle as was ever fought on the battlefield.

Then the Armistice was signed and the soldiers rejoiced. The mothers and sisters and children waited impatiently for the return of their sons and fathers. There were those who waited hopefully but their hopes were never fulfilled. The Armistice ended war, November 11, 1918 and brought peace and prosperity to the American nation.

English

The Junior English class is studying the literature of the Revolutionary period. During the past week we have been reading selections by the writers of this time and have written a synopsis of each.

The sophomore English class have been studying the lives of two great authors Byron and Tennyson. In reference to Tennyson we learned his famous "Crossing the Bar." We also wrote a descriptive paragraph and gradually developed it into a short story. They proved to be very original and interesting.

Junior High School

The Junior High School boys in the seventh and eighth grade have started to take physical training.

The eighth grade is going to have a party Friday, Nov. 9th and we all hope to enjoy ourselves.

We had our exams last week.

Wednesday and Thursday. Every one did well we hope.

The Junior High School library has received a new set of "Knowledge Books."

The seventh grade geography class are making maps on Great Britain.

County Normal Notes

A short program commemorating the important days in October was given in the training room, the afternoon of the 31st.

American Education week is being observed by the County Normal class this week. On Monday one of the Normal teachers gave a short review of what American education week is, also a short discussion of the object, of each day, is given every morning. On Friday we shall complete our work on American Education week with a short program dealing with Armistice Day. A part of the period for Tuesday, November 6th was devoted to a discussion on the "Relation of the Home and School."

The county Normal class was given instruction on, "How to Vote Correctly," Tuesday afternoon.

A series of Health lectures and lessons, under direction of the state department of health, is to be given to the Normal class during the coming weeks. The first lecture, Miss Delavnn is to be with us on Thursday and Friday, November 8th and 9th.

Pep Meeting

"Yea team." The sound echoed through the various rooms and halls in the high school building Friday morning. Our yell leaders succeeded in arousing the patriotism in every student by the numerous yells we gave. Battling Chief McSauby gave us the idea on the big game and informed us that he intended to do his best. Mr. Coleman announces that if the football squad did no better playing football than they did writing on the English exam papers, Charlevoix would have slim chances of winning. After hearing from several others we gave nine rahs and three Charlevoix's which was the closing yell of a very "peppy" pep meeting.

General News

Mr. Otterbein has begun a series of talks which he intends to give before the assembly this week. Monday morning he spoke on "The Value of Education in Terms of Dollars and Cents." Tuesday he will continue on the same subject.

The typewriting department is viewing its ten nice new shiny students tables with delight. Miss Thomas on their arrival promptly moved from the cramped quarters into the new large typewriting room. This nice to have plenty of elbow room.

The senior school is putting to constant use the 30-volume set of Americana and the two new Webster's unabridged dictionaries.

The board of education has purchased some excellent material to aid the fifth grade pupils in arithmetic. It is entitled "Arithmetic Practice for Finding and Correcting Weaknesses in the Step Difficulties of the Processes."

Many discarded text books of past years are being sold to second hand book companies in Chicago. Other unsalable books are given to pupils or put on reading tables.

Mr. Otterbein has begun a museum of old text books in reading history, geography and other subjects as far back as 1884. It is impressive to note the progress made in these years in text books.

Four new high grade clarinets and saxophones have been purchased recently for the band. Payments on instruments are being made each week.

Miss Edith Thomas of the University of Michigan Library is to speak under the auspices of the P. T. A.

Every Child Should Read." Miss Thomas is a very capable and interesting speaker. The writer heard Miss Thomas speak on this subject a year ago. Everyone interested in good books should hear Miss Thomas.

Dedicated to "Johnnie"

Oh tell me where did "Johnnie" live,
And what did "Johnnie" do
And was she, Oh so young and fair,
And yet so wicked too?
Did "Johnnie" love a naughty man

I warrant "Johnnie" did no more,
Than many a "Johnnie" has done.

CONSTANT EXPANSION

—to serve Chevrolet owners better

SINCE January 1st more than a million new Chevrolets have been delivered to owners—making the Chevrolet Motor Company, for the second consecutive year, the world's largest builder of automobiles!

This outstanding achievement has been attained not only because of the quality and value of Chevrolet cars—but also because there has been a constant expansion of Chevrolet service facilities.

In order to bring these mammoth facilities of the Chevrolet factories to Chevrolet dealers and owners everywhere, there have been erected 26 huge parts warehouses in the principal centers of distribution. This expansion program is continually going on—for four great additional warehouses will be in operation by January first and seven more by the summer of 1929.

Into the service departments of all Chevrolet dealers, Chevrolet has brought special tools and shop equipment—designed under the supervision of Chevrolet engineers. This equipment definitely assures maximum speed and precision and the lowest possible cost in the performance of every Chevrolet service and repair operation—which are charged for on a flat rate basis.

Furthermore, all of these tremendous facilities have been made available to 15,000 authorized service stations manned by skilled mechanics, over 25,000 of whom have been factory trained to efficiently handle every repair operation on a Chevrolet car. In addition, there are over 4,000 other points where genuine Chevrolet parts may be obtained.

Uniformly efficient, uniformly reliable and within easy reach of everybody everywhere—this great service organization is maintaining at peak efficiency the fine performance for which Chevrolet cars have always been renowned.

We cordially invite you to come in and see how our service facilities reflect the influence of this great national service program.

If you are beautiful, charming, and have that indefinable power of attraction which is so necessary to screen acting, the movie-makers of Hollywood will beat a path to your door no matter in what wilderness or desert place you make your home.

Miss von Berne plays the leading feminine role, the sweet, unsophisticated girl who wins Gilbert's love from the women of the world type.

COWS PROVIDE GOOD POTATO MARKET

Tubers Compare Favorably With Corn Silage for Nutrients

The potato grower who has a dairy herd can find a profitable market for his small and cull potatoes by feeding them to the cows, according to a statement by the dairy department at Michigan State College.

A hundred weight of potatoes contains 17.1 pounds of total digestible nutrients, and the same amount of corn silage contains 17.7 pounds of nutrients. Potatoes, when used for feed give the best results if a legume hay and a balanced grain ration is fed with them. The tubers furnish heat and energy for the cows but do not contain the needed elements for milk.

The feeding of potatoes should be begun gradually. Small amounts should be given for the first few days and then increased until the maximum quantity, 20 to 30 pounds, is being fed. The potatoes should be run through a root cutter or chopped finely.

The tubers should be fed immediately after the cows are milked. This will prevent any tainting of the milk. Excessive quantities of potatoes sometimes cause a poor quality of butterfat.

The dairy specialists at State College say that a good ration for a 1,000 pound cow, which is giving 30 pounds of 4 per cent milk daily, is 25 pounds of raw potatoes, 10 to 12 pounds of alfalfa hay, and 10 pounds of a good grain mixture. This mixture can be made of 400 pounds of cornmeal, 300 pounds of ground oats, 50 pounds of linseed meal, and 50 pounds of 43 per cent cottonseed.

BOYNE CITY CO-OPS SHIPPING POTATOES

Last week eight cars of potatoes were shipped from this district to points south of the Ohio river, two cars going to Alabama. On Oct. 29 the first car of hay of the season was shipped and since then several carloads have gone forward. The alfalfa, second cutting, brings fifteen dollars.

Mr. Duworth believes there will be storage room enough for the crop as shipments are being regularly made. There is still storage room for small grains in the warehouses, a condition seldom experienced at this season.—Boyne Citizen.

IMPROVEMENTS AT LOCAL CEMETERY

PARK ALONG STOVER CREEK TO BE A BEAUTY SPOT

Stone Retaining Walls, Large Pool and Landscaping Features of Many Changes Made

A program of landscaping the portion of Brookside cemetery bordering on Stover or Cemetery Creek, which has been in progress for some time, is rapidly nearing completion, and when finished will be without peer as one of the city's beauty spots.

The entire flat on the north side of the creek has been cleared of all underbrush and only enough trees left standing to give the desired landscaping effect. This portion from where the stream strikes the west boundary of the cemetery down to the Washburn vault has been kept mowed during the past year.

The most extensive improvements, however, have been made from a point opposite the Washburn vault to the east cemetery line. The retaining walls have been constructed, one immediately below the terrace above the creek and the other along the north side of the stream bed. The walls are built of beautifully colored and well chosen split boulders and at intervals on the upper wall are concrete pedestals for flower pots. In order to construct the retaining wall along the north side of the stream, a channel was ditched across a now in the creek to divert the water.

Shortly below the point where the lower wall ends, a concrete dam has been built across the stream containing a gate which may be raised and lowered to govern the depth of water above the dam during low and flood stages. Directly north of the dam, on a point of land around which the stream bends, a 20-foot stone and concrete pool has been built with a beautiful stone flower pot in the center above the water level. A supply of water for the pool will be obtained through a 4-inch pipe connecting the pool and the stream and the over-flow goes through another pipe to the creek on the opposite side.

A concrete stairway leads down the terrace into the park and at its foot is a rustic bridge over the creek, while still a second similar bridge crosses the stream at another point. Rustic benches have been placed in several locations and the place otherwise beautified. From the streambed, all logs and obstructions have been removed and the creek ripples over the dam and series of rapids below through a setting almost to beautiful to describe.

The work is under the direction of the cemetery board, composed of William Wallace, James Simmons, Henry Block and Frank F. Bird, through whose efforts the fine improvements have been brought about.

RESPECTED CITIZEN DIED FRIDAY

STROKE OF PARALYSIS HASTENED DEATH OF MRS. GUILD

All Children Home for Funeral Services Held Sunday at Church of God Chapel

Friends and relatives of Mrs. Joseph R. Guild were grieved to learn of her death, which occurred at the farm home, four miles south of Charlevoix last Friday evening shortly before 7 o'clock. Mrs. Guild had been in ill health two years and after suffering a stroke of paralysis Thursday morning, November 1, gradually failed until her death.

Phoebe Elizabeth Purvis was born in Kent county, Ontario, September 22, 1863, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Purvis. At the age of 18 she was united in marriage to Joseph R. Guild at the same place and shortly afterward came to Charlevoix county, settling on a farm in Eveline township, where they resided for 16 years before moving onto their present farm four miles south of Charlevoix, where the family now resides.

To Mr. and Mrs. Guild were born 9 children, one daughter dying in infancy and another at the age of 16 years. Those surviving are one son, Arthur Guild of Charlevoix and six daughters, viz: Mrs. E. S. Herlihy, Mrs. H. D. Botkin and Mrs. R. E. McConnell of Flint; Mrs. L. O. Isaman of Ellsworth; Mrs. Charles Hartman of Detroit and Mrs. Jule Guild of Charlevoix. She is also survived by two sisters and one brother residing in New Jersey, another brother in Ontario and 10 grandchildren.

The children were all home for the funeral services, which were held from the Church of God chapel on Huribut avenue Sunday afternoon with Rev. George H. Pye officiating, assisted by Rev. Leroy Sheldon of Boyne City, an old friend of the family. Burial was at Brookside cemetery.

HELD UP AND ROBBED IN GAYLORD RESTAURANT

Edward Lynn, nightman at the Top O' Michigan restaurant in Gaylord, was pushed into a closet by two men early Thursday morning and robbed of $100. The bandits, who suspected that Lynn knew at least one of them, threatened him with death if he reported them, he said. Lynn called the sheriff's office and later two of the bandits were arrested and part of the money found. Both live at Gaylord and they have implicated another man. The names of the young men have been withheld by the sheriff's office because of their youth. This is the second robbery in Gaylord in two weeks.

WHY NOT "LITTLE SIX" ATHLETICS

NORTHERN MICHIGAN CLASS C SCHOOLS SHOULD COMBINE

Approximate Location of Six Schools of C Rating Very Favorable Factor

With the talk of forming a "Big Six" league in high school athletics now uppermost in the minds of school authorities of Petoskey, Cadillac, Traverse City, Big Rapids, Ludington and Boyne City, the suggestion came to us—why not a "Little Six" league?

In fact, as we look the proposition squarely in the face, our conclusion is that the formation of a "Little Six" league is as feasible, if not more so, than the other contemplated combine. Foremost of many reasons is the approximate location of six schools of class C rating in Northwestern Michigan. In this respect we have in mind the schools of Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, East Jordan, Gaylord, Manistowick and lastly, Boyne City, who have been included in the "Big Six" although they are a school of class C rating. Taking Boyne City as a center, the six schools are approximately the same distance apart, are of practically the same size, in the same class and, barring exceptional years, on a par as to strength.

The combine would undoubtedly lead to closer relations, between the schools above named and is a matter worthy of consideration. Each school could play one game with every one of the six making up the league and still have room for two other games to make up an eight-game schedule. The matter of the Northern Michigan class C championship would then be definitely settled on a percentage basis and the same ruling could apply to other athletic sports. While in the proposed "Big Six" only football is considered at present, other sports, such as basketball, tennis, track, golf could be included. With the growing interest in winter sports, hockey games might be brought into competition and even winter contests such as snowshoe races, ski jumping, tobogganing and the like.

Agitation for a "Big Six" league has reached the point where a meeting of newspaper men and authorities of the schools interested will be held at Traverse City Thursday evening, where it is likely the combine will be completed, by-laws and rules adopted and organization perfected.

It is our firm belief that if authorities of the schools we have suggested for a "Little Six" league are favorable to such an organization, the matter could be brought to a successful conclusion. In any case, there is no harm in the suggestion.

HUNTERS TREK TO THE NORTH WOODS

CHARLEVOIX WELL REPRESENTED IN VAST THROG

Season Opening at Daybreak This Morning Will See Around 75,000 Hunters Out

Charlevoix was well represented among the estimated 50,000 to 75,000 hunters abroad in Michigan's deer country when the fall mist lifted from the woods this morning at daybreak. In fact, probably the greatest number in many years made the trek to the upper peninsula and eastern deer cover this fall.

Conservation officials estimate there are more hunters in the woods than deer and there will be a lot of accidents if the boys with quick-trigger-fingers are not dead certain of their target before pulling. The chances for accidents will be many with every runway, tote road, hardwood and slashing overrun with hunters.

There isn't much chance for violators to plead ignorance, for the changes in the regulations have been few. The one-horn law still prevails with the three-inch horn limit, and the same holds true of the deer that can be killed for camp purpose under a special license costing $3 and signed by at least four camp members. The regular license fee is $2.50, with the button, for residents, and $50 for non-residents. This entitles the holder also to one bear. Metal tags similar to those used last year are also furnished and must be attached to the carcass as soon as it hits the ground. No shooting in the water or at fawns and does is allowed.

Of particular importance is the list of counties in which deer hunting is forbidden this year. They follow:

Allegan, Arenac, Barry, Bay, Benzie, Branch, Calhoun, Cass, Charlevoix, Clinton, Charlevoix, Eaton, Emmet, Genesee, Gladwin, Gratiot, Hillsdale, Huron, Ingham, Ionia, Isabella, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Kent, Lake, Lapeer, Lenawee, Livingston, Macomb, Mason, Mecosta, Midland, Monroe, Montcalm, Muskegon, Newaygo, Oakland, Oceana, Oscoda, Otsego, Saginaw, Sanilac, Shiawassee, St. Clair, St. Joseph, Tuscola, Van Buren, Washtenaw, and Wayne.

Among local hunters now in the woods are Glenn See, Sam King, Charles Hamlin and John Hallett, who established their camp near McMillan; Charles Heise, Pete Withers, Clarence Meggison and Bernie Ward, also Ed. O'Neill, Louis O'Neill, Fred Bergman and George Myler, and three Detroit friends, all located 12 miles east of Grand Marais; B. Nickerson and party in Ontonagon county near Lake Gogebic; Elmer Ingalls, Bert Elliot and A. B. Balch and son located west of Seney; Milo Todd and party at Ford River north and west Escanaba; Mr. and Mrs. M. Roy Brady and Hugh Brady at Henderson; Oscar Nelson, Jud Hardy, Floyd and Glenn Iken, also near Henderson; Herb Wakefield and Fred Coon, location unknown; Mr. and Mrs. Amos O'Neill at Seney; A. C. Belding and party north of Newberry and many others parties in the upper peninsula and east. In fact, so many have gone we were unable

OCTOBER REPORT OF COUNTY COWS

SOME 242 COWS WERE TESTED DURING THE MONTH

Average Production 542 Pounds of Milk and 22.7 Pounds of Butterfat

A total of 242 cows were tested with an average production of 542 pounds of milk and 22.7 pounds butterfat. September and October are usually low months and the cows in Charlevoix county are no exception to this. We hope to have much higher average production next month.

Nine cows were sold for beef and two were sold for dairy use. $10.63 was lost by five separators testing about 5,100 per cent.

Ten new rations were recommended and six members were feeding the last months rations as recommended by the tester. There are a few members who feed strictly according to recommendations and most are feeding approximately the correct rations. Several new names will be seen among the high cows this month.

In the 2-year-old class: 1st Wm. Withers, No. 10, 50.8 pounds fat; 2nd, William Withers, No. 27, 49.3 pounds fat; 3rd, Orchard Bay Farm, a purebred Holstein, 49.1 pounds butterfat.

3-year-old class: 1st, S. Ulvund, a grade Holstein made 46.0 pounds butterfat; 2nd, Walter Heileman, a grade Guernsey, made 38.9 pounds butterfat; 3rd, Oakley Saunders, a purebred Guernsey, made 37.9 pounds butterfat.

4-year-old class 1st, Orchard Bay Farm, a purebred Holstein, made 54 pounds butterfat; 2nd, S. Ulvund, a grade Holstein, made 40.9 pounds of butterfat; 3rd, Walter Heileman, a grade Guernsey, made 39.9 pounds butterfat.

Mature cows (above 5 years of age class): Orchard Bay Farm, a purebred Holstein, made 72.3 pounds fat; 2nd, William Withers, a grade Holstein, made 48.5 pounds butterfat; 3rd, Bert Elliott, a grade Guernsey made, 44.9 pounds butterfat.

Walter Heileman's herd of five grade Guernseys was high herd in his class with an average of 78.7 pounds of milk and 36.8 pounds of butterfat. No other herd qualified for honors in this class.

In the medium size herd (7 to 15 cows) Mrs. E. E. E. had a grade Guernsey and Guernsey, was high with 31.1 pounds butterfat; Oakley Saunders herd of 8 grade purebred Guernseys second with 30.5 pounds butterfat.

Large herd honors go to Orchard Bay Farm, 21 purebred Holsteins, average 32.3 pounds butterfat, no others qualified in this class.

RED AND WHITE WIN FINAL GAME

DEFEAT EAST JORDAN BY 20 TO 6 SCORE

Victory Friday Marked Charlevoix One of Formidable Class C Teams of Region

Charlevoix high school football team lived up to the predictions of its followers last Friday afternoon by decisively trouncing the strong East Jordan eleven at East Jordan by a score of 20 to 6. It was East Jordan's second defeat of the season and put them definitely out of the running for the class C championship of the region.

Charlevoix's victory Friday gave the Red and White an even split for the season on games won and lost with the count at four all. The victories over Kalkaska, Gaylord and East Jordan in the final three games of the season, marked them as one of the strongest class C aggregations in Northern Michigan and revealed the defensive and offensive strength of the team which had been hidden until after they had finally struck their stride.

Kipke's men got the jump on East Jordan in Friday's tilt and were never headed. Their initial score came in the first quarter on a pass, Marshall to Max Mook, end, and another pass, Marshall to Bill Novak, netted the extra point. East Jordan then received and advanced the ball 60 yards to Charlevoix's 6-yard strip, but here the Red and White displayed a defense as deadly as their offense and Jordan lost the ball on downs. Marshall punted out of danger. Again in the second frame East Jordan advanced to Charlevoix's 1-yard line where they run into a stonewall, lost the ball and Marshall again punted out of a bad hole.

It was at this point the Red and White started the march of 62 yards which ended in their second touchdown. A 30 yard pass, an end run by Marshall of the same distance placed the ball on Jordan's 2-yard line, from where Kirby went across. A pass netted the extra point.

To open the second half East Jordan received and Dennis went 20 yards on a pass. Quinn, Muma and Fry went 45 yards for Jordan's first and only touchdown, with Muma carrying it over. Charlevoix's third counter came in the fourth period after an intercepted pass. The goal came after two beautiful end runs by Marshall, one of 25 yards and another of 40, then a pass to Helms over the line. The try for extra point failed.

For Charlevoix, Marshall, the Novaks and Kirby played sensational football. In fact the whole team played the brand of football Friday of which they were capable the entire year had they only known it. Marshall's beautiful end runs were behind faultless interference. Kirby who made his first appearance in the line-up since his injury in the Boyne City game, was unstoppable. Marshall punted on an average of 50 yards or better, showing a great improvement over previous games. The line was a stonewall barrier and Charlevoix's ends picked off Marshall's accurate passes with regularity.

The teams four defeats were not due to lack of football ability, but to a normal slump, not only in members of the team itself, but also in the general public. To substantiate tion to the record crowd at the Boyne City game following Charlevoix's overwhelming victory over Onaway, and then the small handful of fans present at the Gaylord tilt after the home eleven had lost four games. It is apparent Charlevoix must have an unbeatable team in order to draw crowds. It should not be thus.

"The calves would still be with mothers wearing the Three Bar mark," she said. "After they leave the cows they're shooed, fair game for the first man that puts his rope on them—and Shude wouldn't risk running one of his own brands on them before they left the cows."

"Not one of his own, no," Harris said; "only one that's going to be his later on. Did it ever strike you as queer that Shude, whose way is to crush every new outfit, should suffer a soft-hearted streak every year or so and befriended some party that had elected to start up for himself right in the middle of Shude's range? And later buy him out? That's the way he came into nearly every brand he runs. Several of those dinky little owners have moved out right sudden with a dozen riders from some other outfit fanning along close behind; McArthur didn't even get moved, for Brandons went on the war trail before he had time to start. But it transpired that he was all set to go because Shude showed bill of sale for Mac's holdings, dated only the day before. That's how he came to own every one of those brands that match up so close with those of every outfit that overlaps his range."

They had turned their horses down a long ridge that led to the wagon in the bottoms.

"I'll mention to the boys that Morrow sold out the interests of the Three Bar while he was drawing down your pay. They'll pass sentence on him right sudden. Fair hours from now they'll have dry-gulched him so far from nowhere that even the coyotes can't find him."

"Not that," she said. "Turn him over to the sheriff. You caught him in the act."

"In the act of missing a few cows on his detail. The sheriff would hold him almost an hour before he let him go."

"Then give him his check and send him off the Three Bar range," she said.

Harris waited till the herd had been worked and the men had gathered round the wagon. Then he handed Morrow a check.

"Here's your time," he said. "You can be leaving almost any time now." Every man knew that Morrow had been caught in some place of work contrary to the interests of the Three Bar. The discharged hand gave a short ugly laugh.

"As soon as you pussyfooted into the foreman's job I knew it was only a question of time," he said. "Exactly," Harris returned. "Pack your stuff."

"A foreman has a scattering of a dozen or so men to back him up," Morrow observed with a shrug of one shoulder toward the rest of the men. Harris turned to the girl.

"I resign for about sixty seconds," he said and swung back toward Morrow; and again all hands noted his queer quivering stand. "I'm not foreman right at this minute," he said. "So if you had anything in particular to address to me in a personal vein you can start now. Otherwise you'd better be packing your stuff."

Morrow turned his back and headed for the rope corral. When he had saddled one horse and packed his effects on another he turned to Evans.

"You helped frame this on me," he said. "I thought I saw you messing over into my detail a few days back. One day right soon I'll run across you again."

"Then I'll take to riding with my head over my shoulder—surveying my back-track," Lanky promised. "Because we'll most likely meet from behind."

Morrow started to snarl an answer, his usual self-repression deserting him, but Harris waved an impatient hand.

"Bring it!" he snapped. "Get moving. If I had my own way we'd lead four horse out from under you—and we will if I ever hear of your turning up on the Three Bar range again."

Morrow turned with Harris on the last tip of the circle. There were but two men remaining with them.

"Moore!" Harris called, and the man turned his horse down the head of a draw that would lead him out into the bottom a trifle less than a mile above the wagon. Harris heard a shrill whistle behind him and turned sideways in the saddle to look back, saw that Moore had regained the ridge and was signaling. They turned and rode back to him.

"There's another," Moore said, pointing down the gulch. "It's getting to be a habit."

A dead cow lay on a little flat a hundred yards below. For three consecutive days some rider had found a fresh-killed Three Bar cow. Every animal had been shot.

"I'll look this one over myself," Harris decided. "There's only two more gulches to work. Each one of you boys take one."

The girl followed him as he turned down the first steep ditch. They pulled up their horses and sat looking at the cow. A trickle of blood oozed out of a hole between her eyes. Harris rode in a circle round the spot.

"He downed her from some point above," he said. "Not a sign anywhere close at hand." He surveyed the ridges that flanked either side of the draw and the little saddle-like depression at the head of it from which they had just descended. From beyond this gap came the shrill whistling of a horse, the sound chopped short as if a man had clamped his hand on the animal's nostrils to silence it. Harris turned swiftly to the girl.

"It's a plant," he said. "Ride—hard!"

He settled his notion to the words and jumped his horse off down the

"It's a Plant," He Said. "Ride Hard." Harris. He waved her over to one side.

"Keep well away from me!" he ordered. "They don't want you."

They hung their spurs into their mounts and the horses plunged down the steeply-pitching bottoms, vaulting sage clumps and bounding along the cow trails that threaded the brush. Two hundred yards below the cow draw made an elbow bend. The girl rounded it and as Harris followed a jump behind he felt a jarring tug at the caudle of his saddle and the little sharp crack of a rifle reached him. The gulch made a reverse bend and as they swept around it Harris swung sideways in the saddle and looked back. They were entirely sheltered from any point on the divide six hundred yards behind them. He pulled his horse to a swinging trot and they rode down the sloping meadow that led straight to the main valley.

"We didn't get started any too soon," Harris said. "His horse wasn't more than a hundred feet beyond the notch when he blew off and warned us—not time for me to get caught and drop him as he topped the ridge." The girl's eyes suddenly riveted on a small round hole in the caudle of his saddle where the ball had entered. On the inside and far to the left extremity of the caudle a ragged gash showed where it had passed out. The ball had not missed his left hip to exceed an inch.

She started her horse so suddenly that before he realized her purpose she was well in the lead and going at a dead run toward the mouth of the gulch where it opened out into the main bottoms two hundred yards beyond.

From the opposite slope riders were flinging cows out of their respective draws. The running-horse caught every man's eyes as the girl careened out into the center of the valley, rose in her stirrups and waved an arm in a circle above her head. In five seconds riders were whirling in behind her from all directions as she headed for the wagon.

She waved those already on the spot toward the rope corral.

"Change horses!" she called, and as each man rode in he caught up a fresh horse.

"Scatter out; some of you below where we came down, some above," she said. "Five hundred to the man that brings Morrow in."

"It's no use, Billie," Harris counted mildly. "It's a plant out of the country by now. It'll be dark in three hours—and it's right choppy country over there."

Waddles interposed and seconded her move.

"Let 'em rip," he said. "There's just a change."

Bangs was the first to change mounts. The boy's physical qualifications were as sound as his mental ability was limited and it was his pride to have a string of mounts that included the worst horses in the lot. He rode from the corral on Blue, hollering the big roar steady, and headed up the ridge a mile below where Harris and the girl had come down. Rile Foster close the next; five riders were but a few jumps behind. Harris did not change horses but searched heartily in his war bag and slipped the strap of a binocular case across his shoulders and rode off with the girl as she clutched her saddle on a fresh horse.

In less than five minutes from the time she had reached the wagon the last three far man had mounted and gone. Harris rode with her up a long ridge that led up to the divide; they followed another into the next bottoms and ascended the second divide. This was sharp and rocky, its crest a maze of ragged pinacles. He chose the highest of these and dismounted to sweep the range with his glasses. The high point afforded a view of every ridge for miles. After perhaps half an hour Harris caught five horse-men in the field of his glasses. They were riding in a knot.

"They've picked up his trail," he said. "That hell-hound is hanging a lead. We might as well be going."

They mounted and headed to the right along the divide.

"If Rile is in sight we can wait for him," he said. "And see if he's picked up any tracks."

A half-mile along the ridge they saw Foster cut through the breaks and he was working back their way.

"Thanks, Billie," Harris said. "For losing a circle trying to run him down."

"I'd have done as much for any Three Bar man," she returned.

"Of course," he said. "I'd have expected that. But all the same it shows that I'm progressing. Maybe my good qualities will grow on you until you get to thinking right well of me."

They waited till Foster joined them on the ridge.

"Bangs crossed over a mile below," Rile said. "We might pick him up."

"Any sign?" Harris asked as they moved down the divide.

"A bunch of shod horses went down through there a few days back," Rile said. "Three or four men likely, with a few pack horses along. He's pulled out."

"I saw him," Harris said. "He's gone."

They stopped in the saddle of the ridge where a fresh track showed the spot Bangs had crossed.

The girl was looking at Harris and saw a sudden pallor travel up under his tan and as she turned to see what had occasioned it he crowded his horse against her own.

"Don't look!" he ordered, and forced her horse over the far side of the ridge. "You'd better ride on back to the wagon," he urged. "There's been some sort of doings over across. Rile and I will ride down and look into it. Without a word she turned her horse toward the wagon."

"It's God's mercy she didn't see," Harris said, as the two crossed back over the ridge. "Isn't that a h—l of a way for a man to die?"

But the girl had seen. Her one brief look had revealed a horse coming round a bend in a little box canyon below. A shapeless thing dragged from one stirrup and at every third or fourth jump the big blue horse side-slashed the limp bundle with his heels.

As the two men reached the bottoms the frenzied horse had stopped and was fighting to free himself of the thing that followed him. He moved away from it in a circle but it was always with him. He squealed and kicked it, then dashed off in a fresh panic, side-swiping his pursuer.

Harris' rope tightened on his neck and threw him. As he rolled over Foster's noose snared both hind feet and he was held stretched and helpless between two trained cow horses while the men disengaged the bundle that had once been Bangs. One boot heel was missing and his foot was jammed through the stirrup, evidence that the horse had pitched with him and the loosened heel had come off, allowing his foot to slip through as he was thrown.

PETOSKEY REALTOR CLAIMED BY DEATH

Samuel Smith, Well Known in Business Circles, Dies Tuesday

Samuel C. Smith, well known Petoskey insurance and real estate man, who was found unconscious from loss of blood at his offices in the First National Bank building Monday forenoon of last week, died at three o'clock Tuesday morning without regaining consciousness. While Mr. Smith had been in failing health recently it is thought that decapency over business affairs brought about his collapse. He was fifty-eight years of age.

Mr. Smith was associated with his father, Chilton L. Smith, in the real estate and insurance and has been connected at previous times with a number of other business activities in Northern Michigan.

The church school topic at noon is "Religious Prejudice." There is a class for everyone.

Epworthians have been having some live topics for many weeks now and Sunday next begins a week of social and devotional comradeship in the League parlors. The social hour is at 7 p. m. and the devotional service at 7:45 prompt. All youth invited for every night—Sunday to Friday inclusive.

The pastor expects to begin a monthly series of addresses on "Art and Religious Messages" at the 7:10 meetings. Copies of these Pictures that French will be given away to those attending—a larger size to every tenth person. This week's topic and picture is "Sir Galahad and the Holy Grail."

This Thursday the "Litt" club meets with Mrs. Gornell on Antrim street.

THE REMEMBERED GIFT
"Remember—It's I should say I do!" The big man's face beamed with happy recollection. Someone had, in more or less of a business way, spoken of The Youth's Companion. And just the mention of its name—so far as business was concerned—broke up the meeting. But what fun those busy men had swapping recollections of the days when the arrival of The Youth's Companion was the high spot of the whole week.

Rare indeed are the pleasures that we remember so warmly over half a century of years. But The Youth's Companion is still among them.

Isn't there some boy or girl whom you would like to make happy with a gift subscription?

In its new enlarged and improved form as a monthly magazine, The Companion has more to offer its young readers than ever before—a full book-length novel complete in each issue; short stories and serials so thrilling they will never suspect them of being a "good influence" or the "right kind of reading"—articles by outstanding men and women that will fire their young ambition—comments on current affairs—puzzles, poems, guides to the best books and moving pictures—special departments for both boys and girls covering their own favorite activities. You may give some boy or girl a truly fine gift by accepting the following offer:

1. The Youth's Companion, 12 big monthly numbers, and
2. Two extra numbers to new subscribers ordering within 30 days and
3. A copy of "WE" in 12 colors framing size 18x24 inches. All for only $2.

MRS. DUDLEY BURIED AT HILLSDALE FRIDAY

Death Occurred at Daughter's Home Here Wednesday

Rev. and Mrs. Bernard G. Mattson mourn the loss of Mrs. Mattson's mother, Mrs. Caroline J. Dudley, whose death occurred at their home, Wednesday, Nov. 7th, after an illness of several years duration.

Mrs. Dudley was the widow of the Reverend Charles Denmore Dudley who in the early years of Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Michigan, was pastor of the Free Will Baptist church of Hillsdale and a professor in the college. Mr. Dudley died when the two daughters, Carolyn H. and Elizabeth M. were very small children. For many years Mrs. Dudley was a teacher in the public schools in Hillsdale and afterward for some fifteen years was the librarian of Hillsdale College.

Mrs. Dudley was a woman of fine intellectual attainments, dignity of bearing, reserved but gracious in manner, and possessed of great courage and practical sense. These qualities together, with her utter sincerity have bequeathed to her daughters the precious memory of a noble Christian character.

She had every comfort and care possible during her last illness and faced the inevitable end with beautiful courage and quiet calmness. Mrs. Dudley was seventy-four years of age at the time of her passing. The interment was in Hillsdale by the side of her husband, Mrs. Mattson accompanying the remains after a quiet service had been held Wednesday evening with a few friends of the church invited to be present, and conducted by her son-in-law, Dr. Mattson. Mrs. Mattson was met at Hillsdale by her sister, Carolyn H. Dudley from New York City, Thursday evening, and the interment took place on Friday, Nov. 9.

"CHUCK" DAGWELL MAKES GOOD WITH CHELSEA TEAM

Charles "Chuck" Dagwell, 4th year student at the U. of M., graduate of C. H. S., class of 1925, coach of the Chelsea high school football team this season, has brought out a winning team that has played remarkable football. His team has won practically every game played this season and now issues a challenge to play any Class C team in the state on a neutral field for the championship of this division. Chelsea has run up a total of 222 points in seven games to 19 for her opponents and this amount is made up largely of scores made on Class A and B teams. "Chuck" played good football while on the C. H. S. team and we are glad to mention his accomplishments with the Chelsea high.

MESDAMES FAULKNER AND PARTRIDGE ENTERTAINED

The most profitable age at which to slaughter hogs is usually between 8 and 12 months.

The best quality of meat can be obtained from a hog that is in good flesh and in a thrifty condition. Overfed hogs produce fatter hams, bacon and other cuts than the average family desires.

Control of the red-necked raspberry cane-borer, which occasionally causes injury to raspberry, blackberry, and dewberry crops in the eastern United States, can be accomplished by cutting and burning infested canes in the fall or winter.

In preparing the seed-bed for winter wheat following a cultivated crop such as soybeans or corn, there is considerable saving in labor if the ground is prepared by disking rather than by plowing, specialists of the U. S. department of agriculture state.

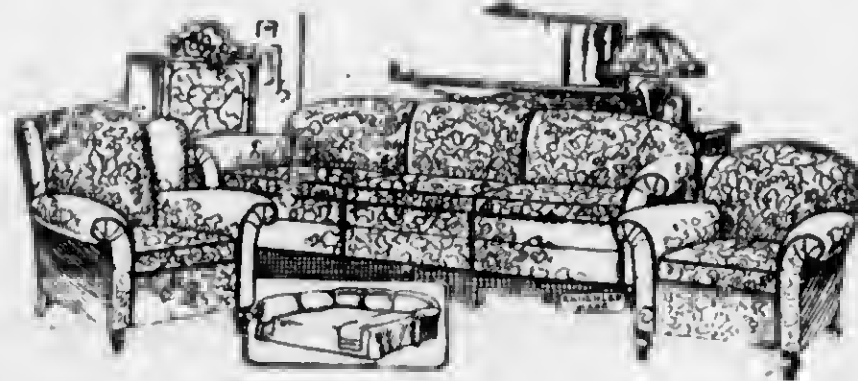

Fall-sown oats should follow crops that can be removed from the land in time to permit sowing in the early fall. Late seeding is one of the factors responsible for the low yield of fall-sown oats in the south, U. S. department of agriculture specialists believe.

The use of rubber shoes and rubber hoof pads, instead of plain iron shoes for horses that are worked on hard-surfaced roads, is often an aid in preventing corns and other foot ailments and usually lengthens the period of the horse's usefulness. This kind of shoeing is also valuable in preventing slipping on hard surfaces and reduces to a minimum the danger from falling.

To the first half-million new Ford owners

TO THE half-million men and women who have received new Fords in the last eleven months, there is no need to dwell on the performance of the car.

You have tested its speed on the open road. In traffic you have noted its quick acceleration and the safety of its brakes. You know how it climbs the hills. On long trips and over rough stretches you have come to appreciate its easy riding comfort. Continuous driving has proved its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep.

This is an invitation to you to take full advantage of the service facilities of the Ford dealer organization so that you may continue to enjoy many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring.

The point is this. You have a great car in the new Ford. It is simple in design, constructed of the best materials and machined with unusual accuracy. It is so well-made, in fact, that it requires surprisingly little attention. Yet that doesn't mean it should be neglected. Like every other fine piece of machinery, it will serve you better and longer if given proper care.

One of the best ways to do this is to take your car to the Ford dealer every 500 miles for oiling and greasing and a checking-up of the little things that have such a great bearing on long life and continuously good performance.

Such an inspection may mean a great deal to your car. To you it means thousands upon thousands of miles of motoring without a care—without ever lifting the hood.

Ford dealers everywhere have been specially trained and equipped to service the new Ford. You will find them prompt and reliable in their work, fair in their charges, and sincerely eager to help you get the greatest possible use from your car for the longest period at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the true meaning of Ford Service.

Pep Meeting

The yell leaders of C. H. S., B. Foster, A. Scott, and V. Ripley rushed to the platform last Thursday afternoon shouting "Everybody up! everybody yell, 'yell for C. H. S.'"

A great response came from the audience, especially the freshmen. Several accordion numbers played by Charles Novotny was greatly appreciated. A saxophone solo by Wayne Belding, accompanied on the piano by Augrie Scott, received much applause from the students and the teachers.

Second coach, Mr. C. Marshall gave an inspiring talk on football. The meeting was closed by our old favorite song, "Red and White."

English News

The Juniors have been studying the life of Thomas Jefferson, who was a dreamer of dreams and a doer of deeds. Monday Mrs. McKinley read to us the speech which President Harding gave at Arlington National cemetery in honor of the Unknown Soldier.

The Sophomores have begun their first classic, "Silas Marner," written by Mary Ann Evans or George Eliot. This is considered one of her best works and will undoubtedly prove to be very worthwhile.

COUNTY NORMAL NOTES

American Book week is being observed this week.

The first of a series of Health lectures was given Monday morning by Miss Delaven. We are looking forward to the coming of the second lecturer, Dr. Smith, who we hope will give us as much information in health.

Another Victory

Due to the skilled playing of our high school boys, Charlevoix won from East Jordan by a score of 20 to 6. The game had scarcely started when a touchdown was made by Max Novak. This was merely a beginning. After a few minutes of hard playing trying to keep East Jordan from making a touchdown, Crane Helms surprised the spectators by making touchdown number two.

Ty Kirby upon entering the game made a third touchdown for C. H. S. The final score resulting in favor of Charlevoix, 20 to 6.

The boys start basketball practice Wednesday. We hope they will continue with success.

The guests were received by a ghost. The table was set for thirty-two. Dinner was served at 7:00 o'clock. The evening was spent in games and Hallowe'en fun.

MURRAY SCHOOL NOTES

The 8th grade is making a study of the soil and its formation.

Our group picture came Monday and most every one has decided to take one.

Tuesday the 7th and 8th grade went over to take their first lesson in voting. The Australian ballot was fully explained by Andrew Struthers.

The 7th grade have completed their study of Michigan geography and have some very nice looking note books to show what they have done in two months. Donald McCalmon celebrated his first birthday Saturday. Nine of his little playmates came in the afternoon. Games were played after which a beautiful cake with one candle was served with jello.

Many of the Murray school attended the Carpenter school Armistice day program Friday night and pronounced it very good. Much credit is to be given to their teacher, Mrs. Coping, for the conduct of the pupils. The money made is to be used for the Handicraft Club work.

The little folks have received their new rubber ball and enjoy it very much. They have also some new story books.

Helen Shapton was absent one day last week due to the snow storm. We'll soon have to get out our snowshoes and brave the winter storms.

The big girls have nearly completed our new curtains. They surely give our school house a more homelike appearance. Our old tables also look real dressed up with their new oil cloth covers.

The large boys are anxiously watching for the mail man each day expecting him to bring their new basketball and goods. They have the hall ready to play in, having the windows safely covered with wire.

We were very sorry to have Beth Heise leave us. They left Sunday morning for Port Huron. We had a farewell party for her last Wednesday afternoon from three to four. We all had a very enjoyable time and all the apples, candy and peanuts we wanted to eat.

A Victim of Rheumatism all
This Time; Now in Perfect Health

MRS. W. FLINK

"I was a victim of rheumatism for 25 years and Konjola was the only medicine to give me lasting relief from these dreadful aches and pains," states Mrs. W. Flunk, 1222 Seldon avenue, Detroit, Michigan.

"Every joint and muscle in my body was effected and my limbs were so sore and swollen that it hurt me every time I took a step. I was also subject to attacks of neuritis thru my arms and shoulders. At times I couldn't raise my hands high enough to wash my face. Also, my stomach and kidneys were in a disordered condition. A day didn't go by without me suffering misery of some kind."

"Konjola drove all this poison out of my system, regulated my bowels and restored my stomach and kidneys to normal action. Now, my rheumatism is gone entirely and I enjoy perfect health in every way."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Over 500 Miles of Concrete Highways in a Single County!

Wayne county, Michigan, (Detroit) has over 500 miles of concrete highways, with pavements from eighteen to eighty feet wide.

Nineteen years ago, this county built its first concrete road. Year after year, the Board of County Road Commissioners has continued building concrete highways, to complete a road system planned in 1906.

Many of the older pavements have been widened. Some have been torn up to make way for wider pavements at a different grade—but no concrete pavement has worn out!

No wonder Wayne County keeps on building concrete roads!

FORMER CHARLEVOIX GIRL MARRIED

Smith-Frankie Nuptials Celebrate on October 24th

Palms and fall flowers formed the setting for the wedding of Miss Margaret F. Smith, daughter of John Smith of Charlevoix, and Phillip J. Frankie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Frankie of Chicago, October 24th in Detroit. Rev. Ralph Crissman of the Highland Park Presbyterian church officiated.

The wedding was solemnized in their own home at 8:30 in the evening in the presence of forty relatives and intimate friends. The bride was gowned in a charming model of shell pink chiffon. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and baby's-breath and was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Charles E. Hatch of Toledo, who wore a printed chiffon frock and carried an arm bouquet of butterfly roses and baby's-breath. The groom had his brother, Joseph Frankie of Chicago as best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Frankie left on a motor trip to Chicago and will be at home at 8 Arizona Ave., Detroit, after November 3rd.

Among the guests at the wedding those out of town were, the bride's father, John Smith of Charlevoix; the groom's mother, Mrs. Edward J. Frankie and brothers, Joseph and David of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hatch of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Purdy, Mrs. Thomas Shapton, Mrs. Edmund Shapton, Mrs. George Sands and Miss Helen Aymer of Flint.

PRICES REDUCED ON DODGE AUTOMOBILES

Benjamin Brown, Local Dealer, Announces a Big Cut

Price reductions, ranging up to $250 a car have been announced on all Standard and Victory Six models by Benjamin Brown, local Dodge Brothers dealer. The new prices are effective here immediately.

"All cars except the Senior Six line are included at these reduced prices," said Mr. Brown. "Cars on hand are the latest types with varied attractive color combinations and body styles to suit every taste. Sedans, two and four passenger coupes, Cabriolets, Touring cars and Roadsters are offered. Sport or DeLuxe types are available in addition to standard models."

"The announcement of cars at reduced prices is the result of aggressive work at the factory aiming at a single purpose—volume production and volume sales. Better manufacturing facilities, closer supervision and rearrangement of production operations have been reflected in improved quality and lower cost of these motor cars. These savings are now being passed on for the benefit of the buying public."

"At the time when the automotive dollar never represented a greater value, the latest motor creations of Dodge Brothers at these reduced prices present an unusual opportunity to automobile buyers. The advantage of owning a fast, new stylish and dependable six-cylinder car, outstanding in performance and unusually roomy, is brought within the price reach of millions. At the new low prices, the cars represent one of the most significant announcements of the year for the industry." Read the announcement on page 4 of this issue.

CHARLEVOIX'S QUOTA 249 CHRISTMAS SEALS

Annual Drive Will Start on Thanksgiving Day

The annual sale of Christmas seals in Charlevoix county will be officially opened on Thanksgiving Day when approximately 249,400 seals, addressed to residents of the county, will be placed in the mails.

November 29 will also mark the opening of the seal sale throughout Michigan. 84,000,000 seals, according to officials of the Michigan Tuberculosis association, will be placed on sale at that time in the eighty-three counties of the state. This figure represents an increase of 8,000,000 over the number distributed last year.

Statistics of the 1927 sale show that $538.18 worth of the seals were sold last year in Charlevoix county. The per capita sale, based on the population of the county, was 3.39. The per capita sale for the state in 1927 was 5.63.

Based on the figures of the 1927 sale, when the 76,000,000 seals which are placed on sale resulted in gross receipts of $247,443.78, M. T. A. officials estimate that $275,000,000 will be raised in the sale this year. Chest clinics, children's camps, educational lectures, scientific research, and health campaigns are included in the public health work financed by the seal sale.

WINNERS TO EXHIBIT AT STATE SHOW

Northern Michigan's Reputation to Be Continued

As a result of the fine accomplishments at the Top O' Michigan Apple and Potato Show recently held at Gaylord, many of Charlevoix county's prize-winning exhibits will be on display at the Michigan State Potato Show to be held at East Lansing in connection with Farmer's week. This show will surely indicate in what section or sections the best potatoes are raised and we believe when the smoke of battle has passed that Northern Michigan will again reign supreme.

At the present time 12 peck samples are already in East Lansing and placed in cold storage. These samples represent our Charlevoix county exhibit that placed third at Gaylord in competition with six other counties.

In addition the prize winners in the bushel class will be on exhibit. Four samples in this class will uphold Charlevoix county, as follows: The prize winner of Harry Behling, Russet Rural; 4th place of Lee Sneathen, Russet Rural; 2nd place of Chas. Koteskey, Russet Rural, and prize winner of Lee Sneathen in the Irish Cobbler class.

With these splendid displays from Charlevoix county at the state show we are sure every farmer in Charlevoix county will be deeply interested in the results of this show and can point with pride to this county.

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is but one way to heaven, harmony, and Christ in divine Science shows us the way. It is to know no other reality—to have no other consciousness of life than good, God and His reflection, and to rise superior to the so-called pain and pleasure of the senses." (p. 242.)

WESTERN MICHIGAN TENNIS BODY IN ACCORD WITH PLAN

Local Tennis Club Represented at Tennis Meeting in Grand Rapids
Last Week

The Charlevoix Tennis Club was represented at the meeting of the Western Michigan Tennis Association held last Wednesday in Grand Rapids by Fred E. Cartier and H. A. Craig.

At the business session of the association the matter of inclusion of three additional member clubs and the dropping of two member clubs was taken up. The Lawn Tennis and Bowling association of Masonic Country club of Western Michigan had its application for membership approved, as was also an application of the Highland Park Tennis club accepted tentatively during the past season. A request for membership from a Kalamazoo club was acted upon favorably and final approval of the latter club's formal application was left to the association directors.

The Muskegon Tennis club was one of those dropped from membership, leaving the Muskegon Country club as the only member in Muskegon, and representatives of the Grand Rapids Boat and Canoe club present indicated the Grand Rapids club also would not seek to continue its membership. It is understood the Boat and Canoe club will not function next season, at least as organized at present, and it was dropped, the Western Michigan body going on record as favoring inclusion in membership any organization which may take over the club facilities.

Dr. Richard R. Smith, retiring president, and Earl S. Irwin, treasurer, also retiring, were tendered votes of appreciation for their services over several terms. New officers were named as follows: President, G. Douglas Stengel, Grand Rapids; vice-president, Archie L. Livingston, Charlevoix; secretary and treasurer, John McGinnis, Grand Rapids; directors, Dr. Richard R. Smith, Charles W. Boltwood, Earle S. Irwin, Dr. Alden H. Williams and Ted L. Joslyn, Grand Rapids, and Hilton A. Piper, Muskegon.

Arrangements for tournaments of the 1929 season were left to the directors, the Wednesday meeting expressing favor toward holding the western Michigan tournament, which was at Battle Creek in 1928, in Grand Rapids next summer. It also favored assignment of the Michigan closed tournament for residents of the state to some club in either the Saginaw valley or Detroit association next year. This tournament was held in Grand Rapids last summer. The western Michigan body was in accord with sending the Michigan open tournament held in Saginaw in 1928, to Charlevoix next year and will seek approval of the other two sectional tennis bodies in bringing this about.

With Charlevoix's selection for the Michigan open tennis championship practically assured, indications are that two major tournaments will be held here next summer. The Michigan Riviera, newly inaugurated for the summer of 1928 drew the usual number of state and nationally known tennis stars, headed by John Hennessey, Davis cup player, here last August.

Inasmuch as the Western Michigan association went on record as favoring the Michigan Riviera again next year, officials of the Charlevoix Tennis Club indicate both tournaments will be staged, with emphasis, as far as publicity is concerned, to be placed on the state open, which is by far the most important.

POLAR BEARS PREPARE FOR SEASON'S OPENER

Meet East Jordan Quintet Here
Next Thursday Evening

First preparations of the season for the Polar Bears, Charlevoix's independent basketball team, got under way last week when candidates for the team turned out for practice at the high school gymnasium. At an organization meeting held early last week, members of the Polar Bears chose Allen Campbell as their manager and to him will fall the work of handling business affairs for the team and scheduling games. The opening contest will be held here Thursday evening, November 29th, with the East Jordan independent quintet.

Several former high school basketball stars will play on the team, including Ted Cooper, Gordon Todd, Dean Davenport, Glen Ikens, Earl Harrington and possibly George Higman. Others include Coach Kipke, Stewart Coleman, Dallas Henry, Vernon Gimble, LaVerne Heise and others. Four men from last season's strong independent five will likely play and indications point to another strong combination.

Practice sessions have been held several evenings since early last week and starting next week will be held each night. A full schedule of games is now being prepared and will be published later.

NOVEMBER MEET WELL ATTENDED

MRS. HENRY JACOBS HOSTESS
TO W. C. T. U. MEMBERS

Topic "Peace" Covered in Instructive Manner in Paper Given by Mrs. E. E. Cross

The November meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, held last Friday with Mrs. Jacobs, was largely attended.

Mrs. E. E. Cross read a very instructive paper on "Peace," which was the topic assigned for the day. The paper was given in a most interesting manner and the meeting was a success.

The desire for peace is greater than it was at the close of the World War and this has come about largely through education. There is a power of opinion against war such as never existed before.

Not only is it conceded that war is wrong, that it is criminal, that it is terrible, but it fails as an instrument of national policy.

A strong appeal was made to the women to support every movement for peace and to prepare themselves by studying the intricacies of politics and the underlying principles of government to take a hand in the crusade against war.

War is essentially destructive, while woman's nature is characteristically constructive. Women see more clearly than men the horrors and futile madness of war; they realize that almost no cause can justify the wholesale massacre of their own children and they believe that war should be ruled out as a method of settling international disputes, at any rate among the civilized nations of the world.

The Kellogg Peace Pact sounds reasonable and the necessity for building more war ships is to be deplored but the discussion which followed the paper showed that the majority present were in favor of preparedness and think that it insures peace.

The December meeting of the Union will be held with Mrs. Milner.

NET STATE $296,619.50 DURING TEN MONTHS

State ferries across the Straits of Mackinac netted the state $296,619.50 during the first ten months of 1928, the state highway department gives out. During the same period of 1927 the boats returned $258,518.25. Although this is the first year three boats have been used on the straits, the ferries are expected to show the state a net profit when they close for the season, Frank Rogers, highway commissioner believes.

TRAVERSE HIGH NORTHERN CHAMP

DEFEATED PETOSKEY FOR TITLE LAST SATURDAY

Boyer City Claims Class "C" Championship by Her Defeat Over Mancelona Eleven

The tables were completely turned at Petoskey last Saturday when the Traverse City high school football team won the Northern Michigan championship for 1928 by completely outclassing Petoskey 26-0 on a slush and water covered field. Last year Petoskey won the championship by defeating Traverse City.

The Traverse lads probably played the best football they had shown this year, under blizzard conditions. Wet snow fell all afternoon, drenching both players and spectators. Traverse did not allow Petoskey a single first down, while it marked up 9 of its own. The champions were undefeated this season, although they were tied by two teams in their class.

By virtue of her 12 to 0 victory over Mancelona a week ago last Saturday, Boyer City claims the class C championship of Northern Michigan. We haven't been able to figure out just how they base their claim as yet. Mancelona went through her season with one defeat by a class C team, that at the hands of Boyer City. At the same time the heavy Boyer City outfit met a stumbling block at Harbor Springs, a class C school, and lost. Figuring on a percentage basis of games won and lost, Mancelona certainly should be entitled to a tie in the championship race, even though they were defeated at Boyer City.

Boyer City had one of their best teams in years during the past season. They stepped out of their class to tie Cadillac, they gave Petoskey a good trouncing and were beaten by the championship Traverse City team. But even considering their fine record, the defeat at the hands of Harbor Springs should be a deciding factor in the championship race. Football titles should not be decided by one team defeating the other, but by figuring the season record of a school.

As long as the two school involved are satisfied, nothing more need be said, but from a neutral viewpoint one comes to the conclusion that the Northern Michigan class C football title should be a tie between Boyer City and Mancelona. At any rate, such controversies are another argument in favor of the "Little Six" league mentioned in last week's issue of the Courier.

CHURCHES UNITE FOR THANKSGIVING

UNION SERVICE AT CHURCH OF GOD SUNDAY EVENING

Program of Attractive Music and Other Features Being Arranged
—Address by Dr. Mattson

The Charlevoix pastors have taken note of the fact that the observance of Thanksgiving Day has become more and more an occasion of family and social gatherings. They have therefore decided this year to make an effort to secure a large and representative response of the people of the community by planning for a union evening service with specially attractive program on the Sunday preceding Thanksgiving Day which will be the coming Sunday, Nov. 25.

The service will be held in the Church of God, being the first time a union service of this character has gone up on the hill. The little church is doing an excellent work under the leadership of the present pastor and the other pastors have been most heartily desirous of holding this meeting there.

In the good old days when the public platform and the pulpit played a larger part in moulding public opinion than the present mighty instrument known as "the public press" it was more generally the custom for Thanksgiving Day to be made the occasion for the serious and often ponderous discussions of public questions, solemn exhortations against the prevalence of public evils and the advocacy of needed reforms. Nowadays when newspapers are owned in chains like grocery stores and dry goods stores and predigested substitutes for thought are absorbed by our too intellectually lazy public, the churches may perhaps render a real service in harmony with the tone of the various proclamations issued by the president of the nation and the governors of the several states, and emphasize the aspects of our national, state and community life for which we do well to give devout thanks to a beneficent Providence. This may be done without in any sense copying the complacent Pharisee who thanked God that he was not like other men, "even this poor publican."

A fresh and wholesome appreciation of our blessings and a new inventory of the common grounds for gratitude is a very worthwhile mood to cultivate. It will be the aim of this coming Sunday evening union service to produce such a mood in the minds of our fellow citizens. A program of attractive music and other features is being arranged. The sermon will be preached by Rev. B. G. Mattson, pastor of the Congregational church. The service will begin at seven o'clock, central standard time. The general public in and about the city and country side is heartily invited to be present. In accordance with ancient custom a Thanksgiving offering will be taken and devoted to some local worthy cause.

Cold weather is coming. Protect the cooling system of your car with Prestone. It is the only perfect anti-freeze on the market. One filling will last all winter and give you absolute protection in any temperature. It is used by the U. S. government and leading truck and bus lines. MOOSE LODGE LAUNCHES BIG MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Dancing Party, Nov. 26

The organization department of the Loyal Order of Moose under the supervision of Fred Krakoske of Grand Rapids, have sent George J. Herriek and Fred Leonhardt into this district for an extended membership drive.

The drive got under way Sunday, November 18, at 3:00 p. m., when a special meeting of the local Moose lodge was held in the I. O. O. F. hall. As a result of this meeting Charlevoix residents interested in Moosehart, the school that trains for life, are invited to attend a meeting at the I. O. O. F. hall Friday afternoon, November 23rd, at 2:30, at which time George J. Herriek will give the story of Moosehart.

This meeting will be open to everyone interested in child welfare. As a climax to the membership drive, a dancing party will be given by the local Moose lodge, Monday evening, November 26, at 8 o'clock at the Odd Fellow hall, to which the public is invited.

In conjunction with the state membership drive, Charlevoix lodge, No. 786, Loyal Order of Moose, has adopted the slogan: "Every Member Get a Member for This Drive."

NORTH LOSES ANOTHER MILL

CHEBOYGAN BURNS

One of Few Remaining Large Outfits in this Part of Upper Michigan

The Petoskey Evening News says another one of the few remaining saw mills in Northern Michigan went off the map Thursday, when the Embury-Martin plant at Cheboygan was destroyed by fire.

Starting while a gale was blowing Thursday morning, the flames quickly surged beyond control, three firemen suffered injuries.

The lumber yard containing five million feet of rough lumber was saved. The mill was completely burned and was a smoldering mass of hot ruins within an hour after the blaze was discovered.

The Embury-Martin plant was Cheboygan county's one remaining sawmill of major dimensions and received a part of its logs by water from upper Michigan. In earlier days, the Olds sawmill and the burned plant were considered heavy operators, the combined output of the two mills exceeding forty millions per annum.

Their logging operations tapped several counties, early spring seeing the inland route streams clogged with booms from Pickerel, Burt and Crooked lakes and headed for the Cheboygan mills.

Emmett's two remaining saw mills of old-time proportions are the Jackson & Tindle plant at Pellston and the George B. McManus operation in Petoskey, while twenty years ago there were in excess of twenty operated saw mills in the county.

No plans have been announced by the Embury-Martin management, although it is hoped and expected that the plant will be rebuilt along possibly smaller lines than when first erected.

Yachting enthusiasts are displaying great interest in the new yacht of R. E. Olds of Lansing and Charlevoix. The new craft is Diesel-driven and is the largest yacht in the country to be operated by crude-oil engines. The "Michigan Manufacturer and Financial Record," of Oct. 20 says in regard to Mr. Olds' latest yacht:

"R. E. Olds, Lansing manufacturer, is in New York to witness tests of his new yacht, powered by two Hill Diesel engines made in Lansing. The yacht is the largest in the country operated by crude oil-burning engines and is to be demonstrated before nautical engineers and marine architects.

BASKETBALL PRACTICE HAS STARTED

RED AND WHITE ARE DEFENDING CLASS C TITLE

Fifteen Games Scheduled, Starting With Ellsworth Here Wednesday, November 28th

With around 35 candidates from all classes in high school reporting to Coach Kipke's first call for basketball material, practice got under way last week for the 1928-29 season.

Two important tasks confront Coach Kipke this season. One is to produce a team capable of defending Charlevoix's position as class C champion of Northern Michigan and the other to find a forward to fill Lyle Beaudoin's shoes. With Max and Bill Novak, Bill Supernaw and Dick Marshall of last year's championship team back in uniform, the first problem does not assume such serious proportions, but men of Beaudoin's caliber are not to be had every day in small town high school athletics.

The outlook is not altogether gloomy, however, for an inspection of new material and a casual glance at men who substituted on last year's team and played in several games would give any coach a good deal of satisfaction. "Vic" Smith, a substitute last season, played better than average basketball as a member of the seventh and eighth grade teams and last year as a freshman played in many games while a substitute on the varsity. He has taken on considerable weight during the summer and is available for either a guard or forward position. "Cornie" McCall, another sophomore, has a like record and, although a trifle light, is fast on the floor, shoots accurately, has plenty of experience and is a likely candidate for a forward position. Helms, Kelderhouse and Bleha and a good number of other candidates are also out.

In order to give every man an opportunity to show his stuff during the opening week, Coach Kipke divided the group into class teams and this week is staging class games. The series opened Monday night and ends Wednesday night, during which time each class team will meet the other for one game. Following Wednesday night's contests, the coach plans to cut the squad down to about eighteen men and the pre-season grind of practice will be on in earnest.

A schedule of nine home and five out-of-town games has been arranged by the athletic association. The opening game will be at Charlevoix, Wednesday, November 28th, when the Red and White take on Ellsworth. Other games scheduled are:

MRS. EZRA BURKE

"Konjola has meant so much to my rundown system that I want others to know about this wonderful medicine and that is why I am making this public indorsement," said Mrs. Ezra Burke, Route No. 1, Shiloh, Michigan, (near Grand Rapids).

"About two years ago I began having all kinds of trouble with my stomach. I couldn't eat a meal without suffering from indigestion and heartburn afterward. Even at night I was in misery and I would get up in the morning feeling worse than I did before going to bed. Then I developed rheumatism. My legs and arms were so sore and stiff from swelling that I could hardly use them. The worst of it was, nothing seemed to help me."

"Since taking Konjola every ache and pain in my body has disappeared and my stomach is again in perfect condition. Really, I never expected the relief it gave me, and that is why I strongly indorse it to others."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Rending room: Tuesday and Saturday afternoons, 3 to 5 p. m.

The public is cordially invited to attend our services and use our reading room.

"Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian-Science churches on Sunday, November 18.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was one following the Bible: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," (II Cor. 5:1.)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mortals are not like immortals, created in God's own image, but infinite Spirit being all, mortal consciousness will at last yield to the scientific fact and disappear, and the real sense of being, perfect and forever intact, will appear." (p. 295.)

Why Not Put
the Half-Billion to Work?

Six thousand lives lost—a half-billion in property destroyed by fire every year! What a tragic, needless sacrifice!

Every owner pays a share of the annual half-billion loss—whether he has a fire or not. He pays it in insurance, taxes and depreciation.

Most of this loss occurs in structures of comparatively small size; common sense has forced fire-safe construction of new large buildings.

Sound financing will not always permit making a small structure completely fire-proof. But a small increase in cost will yield a large increase in fire-safety.

Competent architects say that a fire-safe first floor of reinforced concrete will increase the cost of the average dwelling about two per cent—and even less in larger structures. Statistics indicate that at least thirty per cent of residential fires start in basements. A first floor of reinforced concrete will effectually protect the upper structure against a basement fire.

Single dwellings, small apartment houses, stores, hotels, factories, warehouses, theatres, and churches can have the fire-hazard reduced to minor proportions by employing reinforced concrete for first floors, stair enclosures and other vital locations. The additional cost is surprisingly low—and the reduced fire-risk only one of the benefits.

Why not put the half-billion to work?

Harris pointed to a burnt red streak across the light side of Bangs' neck. He unbuttoned his shirt and revealed a similar streak under his left armpit. Old Billie cursed hoarsely and his face seemed to have aged ten years.

"They learned that from the old man," he said. "It's an old trick that always works. They dropped a rope on him and jerked him, pried off his head, shoved his boot through and laid the quilt on his horse. Blue did the rest."

Both men knew well how it happened. Bangs had run across the camp of some of the wild bunch, men he had known for long, and the slow-thinking youth had suspected no more danger from riding on up to them at this time than at any other. He had told them of the shot fired at Harris and they had known that some other Three Bar man would find the trail leading from the direction of their camp. And Bangs would mouton having found them there, linking them with the lawbreaker.

When Bangs had left a pair of them had hidden a distance with him and accomplished their aim.

"It's coming dark," Harris said. "And by morning they'll be thirty miles away. That sort of a killing was never fastened on to any man yet."

The old man raised a doubled fist and his face was lined with sorrow. "Bangs was almost a son to me," he said. "I taught him to ride—and we've rode together on every job since then. You hear me! Some one is going to die for this!"

During the next week the girl inwardly accused the men of heartlessness. They festered as carelessly as if nothing unusual had occurred and she heard no mention of Bangs. It seemed that it took but a day for them to forget a former comrade who had come to an untimely end. Little Foster had disappeared but on the fifth day he turned up at the Three Bar wagon and resumed his work without the least explanation of his absence.

The old man was gloomy and silent, his face set in sorrowful lines as he went about his work, and it was evident that he was continually brooding over the fate of the youth he had loved.

Billie could not shake off the remembrance of the boy's adoring gaze as his eyes had followed every move she made and in some vague way she felt that she was responsible for the accident. She often rode near Little Foster, knowing what was in his mind. He spoke but little and, in common with the rest, he never once mentioned Bangs.

At the end of a week Slade rode up to the wagon as the men were working the cows gathered in the second circle of the day. He jerked his head to draw her aside out of range of Waddles' ears.

"How's the Three Bar showing up this spring?" he asked abruptly.

"Better than ever," she retorted and he caught a note of defiance in her voice.

"You're lying, Billie," he asserted calmly. "The Three Bar will show another shrinkage this year."

"How do you know?" she flashed; and the distrust of him that Harris had roused in her, lately submerged beneath the troubling thoughts of Bangs, was suddenly quickened and thrown uppermost in her mind.

"I know," he asserted. "It's my business to know everything that goes on anywhere near my range. You say you want to run the Three Bar brand yourself. There's not a man in this country that would touch a Three Bar cow if you was looked on with me."

"And then the Three Bar would be only one out of a dozen or more Slade brands," she said.

For no reason at all she was suddenly convinced of the truth of Harris' suspicions concerning Slade. She noted that his eyes traveled from one man to the next till he had scrutinized every one that worked the herd.

"Are you looking for Morrow?" she demanded, and instantly regretted her remark. Slade's face did not change by so much as the bat of an eye and he failed to reply for a space—too long a space, she reflected—then turned to her.

"Morrow—who's he?" he asked. "And why should I look for him?"

"He rode for you last year," she said.

"Oh! That fellow. I recall him now. Bleak-looking citizen," he said. "And what about him?"

"You tell me," she countered. "That new foreman of yours—the fellow that was scouting round alone for a few months—has been talking with his mouth," Slade said. "If he keeps that up I'll have to ask him to speak right out what's on his mind."

"He'll tell you," she prophesied. "What then?"

"Then I'll kill him," the man stated. The girl motioned to Lanky Evans and he rode across to them.

"Lanky, I want you to remember this," she said. "Slade has just promised to kill Harris. And if he does I'll spend every dollar I own seeing that he's hung for it," she turned to Slade. "You might repeat what you just told me," she suggested.

Slade looked at her steadily. "You misunderstood me," he stated. "I don't recall any remark to that effect or even to mentioning the name of Harris. Who is he, anyhow?"

Evans slouched easily in the saddle and twisted a smoke.

"Now let's get this straight what I'm to remember," he said. "Mr. Slade was saying that he planned to down Cal Harris the first time he caught him out alone. I heard him remark to that effect." He turned and grinned cheerfully at Slade. "That's his very words—and I'd swear to it as long as my breath held out. I'll sort of repeat it over to myself so that I can give it to the judge word for word when the time comes."

Slade favored him with a long stare which Lanky bore with unconcern, smiling back at him pleasantly.

"I've got my little piece memorized," Evans said, "and in parting let me remark that Cal Harris will prove a new sort of a victim for you to work on. If you do into him he'll tear down your meat-house." He turned his horse and rode back to the herd.

"I'll play your own game," the girl told Slade. "If anything happens to another man who is riding for me and I have any reason to even suspect you were at the bottom of it I'll swear that I saw you do the thing yourself. The Three Bar is the only outfit with a clean enough record to drag any thing up for an airing before the courts without taking a chance. Told rule of every man for himself won't hold good with me."

She moved toward the wagon and Slade kept pace with her, leading his horse.

"You're a real woman, Billie," he said. "You better throw in with a real man—me—and we'll own this country. I'll run the Three Bar on ten thousand head whenever you say the word."

"I'd rather see it on half as many through my own efforts," she said. "And some day I will."

"Some day you'll see it my way," he prophesied. "I know you better than any other man. You want an outfit of your own—and if the Three Bar gets crowded out you'll go to the man that can give you one in its place. That will be me. Some day we'll trade."

"Some day—right soon—you'll trade your present holdings for a nice little range in hell," a voice said in Slade's ear and at the same instant two large paws were thrust from the little window of the cook-wagon and clamped on his arms above the crook of his elbows.

Slade was a powerful man but he was as infant in the grip of the two great hands that raised him clear of the ground and shook him before he was slammed down on his face ten feet away by a straight-arm thrust.

His deadly temper flared and the swift move for his gun was simultaneous with the twist which brought him to his feet, but his hand fell away from the butt of it as he looked into the twin muzzles of a sawed-off shotgun which menaced him from the window. The face behind the gun was the face of Waddles.

"I'm about to touch off a pound of shot if you go acting up," Waddles said. "Any more talk like you was just handling out and you'll get what you deserve."

"Are you running the Three Bar?" Slade asked.

"Only at times, when the notion strikes me," Waddles said. "And this is one. Whenever you've got any specific business to transact with us why come right along over and transact it—and then move on out."

Billie Warren laughed suddenly, a gurgle of sheer amusement at the sight of the most amused man within a hundred miles standing there under the muzzle of a shotgun, receiving instructions from the mouth of the Three Bar cook. For Slade was helpless and knew it.

"Waddles, you win," he said. "I'll be going before you change your mind."

As the man walked toward his horse which had sidled a few steps away, the big cook gazed after him and fingered the riot gun regretfully.

The wagon did not move on when the man had finished working the herd, as the rest of the day had been set aside for him. An hour after Slade's departure the hands were rolling in for a sleep. The girl saw Lila Foster draw apart from the rest and sit with his back against a rock. He was regarding some small object held in his hand. As he turned it around she recognized it as a boot heel and the reason for Billie's absence was clear to her. He had back-tracked the blue horse in the scene of the mishap.

She was half asleep when a voice some distance from the teepee roused her by speaking the name of Bangs. "I've a pretty elastic conscience myself," the voice went on. "I'm not above lifting a few calves for the brand I'm riding for or any little thing like that, but this deal sort of gorges up in me. They'll never elch it on to any man—they never do. Old Billie is brooding over it. He'll likely run amuck. One way or another he'll try to break even for Bangs."

Billie recognized the voice as Moore's and knew that one of her men, at least, had not forgotten Bangs. It was the first time an intimation that the affair was other than an accident had reached her ears.

The calf round-up was nearing its end. Two weeks would see the finish and supply the final tally. Harris sat on a rock and reviewed the plans he had formulated.

Harris Sat on a Rock and Reviewed the Plans He Had Formulated.

on a rock and reviewed the plans he had formulated for the salvation of the Three Bar brand, realizing the weak spots and snapping out some special line of defense that might serve to strengthen them. In the conclusion of the wagon Waddles was carefully rereading a much-thumbed document for perhaps the hundredth time. A man had come in at daylight with the mail from Billie's and Billie Warren was within her teepee poring over her share of it. The men had finished their and were sleeping.

The girl read first the four letters in the same handwriting, one to mark each week she had been on the round up. The fifth was from Judge Cohen, her father's old friend, to whose hands all his affairs had been entrusted. After scanning this she read again the other four. Very soon now, in the course of a few months at the outside, she and the writer would meet away from his native environment and in the midst of her own. All ways before this had been revealed and her association with Carlos Deane had held a background of his own setting—a setting in startling contrast to her log house nestling in a desert of sage. The Deane house was a wonderful old-fashioned mansion set in a grove of century-old elms and oaks. She knew his life and now he would see her in her natural surroundings.

 AT THE MOVIES *****

Reputation Urge to Great Effort It's rather hard on a chap to be called "the John Barrymore of Hungary"—unless he can live up to it.

That's what they called Paul Lukas. But he did live up to it and now occupies an enviable position in motion pictures as the result.

Since his arrival in Hollywood he has appeared in the following Paramount productions, "Loves of an Actress," "Three Sinners," and "The Woman from Moscow," all with Pola Negri. Then came "Hot News" with Bebe Daniels, and "Manhattan Cocktail" with Nancy Carroll and Richard Arlen. This latter picture will be the Palace Theatre feature Saturday and Sunday.

"Extra Battles Lead to Success" Richard Arlen battled Hollywood's extra ranks for three years before he got the "break" which started him straight up the ladder leading to success in motion pictures.

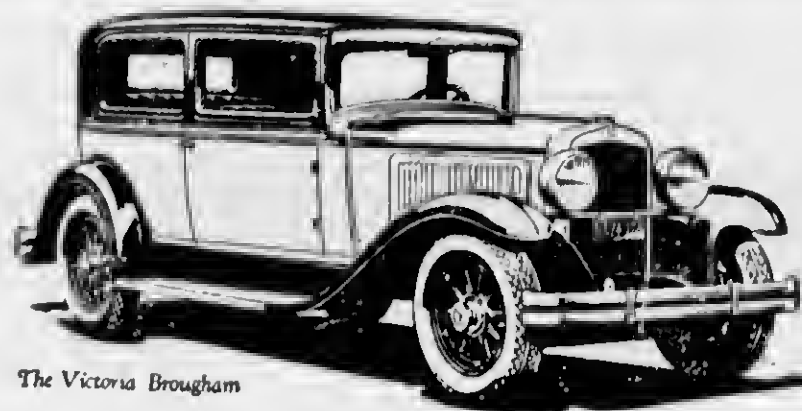

After he got his big chance in "Wings," he shot straight up the line. Since then, in rapid succession, have come leads in "Feel My Pulse,"

The hen that lays a small egg is a bad influence. It takes nerve to cull her out of the flock, especially if she is a high producer, but rigid culling of small-egg hens must be done to improve the flock and to avoid price cuts that go with small eggs.

Don't overwork your alfalfa patch. Alfalfa that goes into the winter with considerable growth will come out in better condition in the spring. Too late pasturing or cutting may kill a stand. For new seedlings that have not made much growth, light dressings of straw help to reduce the chances for winter injury.

The old saying that "beauty is only skin deep" may apply to the soil. Many farmers assume that if the surface of the land looks good, it is all right, and disregard possible hardpans and other impenetrable subsoils which retard drainage, prevent the upward movement of soil moisture and resist root penetration. The best way to know the soil thoroughly is by a soil survey of the county. The Bureau of Chemistry and Soils of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has mapped and described the soils of more than half the agricultural counties of the United States.

Lack of housing and of proper care of farm machinery means a loss in dollars and cents. By housing farm machinery, its life is doubled and the annual repair bills cut in half, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Machinery should also be painted and the polished surface greased to prevent excessive rusting.

In order to have a good sweet clover pasture next year, plow the land this fall so that the seedbed will be ready for early spring. Either fall wheat land or fall plowed fallow land is good for this purpose. Sweet clover sown in March will be ready to pasture at least four weeks earlier than if sown in April and the plants will be nearly twice as large.

Plumbing pipes exposed to the winter weather may prove more troublesome than the old "teakettle and pump" combination. Remember the pipes that froze last winter? For protection, commercial coverings, or homemade wrappings of felt or burlap, may be used; or parts of the pipes may be boxed and surrounded with material such as sawdust, straw, or granulated cork.

For two seasons the U. S. Range Live Stock Experiment Station, Miles City, Mont., has made a comparison of the value of alfalfa hay alone and alfalfa hay supplemented with cottonseed cake and corn silage for wintering beef calves. To date the results have indicated that alfalfa hay alone will give equally as good results as when supplemented by these other two feeds which are not readily available in that section.

Your dairy cow may be getting all the nutrients she needs, but is her ration well balanced? For example, if the cow's maintenance requirements and production are such that she needs 2 pounds of digestible protein and 14 pounds of non-protein feed nutrients, the protein can be supplied by feeding her 20 pounds of timothy hay and 19 pounds of corn, but she will get about 8 pounds more of the non-protein feed nutrients than necessary. By substituting 3 1/2 pounds of cottonseed meal or some other feed equally high in digestible protein for 14 pounds of the corn she will be just as well nourished and the feed cost will be much lower.

Asparagus Aid

A gardener in Massachusetts has an asparagus planting more than 100 years old and still good. Look upon the asparagus patch as a long-time investment—to pay dividends next spring and many succeeding years—in succulent, tender shoots, and give it some care this fall. Clean away the old tops when frost has stopped their growth and burn them. Remove all weeds and spread an inch or two of good garden loam over the bed. Next summer at the close of the cutting season give the bed a dressing of a good mixed fertilizer and a heavy coating of composted manure. Keep the bed free from weeds all summer and see to it that the plants are not injured by asparagus beetles. If you desire bleached or white asparagus during the cutting period mound the soil over the rows to a depth of 5 or 6 inches but remove the extra soil as soon as the cutting season is over.

Straw Mulch—A Good Cover for the Strawberry Bed

A "blanket" for strawberry bed should be provided to protect the plants from the severe drying winds of winter and from injury due to the "heaving" action of the soil moisture. Some sort of a mulch covering is advisable, especially in the northern part of the Middle West, or in regions where alternate freezing and thawing occurs in early winter and in the spring and in the fall. Some muck, clay and sandy loam soils from which the water does not drain readily, are especially notorious as "heavers" when they freeze and thaw, and the plants may be thrown entirely out of the ground or their roots broken so they will dry out and die. Among the materials used in mulching are stable manure, straw, pine needles, wild hay, and crops grown for the purpose. Straw is perhaps more commonly used than any other material. It should of course be free from grain and weed seeds. In general the time to mulch is as soon as the ground is frozen hard enough to bear working over or when the plants ceased active growth. The mulch should be scattered over the beds so that some will fall on the plants, but more of it between the rows. In the spring the plants will grow up through the straw, and the berries will thus be kept clean.

Prolong the life of shoes in winter time especially those worn by men and boys without rubbers, by soaking the soles in a grease that will make them waterproof. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends several simple formulas for the purpose.

Rice can be soaked in an open kettle in 15 to 20 minutes. A large quantity of water should be used. As soon as the grain pressed between the thumb and forefinger is soft and has no hard portion in the center, the rice should be taken from the fire, drained, covered with a cloth, and allowed to steam until the grains swell and separate.

In cake recipes with a number of eggs, it is possible to substitute baking powder for one of two of the eggs called for, during the period of eggs scarcity. Of course the cake will not be as rich as when the eggs required are used. Allow one-half teaspoon of baking powder and two tablespoons of oil for each egg omitted. From half to two-thirds of the eggs called for should be used even when this substitution is practiced.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be opened by the Supt. of Lighthouses, Milwaukee, Wis., 2 p. m., December 10, 1928, for the sale of unused Lightship, No. 56. Information upon application.—4713.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Melencamp

Within the past three weeks considerable time has been devoted to organizing Boy's and Girls Clubs throughout Charlevoix county and it has been very gratifying to note the interest and enthusiasm being shown by some 100 young boys and girls, who have already enrolled in clubs.

This form of extension work conducted by the county agent has been very popular and is reaching a considerable number of young folks with instruction in making many articles along the lines of manual training and domestic science, that otherwise would not be available to them. All of the clubs are organized in the rural schools in the county and in the majority of cases directed and led by the school teacher.

At the present time 15 different clubs are organized and have started work, name of school, leader, address and number of members appearing as follows:

Handicraft Clubs

1. Slaughter, Virgil M. Wise, Boyne City, 6.
2. Rainy, Ruth Stroud, East Jordan, 7.
3. Hilton, Lottie C. Webster, Charlevoix, 5.
4. Walker, Jesse Moore, East Jordan, 8.
5. Tainter, Josephine Ellis, Boyne City, 6.
6. Burgess, John Struthers, Charlevoix, 6.
7. Barnard, John Clarke, Charlevoix, 13.

Clothing Clubs

1. Nowland, Clara Daugherty, Charlevoix, 7.
2. Tainter, Josephine Ellis, Boyne City, 5.
3. Deer Lake, Vera Halverson, Boyne City, 6.
4. Hilton, Lottie C. Webster, Charlevoix, 6.
5. Burgess, Mrs. A. Evers, Bay Shore, 10.
6. Walker, Mrs. Kindsen, East Jordan, 5.

Hot Lunch Clubs

1. Tainter, Josephine Ellis, Boyne City, 9.
2. Wildwood, Irma Gibbs, Boyne City, 15.

With this fine number of clubs already organized and the splendid interest and pep manifested there is not a doubt but that a very successful year will be enjoyed in club work.

Now is the time you will need that Willard storage battery for your car at prices that cannot be undersold. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 41tf.

Oysters are in season again. They are extremely valuable as a source of various minerals needed by the body. Like other fresh fish, they supply iodine, and should be eaten when possible if other sea foods are hard to get. If you like fried oysters, dip them in egg and bread crumbs, and then let them stand a while to harden the coating before frying.

Senior Class

Miss Hilda Cook, while performing acrobatic stunts on a chair in typing class, suddenly answered to the law of universal gravitation and found herself occupying a space on the floor, much to the surprise of the rest of the typing class and her instructor Miss Thomas.

Miss Struthers: Rosetta, why would you use "I" in that sentence? Rosetta: I had "me" on my paper and you marked it wrong. Mr. Alexander: Jane, what kind of measure would you use to measure milk? Jane: Wet measure.

The School Library

We are sure that the school enjoys the library very much. The girls and boys of the seventh and eighth grades seem to enjoy these books more than any of the others: "Tales from Shakespeare," "Tom Swift and His Giant Cannon," "The Girl Scouts Canoe Ship," "Tom Swift and His Air Glider," "Nations at War," "Blue Bonnets in Boston."

News of the Grades

The fourth grade are preparing for Thanksgiving. They are memorizing a Thanksgiving poem.—Teacher, Miss Munson.

The sixth grade are observing "Book Week," November 11-18. Posters and pamphlets have been received from the National Association of Book Publishers. Children are urged to become acquainted with good books and authors, in order that they may use the library more intelligently. Many good books lists are at their disposal.—Teacher, Miss Milner.

When we held our last fire drill a couple of weeks ago, the elementary building was emptied in 10 seconds less time than it has ever been before.

The first grade have organized a "Toy Symphony Orchestra." Little Bobbie Weststaff is our director.—Teacher, Miss Wilson.

We have a new drum in the Kindergarten. It is made from a large hat box and is painted red and white.

We have received an order of modeling clay and are having a good time making circus animals.

The fifth grade children have been collecting and mounting bird nests for their nature museum. Many interesting specimens have been procured.

Commercial Department

The new appearance of the Commercial Room is very pleasing to all, including both students and teacher.

This different arrangement has been made possible since the typewriters have been moved from one corner of the room to the adjacent room which last year served as the Latin and French room.

The chairs and desks have been turned to face in a different direction. This new arrangement makes it possible to have better ventilating and also gives us more light from the windows. The appearance is, in addition, more business like.

Although the students have done good work in the past, we expect that they will do better now, because of the more ideal conditions for work.

An Alarming Situation

The faculty members are both surprised and alarmed to learn the fact that of the senior class in American history which constitutes the goodly number of 56, only five people know the first word of the Declaration of Independence.

What are we going to do about this alarming situation?

Is this true, in other classes? Does a small percentage of our pupils prepare their daily assignments? Does the pupil know the meaning of words the author of the text uses? If not, where will we find out?

Do we find out? If not are we making good the opportunity given us—the public school?

Will some members of the American History class give his or her opinion and remedy for this situation in next week's issue of school news department? Let us hear from several members of the class.

Students in other classes are welcome. We would like to hear about your department.

Are You Dependable?

Think what our school would be like if no one would be dependable. If the janitors were not dependable we would freeze on school days. If our teachers were not dependable we would have no classes. Right now you might think that would be convenient, but it would be annoying to spend three hours on a lesson only to have the teachers not show up.

Sometimes we annoy our teachers by not being reliable. We don't always hand in our reports on time or come to class unprepared and maybe we don't study at all. Yes, even the best of us are not reliable at times although we are more so than others. Why is this true? Tell us. But after all, the best we can do is to try. Do we all try? Do we do our best? We might make it easier for other people even though we don't like to be depended upon. Therefore, let us do our best and do it every day.

CONSERVATION NOTES

Duck hunters are being asked to forward to the Department of Conservation, game division, the "crop" and gizzards of the birds which they shoot. The contents of these organs will be examined in connection with the duck survey which the division is making and will help answer the question, "What do wild ducks eat in Michigan."

When this question is answered, real progress can be made in the planting of suitable vegetation to increase the supply of duck food in countless lakes and marshes.

Sportsmen sending in such crops and gizzards are asked to keep them chilled until they can be sent by parcel post. Stomachs of the different duck species should be kept together and should be labeled so as to show the species, and where, when and by whom the ducks were shot.

If hunters are in doubt as to the correct name of any of the ducks which they shoot, and if they will send in a wing of the unknown bird, it will be identified by the Game Division, Department of Conservation, Lansing.

The executive committee representing the paper manufacturers of Michigan will meet at Lansing sometime between December 5 and 15 for the purpose of reorganizing and making more active the study of efficient mill waste disposal. This committee has completed a general study of their problem. However, it now seems necessary to subdivide this committee for detail study of individual problems.

Michigan muskrat trapping industry has been an important one in past years without anyone knowing to what extent it was being carried on. Previous to the issuing of licenses this fall, few persons have ever realized that more than 20,000 citizens plan to trap muskrats on land where they do not live. The office force of the department of conservation knows better than anyone else just how great the demand was for permits, as all applications were made to the main office.

Besides the mail applications which served to multiply the department's daily work manifold, thousands appeared in person for their licenses. The office workers were obliged to work far into the night and spent at least one holiday attempting to issue the licenses promptly. During the last few days of the rush, hundreds of applicants stood in line outside the offices waiting their turn.

Final figures on the total number of licenses issued will be announced just as soon as the department gets its breath and can straighten out the mass of work remaining to be done. Every effort was made to see that everyone wanting a license was supplied before the season opened on November 15.

FAVOR CHARLEVOIX FOR STATE TOURNEY

portant tournament ever given to the local club. It would seem, however, leaving all bragging aside, that name makes no difference with Charlevoix's tournament when it comes to their attraction. We always draw a large following from state and nationally recognized tennis players and the city's popularity in the tennis world has grown rapidly.

Several factors have combined to make this possible. First, officials of the local club have worked hard for our recognition. The city's fame as a resort is another big attraction, the manner in which the tournaments have been conducted has added to our popularity and most important of all is the part the Inn and its manager, A. I. Croamer has played. Each year The Inn courts have been turned over to the club for the tournament and a special rate given by the hotel to players is perhaps an attraction which cannot be equalled anywhere.

Charlevoix's importance in the tennis world is growing and the coming season has promise of being no exception.

WINTER SPORTS SEASON IS NEAR

NORTHERN COMMUNITIES NOW PREPARING PROGRAMS

Potoskey Carnival Dates Set For February 11 and 12—Charlevoix
Plans Not Made

First rumblings of the impending Northern Michigan winter sports season come from Potoskey, where last Thursday afternoon the officers, directors and committee, chairman of the Potoskey Winter club met and selected Tuesday and Wednesday, February 12 and 13 as the dates for their annual winter carnival.

Our neighboring city has already sent an invitation to Governor Fred W. Green and wife, also Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg to attend their winter carnival and are laying plans for an event which they hope will surpass by far the successful affair last winter.

In direct contrast we find Charlevoix, the city which fathered winter sports in Northern Michigan, the place where the movement first took growth and then spread to other cities of the region, apparently setting by and letting their grasp slip into the hands of other eager communities who are alive and "up and not" en.

However, knowing Charlevoix's ability as a "go-getter" in all matters concerning community welfare, we are not kidding ourselves into believing that those heretofore active in making Charlevoix the leader in the winter sports movement in Northern Michigan are going to set idly by and see the thing "go-to-pot." The advantages we have always had at hand, together with the equipment used in last winter's activities. Little need be done aside from getting organized and making future plans.

Already inquiries from out-of-state winter sports enthusiasts have been received. In fact, early this week J. J. Hallett received inquiry from a Toledo, Ohio, party, asking for Charlevoix's winter sports program, seeking information as to accommodation, etc. Previous publicity has had its effect and this is probably but the first of many such inquiries which will come in from now on.

As to the value of winter sports to any community, financial and otherwise, the matter leaves a wide open field for argument. We all readily admit that as a community "diversion" in an otherwise drab season of the year, winter sports head the bill. We must also concede that after three or four years trial, financial returns from winter sports have fallen short of the amount expended in sponsoring the movement. Inquiries and promises to be at Charlevoix during the winter sports season mean nothing unless the people actually come. The experience of last winter should be sufficient prove that a program each day over an extended period is a failure. "Like riding a good horse to death." A program once each week, climaxed by a two-day carnival has proven its merits as an attraction and should be followed out. To spend a large amount in preparation for the winter sports season is folly and won't pay out, so let's not try to kid ourselves into believing it will.

But last of all, let's not let winter sports drop. As a means of "tomorrow" if financial returns come we are that much ahead. It is probable winter

SAYS U. S. IS THE HAVEN OF THE THUG AND THE KILLER

Through the effort of our sob sister squad, the United States of America has achieved the distinction of being the haven for the thug and the killer. Within the past few days four teachers have been slugged, one woman hires her furnace repaired and is killed for her earnings, and a list of other crimes of similar nature would fill this column. It is a glorious record, a record that knows scarcely any check. No one but the criminal is safe anywhere. Life isn't worth more than the price of a bullet. But, we in Michigan can continue to console ourselves that we have been the big brother to the thug, given him a good bed, running water for the bath shampoo and shave, and provided him with healthful surroundings and good eats. Just think how very humanitarian. Why, we have at least provided for the perfect safety of the criminal, whether we have any safety for anyone else or not.—Chebagan Observer.

sports will be the leading topic at the annual meeting of the association of commerce which is usually held December 14. Inasmuch as there has been no meeting of this organization since the last annual affair, the attendance should be large and comprise a good representation of the city's active workers.

ACTION IS STARTED IN FORECLOSURE

Bond Holders Exercising Option
Under Hotel Mortgage

W. J. Clarke, Sr., of Harbor Springs, trustee under the mortgage securing bonds of the Ramona Park Hotel Corporation, announces that he is taking legal steps to protect the bondholders by foreclosure of the mortgage. Mr. Clarke states that this action is being taken at the request of a majority in interest of the bond holders inasmuch as the Ramona Park Hotel Corporation has defaulted in the semi-annual interest payment due August 1, 1923, failed to pay taxes for 1922 and 1923 and failed to keep property adequately covered with insurance.

It is also stated that aside from the mortgage interest there is a large unsecured indebtedness by the hotel corporation. The amount of bonds outstanding is $66,000. They were issued by the Ramona Park Hotel Corporation under date of February 1, 1924.

DR. WINDER SLIGHTLY INJURED IN ACCIDENT

W. E. Parmelee's Car Side-Swiped
on U. S. 31 Thursday

Dr. C. J. Winder was slightly injured last Thursday afternoon when a sedan in which he and the owner, W. E. Parmelee were going to the territory east of Wolverine on a deer hunting trip was side-swiped by another.

The accident occurred on U. S. 31 on the grade just north of Greensky Hill. The driver of the other machine, J. A. Cleveland, a commercial salesman from Grand Rapids, was driving at an excessive rate of speed and was unable to negotiate the bad turn, with the result that he crashed into Parmelee's machine.

Both cars were badly damaged, although none of the occupants were hurt with the exception of Dr. Winder, who was able to return to his office on Monday of this week.

The ladies aid of the Church of God will hold a bake goods sale next Saturday, December 1, at Staley Bros. Hardware. Adv. 4811.

FISHING SEASON IS SATISFACTORY

MORE LAKE TROUT TAKEN THAN IN PREVIOUS YEARS

Indications Are That Spawn Taken Will Compare Favorably With Seasonal Average

With approximately 22,000,000 lake trout and 12,000,000 whitefish eggs in the government hatchery up to Tuesday of this week, indications are that the amount of spawn received here will fall short of previous years.

Last year trout eggs brought in totaled 42,700,000. However, the number in the hatchery at the present time cannot be figured as the total gathered, for this year the state has sent large quantities to hatcheries in other locations. Some went to Marquette, Soo and Thompson in the upper peninsula, while others were sent to the state hatchery at Harrisburg. Had it not been for this split the local station would have had the usual amount.

The number of whitefish eggs to date is 19,000,000, compared with 35,300,000 a year ago. This too is no indication of the final total, for after the closed season, which went into effect November 20th is lifted, the amount will likely be doubled.

A crew of ten men are now employed at the hatchery, three in the engine room and seven attending to other duties. Lake trout eggs are being picked over for the first time and present indications point to about a 50 per cent hatch. Elisha Ceer is in charge until a new superintendent arrives to assume the duties of H. D. Dean, who retired from government service on Monday of this week.

Reports from local fish markets would indicate that the fishermen have had better than an average year insofar as the number of trout taken in concerned. Taking all factors into consideration, it would appear spawn gathering and fishing alike have had a better than average year.

DEATH OF INA GENEIT SHOCK TO CHARLEVOIX

Died Suddenly Tuesday Morning In a Detroit Hospital

Charlevoix residents were shocked Tuesday to learn of the sudden death of Miss Ina Geneit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Geneit, which occurred early the same morning in a Detroit hospital.

Receiving a telegram bearing the sad tidings, Mr. and Mrs. Geneit left early Tuesday morning for Indian River, from where they caught a train to Detroit. The remains will be brought back to Charlevoix and funeral arrangements are contingent upon the arrival of the party here.

Miss Geneit was born in Charlevoix, April 23rd, 1905, and had lived here all her life until after graduating from high school with the class of '25. In school, where she was affectionately known to her fellow students as "Punky," Miss Geneit won high honors and was conspicuous in the management of the "Chanticleer," a publication put out several years ago by the school. She was one of the most popular of the younger social set and her passing will cause real grief to all who knew her.

PIONEER OF CITY BURIED TUESDAY

MRS. ARCHIE MACNEILL DIED AT CALEDONIA SATURDAY

Was Charter Member of Charlevoix Eastern Star Lodge and a Member of W. R. C.

Funeral services were held at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for Mrs. Archie MacNeill, a pioneer Charlevoix resident, whose death occurred shortly before 9 o'clock last Saturday night, November 24th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Irene Finkbeiner of Caledonia, where Mrs. MacNeill had been visiting.

Miss Melvina Helen Hancock was born at Clinton, Iowa, May 25, 1855. On September 30, 1874, she was united in marriage to Archie MacNeill at Charlevoix and had since resided in this city at the family home on State street, where Mr. MacNeill died December 5th, 1927. The couple were numbered among Charlevoix's early pioneers, having lived here when the town boasted a mixed population of 100, Indians and whites. Mr. MacNeill was a mill worker and served 55 years in the employ of the Charlevoix Lumber Company and was night watchman over the property at the time of his death.

Mrs. MacNeill was the mother of eight children, seven of whom survive her, viz: Mrs. Katherine Kopf of Klee Lake, Wis., Archie MacNeill of Chicago; Mrs. Irene Finkbeiner of Caledonia; Mrs. Nina Reynolds of Charlevoix; Mrs. Marguerite Morton, Mrs. Lillian Morton and Mrs. Leona Herron of Detroit. All of the children were home for the funeral.

Mrs. MacNeill was a charter member of the Charlevoix Eastern Star lodge, held a life certificate, and it was under the auspices of this order that her funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, with Rev. John E. Lockyer officiating. She was also a member of the W. R. C. Interment was in Brookside cemetery.

COLON MCKENZIE LOSES VALUABLE PAIR HORSES

Both Animals Died Last Tuesday Evening from Poisoning

The mysterious death by poisoning last Tuesday of two valuable horses owned by Colon McKenzie is still unsolved so far this week.

Mr. McKenzie worked the team that day, part of the time on his farm on the Norwood road and part on the school grounds. One showed a slight indisposition late in the afternoon and Mr. McKenzie quit work early and took the team to the barn. The first one died at 5 o'clock and the second at 12.

County Agent Mellencamp was called in and parts of the stomachs of the horses were examined and later sent to Lansing for analysis. Mr. McKenzie is quite sure both animals died from poisoning and an effort is now being made to trace its source.

Good Attendance at Supper

There was a good attendance of both old and young at the Y. P. S. C. E. cafeteria supper last Friday evening in the Congregational church dining room and everybody had a good time. A committee furnished music during the supper hour and provided games before and after, which added greatly to the pleasure of the evening as nearly everyone stayed on for a social hour.

H. D. DEAN RETIRES FROM U. S. SERVICE

Has Been at Hatchery Work for Period of 44 years

Monday of this week marked the retirement of H. D. Dean from the United States Bureau of Fisheries after 44 years of hatchery service, 40 years of this period being with the government. Mr. Dean also has the distinction of being the oldest man in this branch of the government in point of years of service.

Mr. Dean entered hatchery work under the old U. S. Fish Commission in 1884 at Northville, Michigan. His promotion was nominal and at the end of 6 years he was transferred to the hatchery at Leadville, Colo., as superintendent. After 4 years at Leadville he was again transferred to Cape Vincent, New York, and since that time has been superintendent of government hatcheries at Nonsuch, Mo., Bowman, Mont., Springville, Utah, and Charlevoix. For a period of four years he was employed in hatchery work by the state of Montana.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Dean have made many friends during their residence in Charlevoix who will join to congratulate the former on his splendid record. Whether they choose to make Charlevoix their future home or move elsewhere, the best wishes of their friends will follow them.

BANKS TO ASSIST COUNTY DAIRYMEN

DIRECTORS TO MEET TO CON-SIDER FUTURE ACTION

Full Details of Dairy Improvement Move to Be Announced Following Next Meeting

A special meeting of the County Bankers' Association was held in East Jordan on Thursday night, November 22, with an attendance of seventeen bankers and directors representing each of the six banks.

As a result of this meeting a real dairy improvement program for Charlevoix county farmers, became a reality. After much consideration of the problems confronting the farmers of our county, the conclusions were reached that these problems can be worked out quickest, and that greater prosperity can be realized sooner, by an intensive development of the dairy industry.

To properly promote the industry it was decided that there are three major requirements. A high quality purebred bull, first class cows, and lastly the benefits derived from a cow-testing association.

In order to assist the farmer in securing this kind of a sire and higher quality cows, each bank in Charlevoix county has set aside a fund to be used for this purpose and which will be loaned at very reasonable terms to all farmers meeting with the approval of the banks.

The bankers of Charlevoix county are to be congratulated upon their desire to be of real service to the agriculture interests and their untiring efforts in carrying out this constructive program will meet with hearty cooperation from all interests in the county.

Full details of this plan are being worked out and in the near future a complete announcement of the big dairy improvement program will be made public. Watch the paper for more information.

LEE NORTH PICKS ALL-STAR SQUADS

TWO LOCAL PLAYERS CHOSEN FROM CLASS C DIVISION

Maxwell Novak Given End Position on First Team—Marshall Quarter on Second

The Potoskey Evening News today announces its annual selection of an All-Northern Michigan football team for 1923. The Potoskey News has made the widest distribution of honor in history of the many years of selecting football and basketball teams, six schools sharing honors on this team for this year. They picked two from Traverse City, two from Charlevoix, two from Big Rapids, two from Ludington, two from Manistee and one from Potoskey.

A check back of the season discloses a lot of good men for every position, with few outstanding above others for their play. Every class B school in the region flashed a fighting line but not every team had a backfield of equal ability. Quarterback position seemed a weak spot on every team, the middle system resulting in an effort to provide better selection of plays. Traverse City developed one man who stood out noticeably as possible college football material in Upper case in line center. This man weighs about 200 pounds, is heavy, fast, fighting and sportsmanlike in his playing.

Erickson was the quarterback showing most promise, although O. Osborn of Big Rapids, was good in some games. Harvey was the outstanding fullback, being a triple threat man, equally good at passing, punting, running with the ball and smashing the line. Kennedy and Manthei were the alert, fighting type of halfbacks, who displayed nice judgment in their game, throughout the season. Barnes and Anger were probably outstanding guards, both big, fighting, and of use in other departments as well. Out on the flanks Fee and Core seemed to do more for their teams on offense and played as well on defense as any two in the circuit. Bellille and Sell did not have much of an edge on Hackert of Ludington or Tilton of Potoskey, but their tackling did seem a trifle more deadly and they left fewer openings for offense tackle smashes. Unger was the outstanding center being heavier, faster and handier. He was a wonderful defense man and led his team to the Northern Michigan championship as captain at Traverse City. He is picked to captain the honor eleven.

Also Picks Second Team

Picking a second team also proves a difficult task. For end position Captain Holland of Cadillac, is honored along with Specklin, of Big Rapids. For tackles come Tilton, of Potoskey and Hackert, of Ludington. For guard posts Bernie Barnes of Traverse and Nelson, of Ludington, are listed; while for center, Hamp, of Cadillac, draws the plum. Osborn, of Big Rapids, is listed for quarter with May, of Manistee, as fullback. The halfbacks are Ostlund, of Traverse, and Jacobson of Manistee. The same distribution holds good in the second team as in the first.

For Class C

In picking an All-Northern Michigan class team C team honors go to Boyne City, Harbor Springs, Cheboygan with three men each, and one each to Charlevoix and Manistee.

Here is the list: Ends, Winegard, Harbor Springs, and Novak, Charlevoix; tackles, Taho, Cheboygan, and Skornia, Boyne City; guards, Lakies, Mancelona and Fisher, Cheboygan; center, Faunce, Harbor Springs.

CONSERVATION NOTES

State and public institutions and welfare societies are the only groups that will receive venison that has been seized by the department of conservation officers as a result of law violations. Director George R. Hogarth made that statement to clear up a situation that has developed as a result of misunderstanding, the origin of which is not known. Applications for the venison poured into the department's offices every day during the deer season. Many social groups believed that they might share in the captures merely by filing a request. They were mistaken in this assumption. Only charitable organizations and state institutions will be supplied, according to Director Hogarth's statement.

Dr. M. D. Pirnie, ornithologist with the department of conservation, is making a thorough study of wild ducks this fall. He has patrolled several of the favorite haunts of the birds, studying their feeding habits, learning their choice food, determining characteristics of their migration and daily flights. He spent much of his time on Wild Fowl Bay, an arm of Saginaw Bay, one of the duck population centers of Michigan. He has requested duck hunters to send in the stomachs of ducks that they shot in order that a study may be made of the food. The ultimate goal toward which the investigation leads is that of providing conditions that will result in more ducks for Michigan game. If these gamesters of the air can be enticed to Michigan, Dr. Pirnie is going to accomplish it.

After six months of work, the codification of Michigan game and fish laws are about to be presented. On December 3 and 4, the proposed bills are to be discussed at a meeting to be held in the senate chamber of the state capitol building. Any person interested in the conservation of the fish and game life of the state is extended an invitation to attend this session and join the discussion. The invitation is being made because the department feels that people of Michigan who are more or less connected with conservation affairs will be intensely interested in the proposed legislation.

The meeting is to be called to order at 9 o'clock, (eastern standard time,) December 3.

The first ten days of the deer hunting season resulted in fewer arrests of hunters and seizures of does and fawns than ever before, Hugh Green, chief conservation officer, reported. The state's increasing vigilance of the activities of hunters in the woods is producing satisfying results.

Detroit led the field among the 11 largest Michigan cities that sent campers to state parks this year. The figures as revealed by the records in the parks division show that 28.8 per cent of the total from these 11 population centers came from the state metropolis. Grand Rapids was second with 5 per cent and Lansing only 4.10 per cent behind. Other cities percentage are as follows: Flint, 3.1; Saginaw, 2.4; Jackson, 1.6; Kalamazoo, 1.4; Pontiac, 2.1; Muskegon 4.5; Battle Creek, 1.1; Bay City, 1.6.

Chicago led the field so far as cities outside Michigan are concerned. Of the total number of out-of-state campers, Chicago had 13.8 per cent, with Toledo in second place, with 7.1.

In a hazy sort of way she felt that some day she would listen to the plea that, in some fashion or other, was woven into every letter; but not till the Three Bar was booming and no longer required her supervision. Everything else in the world was secondary to her love for her father's brand and the anxiety of the past two years of its decline eclipsed all other issues.

Her reflections were interrupted by Harris' voice just outside her teepee.

"Asleep, Billie?" he asked softly.

"No," she said. "What is it?"

"I've thrown your saddle on the horse," he said. "Let's have a look around."

She assented and they rode off up the left-hand slope of the valley. A mile or so from the wagon Harris dismounted on a high point.

"Let's have a medicine chat," he offered. "I've got considerable on my mind."

She leaned against a rock and he sat cross-legged on the ground, furling her and twisting a cigarette as an aid to thought. Her head was tilted back against the rock, her eyes half-closed.

"They say folks get disappointed in love and go right on living," he observed. "I wonder now, I've heard that men run mostly to form and at one time or another let it out to some little lady that there's no other in the world. That's my own state right about now. Are you always going to keep on disliking me?"

"I don't dislike you," she said. She was still convinced of his father's trickery toward her own; but Cal Harris' quiet efficiency and his devotion to Three Bar interests had convinced her, against her will, that he had taken no part in it. "But if you brought me out here to go into that I'm going back."

"I didn't," he denied. "But I drifted into it sort of by accident. No matter what topic I happen to be conversing on I'm always thinking how much I'd rather be telling you about that. Whenever I make some simple little assertion about things in general, what I'm really thinking is something like this: 'Billie, right this minute I'm loving you more than I did two minutes back.' You might keep that in mind."

"Listen," tapping his knee with a forefinger to emphasize his point. "Cal Warren always wanted to put the Three Bar into under cultivation. He's probably told you that a hundred times. This will always be range country. It will only support a certain number of cows. If the Three Bar had a section in hay to winter-feed your stuff you could run double what you do now on the same range. It's the same with every other small concern. There's only a few spots suitable for home-ranch sites and every one of those has a brand running out of it now—excepting those sites down in Slade's range. If all those outfits put in hay it wouldn't cut up the range any more than it is now—except down Slade's way. Every outfit in the country could run twice as many head as they do now—except Slade. He couldn't. That minute farming starts there'll be squatters filling on every quarter where they can get water to put it in crop. There's twenty places Slade would have to cover by filing to hold his range where the others would only have to file on one to control the amount of range they're using now."

She nodded as she caught this point. "Folks have fallen into a set habit of mind," he explained. "You think because every squatter is turned out that every outfit but the Three Bar is against sticking a plow in the ground. The rest probably feel the same way—know they haven't a hand in it but figure that you have. As a matter of fact, it's Slade alone. There's a persistent rumor to the effect that any man who burns out a squatter can drop in at Slade's and get five hundred dollars in cash."

"The sheriff has never been able to pick up a single one of the men who have burned those squatters out," she said.

"And he never will without some help," Harris agreed. "Alden's hands are tied. But he is playing his own game single-handed the best he can. One day he'll get his hooks into some of these torch-bearers so deep they'll never shake them out. The home-atead laws can't be defied indefinitely. The government will take a hand and send marshals in here thicker than flies. Then the outfits that have hedged themselves in advance are on top. The rest are through."

"But what can the Three Bar do against Slade with those marshals come?" she asked.

"There's a difference between sucking an established outfit with a big force of hands and burning out some isolated squatter roosting in a wagon," Harris said. "I've filed on water out of the Crazy Town to cover the section I bought in the flats. We can pick men and give them a job with the Three Bar between shells of doing prove-up work. We can put in a company ditch to cover all the filings, pay them for working on it and charge that pro-rata share of improvements up against each man's final settlement. When they've made final proof we can buy out those who want to sell. Let's put the flats in hay, girl, and start grading the Three Bar up. It doesn't take much more feed to turn out a real beef steer than of those half-bred brothers down in the flat. In five years we'll have a straight red brand and the Three Bar will be rated at thirty dollars a head, come as they run on the range, instead of round ten or twelve as they'd figure us now. We'll have good hay land that will be worth more by itself than the whole brand is today. Say the word, girl, and we'll build up the old outfit that both of our folks helped to found."

The girl had closed her eyes as he painted this picture of possibilities and except for the difference of voice it might well have been old Cal Warren speaking; the views and sentiments were the same she had so often heard her father express. Next to the long-cherished partnership with old Bill Harris the dream of his life had been to see the Three Bar flats a smooth meadow of alfalfa.

"I'll put a bunch of terriers in there that will be hard for Slade to uproot," Harris said. "What do you say Billie? Let's give it a try."

"I'd like to see it done," she said. "But so much depends on the outcome. I'll have to write Judge Colton first. He has all my affairs in charge."

They mounted and rode back to the wagon and the girl went straight to Waddles with the proposition Harris had urged.

"Tell him to go his best," Waddles advised, when she had outlined Harris' scheme. "He'll put a bunch of terriers on the Three Bar that will eat Slade's claws. If they burn out the boys Cal Harris puts on the place then there'll be one real war staged at the old Three Bar."

"He's been telling you," she accused. "He did sort of mention it," Waddles confessed.

"Then his idea is to import a bunch of gun-fighters," she said. "I won't have a bunch of hired killers living at the Three Bar."

"These boys will just be the sort that's handy at knowing how to avoid getting killed themselves," Waddles evaded. "You can't rightly blame any man for that. And besides, Slade has to be met on his own ground."

"Do you think Slade is at the bottom of the Three Bar losses every year?" she asked.

"Every hoof," Waddles stated. "Every last head! Maybe the alibi no's layout rustles an odd bunch on and off. But Slade is the man that's out to wreck your brand." The big cook heaved a sigh as he reached a decision on a matter which had been troubling him for days. "That's what's branching out our way like he had already toward the south. And that's one season he left things tied up the way he did."

He tapped a much-thumbed document on his knee and handed it to the girl.

"You and Young Cal have been sort of half-hostile," he said. "Cast an eye over that and maybe it'll help you two youngsters to get along."

Three times the girl read every word of the paper while Waddles smoked his pipe in silence. Then she sat on the gate of the wagon and gazed off across the sage; and she was picturing again the long trail of the Three Bar cows; but this time she was reconstructing the scene at the end of it. Instead of one man scheming to trick an old friend at the last crossing at their trails she now envisioned two old men regretting that the life-long hope of a partnership had never been fulfilled and planning to cement that arrangement in the next generation. For old Bill Harris had left her a full half-interest in everything he owned on earth with the single stipulation that she retain her half of the Three Bar for five years after her father's death.

"But why?" she asked presently. "Why did he do that for me? He'd never seen me since I was three-years old."

"He did it for the girl of old Cal Warren, the best friend he had top-side of ground," Waddles said. "Your dad and Bill Harris had been pals since they was babies. They knew there was hard times and changes ahead and both tried to think of the old brand going under or changing hands. They was afraid that if both you and the boy knew your path was going to be cramped soft in any event that you might sell out if things got to breaking wrong. This was it."

"Will Try It," She Said.

pressing, fighting from the inside to know, that to see it whitened down from the outside without our fighting back."

She crossed to her teepee to write the letter asking Judge Colton's advice on this matter which would mean the turning point in Three Bar affairs. An hour later Harris rode away from the wagon, his bed roll packed on a bad horse, heading for Billie's with the message that meant so much to the Three Bar. As he left Harris handed her two letters he had written weeks past, before leaving the ranch.

Presumably only the three of them knew of the intended move but in the course of the next few days it had looked like you'd be sure to stick. They was planning the best they knew. Your dad told me to keep an eye on the general lay. And Judge Colton sent me that copy to have on hand to sort of iron things out when I thought best. I'm telling you because I know you wouldn't quit the Three Bar as long as there's two cows left."

"Does Cal know?" she asked.

"Not a word," Waddles asserted. "He's likely considerable puzzled himself. But he surmises things will break right some day, knowing his own dad and mine's visited round a day or two with yours. You drop the judge a line, girl, and turn Harris loose to rip up the Three Bar that and seed it down to hay."

She nodded and slipped from the end-gate of the wagon, taking the paper with her. Harris was smoking a damnd shirt in the little stream, darning it in a rattle and weighting it down with rocks. She went straight to him and sat on the bank, motioning him to sit by her side. He dried his hands and took the paper she held out to him.

"What's in the wind?" he asked.

She nodded to indicate the document and he sat down to look over it. His quizzical expression was erased as he saw his father's name and the girl watched his face for some evidence of resentment as he read on. Their status was now reversed, for Bill Harris' holdings had been easily double those of her own parent. She saw the sun wrinkles deeper at the corners of his eyes as he grasped the text of it and he looked up at her and laughed.

"Now we're resting easy," he said. "An even trade."

"Uneven," she dissented. "Of course you know that I'll not take advantage of that."

"Accounts are all squared off between us now," he said. "And of course you'll do just what it says." He held up his hand as she started to dissent. "Don't you!" he reproved.

"Let's let that end of it slide—rest for a while. Maybe some day we'll jump both into one and the two of us boss the whole job."

She rested a hand on his arm.

"Of course you know I'm sorry for a number of things I've said to you," she said. "But I want to thank you for being too decent to return them in kind. You're real folks, Cal."

"Good girl, Billie," he thanked her. "As to what you said, it's remarkable that you didn't say more. I knew you weren't cringing over what you might lose for yourself but over the thought that your father had been tricked. I tried to put myself in your place and if I'd been you I know I'd have kicked me off the place, or told Waddles to turn loose his wolf."

He switched abruptly away from the topic in hand and reverted to the subject they had discussed an hour past.

"We've a clear field now with nothing on our minds but the job of putting the Three Bar on its feet," he said. "The Three Bar is a pretty small outfit the way things are today but in a few more years the brand that runs three thousand head will be almost in the class of cattle kings. The range will be settled with an outfit roosting on every available site. The big fellows will find their range cut up and then they're through. If the Three Bar dies on all the water out of Crazy Loop and covers the flat with hay we'll control all the range for a number of miles each way. There's not another site short of Brandon's place west of us—twelve miles or so; about the same to the east; still further off south of us. We'll be riding the crest. You try and get a letter off to the judge today."

The girl nodded.

"We'll try it," she said. "I know that Cal Warren would rather see the Three Bar go to pieces from its own become ramored among the men that the Three Bar was to turn into a farming outfit. The girl learned that Carpenter was the source of these wild-plays."

Ever since the departure of Morrow Carp had been sullen. Twice he had taken exceptions to some order of Harris' but the new foreman had patiently overruled the fact. However, on the fifth day after the departure of Morrow, Harris whistled on the man as he made an anti-squatter remark when the hands were gathered for the noon meal.

"That'll be all," he said. "I'll figure out your time. You took things up where Morrow left off. Now you can go hunt him up and compare notes."

"Can't a man speak his mind?" Carp demanded.

"He can talk his head off," Harris said. But he can't overlook any Three Bar calves on his circle while I'm running the layout. Morrow tried that on while he was breaking you in."

Carp surveyed the faces of the men and started to speak but changed his mind and headed for the rope corral.

"That's going to leave us short-headed," Harris said to the girl. "Morrow, Carp and Bangs—three short. Horse ought to get back from Billie's today. We've only one more week out so I guess we can warry through."

"How did you know?" she asked.

"About Carp, I know," Harris explained. "Lanky is worth double pay."

Horse came back from Billie's in the early evening and another man rode with him.

"Alden," Billie said. "I wonder what the sheriff is doing out here."

The sheriff stripped the saddle from his horse and the wrangler swooped down to haze the animal in with the reuda as Alden joined Harris and the girl. He was a tall, gaunt man with a slight stoop. His keen gray eyes peered forth from a mass of sun-wrinkles surrounded by bushy eyebrows, the drooping gray mustache accentuating rather than detracting from the hawklike strength of countenance. He dropped a hand on the girl's shoulder, and looked down at her.

"How are things breaking this season, Billie?" he asked. "Everything running smooth?"

"About the same," she said. They were old friends and the girl knew that Alden would help her in any possible way.

The sheriff turned to Harris. "I see you're settled down to a steady job, Cal, instead of browsing around the hills alone. I run across Horse at Billie's and he was telling me about some one gunning for you from the brush. Morrow, he says, (TO BE CONTINUED.)

A good fattening ration for poultry may be made of 6 parts, by weight, of corn meal, 2 part of ground oats (without hulls), and 2 parts of middlings, according to the U. S. department of agriculture. Mix this ration with milk, using 2 lbs. to 1-pound of milk.

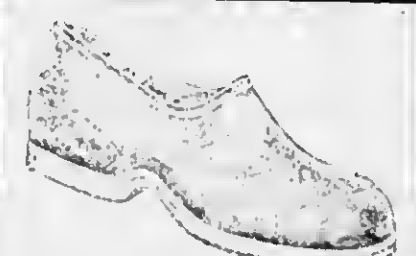

The greatest progress in the dairy industry in this country lies not in increasing the number of dairy cows, but in increasing the production per cow, according to the U. In fattening turkeys for market an excellent plan is to begin about the first of October to feed night and morning, feeding just enough at a time so that the birds go away a little hungry, and gradually increase the quantity until they are given all they will clean up three times a day the week before marketing.

If red clover seeded last spring is used for pasture this fall, it should not be too closely grazed, or next season's hay crop may be decreased. The planting should be allowed to go into the winter with some growth on the crowns.

Choose designs for children's clothes with ironing in mind, whether you make the clothes yourself or buy them readymade. For rather novel sandwiches or thin bread and butter for afternoon tea make some orange bread. The flavor is given by the cooked peel of 2 oranges. This is cut into shreds, covered with water and cooked for about 20 minutes, or until tender, and then drained. Next cook the peel in a sirup made of one cup of sugar and one-half cup of water until there is only about 1 tablespoon of the sirup left. Sift together 3 cups of flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, and one-half teaspoon of salt. Cut in 1 tablespoon of butter and add 1 wellbeaten egg and one and a quarter cups of milk. Beat this mixture for about 3 minutes. Stir in the orange peel and mix thoroughly. Pour in a greased pan and bake for one half hour in moderate oven.

GOAL OF RED CROSS ANNUAL ROLL CALL 5,000,000 MEMBERS

Disaster Relief and Work for Veterans Cause Heavy Drain on Resources.

In order to enable the American Red Cross to carry on its broad activities, ranging from service to the world war veteran to instant response in time of disaster, a membership of 5,000,000 should be enrolled, and in this year of 1928-1929 that is the goal set for the twelfth annual roll call, to be held from November 11 to 23, Armistice to Thanksgiving Day. John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross at Washington, in calling upon the nation for 5,000,000 adult members, directs attention to the great expenditures required of the Red Cross for disaster and veteran relief work and for its many other activities devoted to health preservation and humanitarian aid and to ending down the number of accidental deaths, through life saving and first aid courses.

"The Red Cross should at all times have a large 'feverish fund,'" Judge Payne stated, "because when disaster strikes, and this organization is called into instant action, there is no time to stop and raise funds. Dollars may not live, so we should have at all times a good reserve. We have been forced each year to draw upon our reserves, and we find that the demands are increasing annually."

Judge Payne pointed out that in the fiscal year of 1927-28, the Red Cross had extended aid in 66 major catastrophes in the United States and its insular possessions, and in 22 nations abroad. This does not include the West Indies hurricane disaster in Porto Rico and Florida, which occurred after the close of the Red Cross fiscal year, June 30, 1928.

The Red Cross expenditures for disaster in that period were $16,544,253.57, of which approximately $13,000,000 was expended in the Mississippi Valley for the flood relief work, which came from a fund contributed by the public. More than $1,000,000 was expended in the St. Louis tornado damage, and more than $1,000,000 in New England. In both cases public relief funds were raised, although in New England the Red Cross contributed in excess of $500,000 from its own funds for the relief work. In the majority of the other 16 disasters, and in 11 of the 22 foreign catastrophes in which the Red Cross extended aid, the money came from its own resources.

The largest item in the annual budget of the Red Cross is for its veteran relief and work for disabled ex-service and service men, upon which it expended in this year $1,169,795.

Every man and woman is asked by Judge Payne to join the Red Cross during the roll call period, to aid in these humanitarian enterprises.

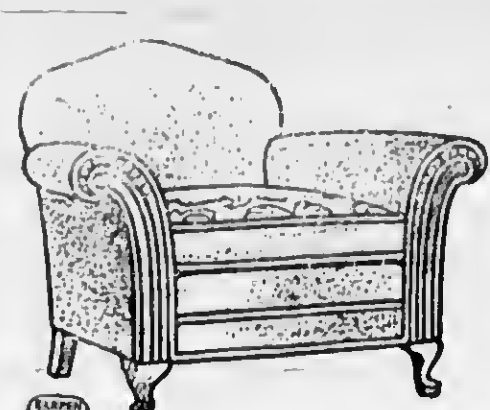

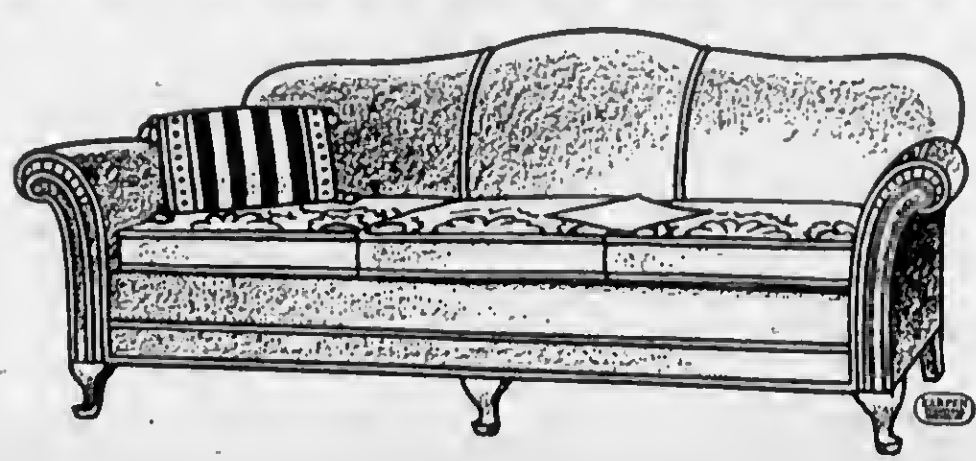

Ten years after the Armistice, the American Red Cross still carries on for the world war veteran, providing comfort and entertainment for him in hospital, aiding his family where necessary, preparing and following through his claims for insurance, compensation or disability.

America holds the Red Cross emblem sacred because it represents a universal helpfulness—a service to all citizens—without regard to race, color or creed.

No wonder the farmers have surplus crops they can't dispose of, with all the flappers denying themselves food while trying to reduce their weight.

The new Ford has a very simple and effective lubrication system

THE lubrication system for the engine of the new Ford is as simple in principle as water running down-hill.

A gear pump in the bottom of the oil pan raises the oil to the valve chamber reservoir. From here it flows on to the main crankshaft bearings and the front camshaft bearing. Overflow oil drops into the oil pan tray and runs into troughs through which the connecting rods pass.

As the ends of these rods strike the oil they scoop up a supply for the connecting rod bearing. At the same time they set up a fine spray that lubricates the pistons and other moving parts.

From the tray the oil runs into the bottom of the pan, and is again drawn up through a fine mesh screen and pumped to the valve chamber.

This system is so effective that the five-quart contents of the oil pan pass through the pump twice in every mile when you are traveling at only 30 miles an hour. Yet there is only one movable part—the oil pump.

As a matter of fact, the lubrication system for the new Ford is so simple in design and so carefully made that it requires practically no service attention.

There is just one thing for you to do, but it is a very important thing... watch the oil! Change the oil every 500 miles and be sure the indicator rod never registers below low (L).

If the oil level is allowed to fall below low, the supply becomes insufficient to oil all parts as they should be oiled.

To insure best performance it is also advisable to have the chassis of your car lubricated every 500 miles. This has been made easy in the new Ford through the use of the high pressure grease gun system.

Proper oiling and greasing mean so much to the life of your car that they should not be neglected or carelessly done.

See your Ford dealer regularly. He is especially well-fitted to lubricate the new Ford and he will do a good, thorough job at a fair price.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

person inquire of Mr. Coleman or Edna Brown.

Most of the teachers seem to have a prejudice against chewing gum but Mr. North has the most original one, we think. He said that when he saw young people chewing gum it made him homesick, because when he was young, he had to watch the cows. Remember the man who caught his toe on the stair? We often wonder how far he had to run before he caught it.

8th Grade Junior High

Mr. Bingham: Gertrude what is a cavalier? Gertrude: A fighter.

Mr. Alexander: Alice were you whistling? Alice: No, I was just getting something out of my teeth.

What on earth Mr. Alexander, Miss Struthers and Mr. Bingham have up their sleeves no one can find out. It concerns something after Christmas, so we are all waiting patiently for Santa Claus to come, and go, so we will find out what this exciting secret may be.

We have appointed Jermaine Atchison, Ethel Powers, Junior Supernaw, and Wayne Belding on our committee for making yells for our Junior high. We do not know as yet when the class meeting will be, but we will hear the yells then. We hope the committee has not loafed on the job.

All the 8th grade girls appreciated the talk that was given them last Friday night after school by Mr. Alexander the title being, "Stuck-up-ness."

There is a sign on the board in the History and Literature room, "Hands Down" and by the looks of things there is quite a few blind pupils in the grade.

Tests Tuesday, but who cares when they can look forward to a Turkey Thursday and a doctored Friday.

The eighth grade had a class meeting Monday night after school.

Mr. Bingham: Rosetta, define perseverance? Sorry, but I can't.

Mr. Bingham: Very well, here is an example. You have a very hard arithmetic problem, you work on it for five minutes wouldn't that be perseverance? Rosetta: No I'd call it patience.

The Junior high school is going to have a Christmas party, Friday evening, Dec. 21st. We hope Santa Claus does not forget us.

Seventh Grade Junior High

Mr. Otterbren has furnished the seventh grade with geography pads which contain questions about South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand and general geography. We will start to use them soon.

We have some new seventh graders which makes a total of 59.

The seventh and eighth grade boys have started taking gym. Mr. Bingham is their coach.

Last Saturday a new bell system was put in which rings every forty-five minutes.

School Play

"Pickles," the operetta to be given by the High school this year is at the present time absorbing much of the thought and time of the student body. The date set for the presentation of this musical comedy is Wednesday, Dec. 12. "Pickles" is the big musical production of the High school this year and is expected to be a great success.

County Normal Notes

The Normal class wishes to express its appreciation to Miss Lottie Withers of Syracuse, New York, for her generous donation to the County Normal library. The books are an exceptionally good collection for this particular line of work.

The Normal teachers have been assigned the classes they are to teach in the training room and are busy making their subject plans.

Perhaps the most instructive lecture of the series offered by the State Department of Health was the one on "Control of Contagious Diseases in the School Room," given last Thursday by Dr. Criswell.

Early in the week the Normal class was invited to join the poet's contest. Everyone was required to write a poem about Thanksgiving and after reading them Wednesday morning a prize was given to the winner.

The students of the training room are glad to announce that they have earned their Red Cross membership.

News From the Grades

The fourth grade raised $2.03 for Red Cross aid.

The fifth grade children are keeping our bulletin board filled with interesting newspaper clippings concerning the countries we are studying in geography.

Joe Shores is back in the training room after being absent two weeks. Some of the stories from Kipling's Jungle Book are being read in the training room.

Kindergarten

The kindergarten children have learned the song, "Thanksgiving at Grandpa's." They were so interested they made Grandpa's farm in the sand table.

We have received our new clay and we are enjoying making things with it.

Band Report

The band has been practicing on a new piece named, the "American Patrol," which is a required number at the district contest at Traverse City, where it is being held this year.

The boys are working hard because if they place first or second at Traverse City, they will go to Lansing to compete for the state prize for the high school bands. We are learning the University of Michigan's College song, named the "Varsity." We expect the high school students to learn the words so they can sing it with the band at the basketball games.

Mr. Terwee, (talking to Teddy Miller, a snare drummer,) Cee whiz, Teddy, three years in the band and can't strike high E."

Mr. North—If there are any dumb-bells in the room, please stand up.

After a short pause, Bud Gill stood up.

Mr. North—Why, Bud, do you consider yourself a dumb-bell?

Bud—Well, not exactly teacher, but I hnted to see you standing alone.

History of Thanksgiving

The earliest harvest Thanksgiving in America was kept by the Pilgrim fathers at Plymouth in 1621 and was repeated during that and the ensuing century.

A big fire was started before the Elden's house and the drum announced the morning prayer. Priscilla and her attendants flew back to the fire and presently a long table spread in the open air for the men was covered with great wooden bowls full of what later generations named "hasty pudding." Other bowls contained clam chowder. Plenty of cold boiled beef with mustard, flanked by dishes of turnips, offered solid resistance to those who attacked them.

Mossasoit and his followers attended and Quadequira produced something like a bushel of popped corn—a dainty hitherto unknown to the Pilgrims.

Congress recommended a day for Thanksgiving annually during the Revolution and in 1784 for the return of peace as did President Madison in 1815. Washington appointed such a day in 1795 for the general benefit and welfare of the nation.

In the United States an annual festival of Thanksgiving for the mercies of the closing year in under the title of Thanksgiving day. The day is fixed by proclamation of the President and the governor of states. The President proclamation makes the day a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and in the territories. Since 1863 the President has always issued proclamations appointing the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day.

Football Synopsis

First game here: Charlevoix vs. Onaway—Score 58-0 in favor of C. H. S.

This game was well played on both sides. Charlevoix won over Onaway all during the game. Onaway played a good game but could not hold our fellows back.

Second game here: Boyer City vs. Charlevoix—Score 31-0 in favor of Boyer City. Even though we lost this hard fought game, it was an honor to be beaten by them. Boyer's fellows weighed a great deal more than ours and had advantage over us. A few of the fellows were bruised but nothing very serious. We did not feel this defeat very keenly as Boyer has won over larger schools than us.

Third game here: Traverse City Reserves vs. Charlevoix—Score 6-0 in favor of Traverse. In this game both games were about equally matched. Charlevoix held her ground good all through the game. During the last quarter, Traverse by a stroke of good luck made a touchdown.

Fourth game there: Maneclova vs. Charlevoix—Score 12-0 in favor of the opponents. The day that the fellows went to Maneclova was cold and dry. The opposing team weighed about the same as ours, but by some mere chance they won although our fellows had as much chance as they did.

Fifth game there: St. Ignace vs. Charlevoix—Score 13-0 in favor of St. Ignace. No wonder we lost that game. Dick Marshall, one of our best men was unable to play that day. Everything was to our disadvantage. The weather was cold and rainy and their field was nothing but mud. Was it any wonder we didn't win? Not a bit.

Sixth game there—Kalkaska vs. Charlevoix—Score 19-0 in favor of C. H. S. This was one of the happiest and surprising games of the year. The fellows went to Kalkaska with a winning spirit and came back as winners. Any of the fellows you met on the street that night had a grin from ear to ear, as if to say "You thought we couldn't do it didn't you?"

Seventh game here: Gaylord vs. Charlevoix. Score 13-6 in favor of the Red and White. Gaylord trimmed us last year and we didn't forget it. We showed that this year. The fellows were all in excellent shape and everything went well. Charlevoix showed some of her best playing in this game by preventing Gaylord from having a drop kick. It wasn't the happiest crowd that went back to Gaylord, the happiest crowd stayed here.

Eighth and last game there: East Jordan vs. Charlevoix. Score 20-6 in favor of C. H. S. In this game we showed our true colors. The game started out well and ended equally as well. The game had no more than started when Lo and Behold, Charlevoix had a touchdown. This isn't all she did either. Just because we had one touchdown we didn't take a vacation. The boys kept on playing and steadily the score climbed up to 20. East Jordan gained her 6 points by luck, as Charlevoix was certainly holding her opponents down. The crowd shouted and yelled until lack of lungs and breath compelled them to stop. Remember this is the first time we have beaten East Jordan in years and it means a great deal to us.

English Department, "Thanksgiving"

The students of the Charlevoix high school have many causes to be thankful this year as in former years.

First of all is our unusual advantage of having such buildings in which to work. Our new gymnasium is a great asset over former years and our athletic teams have a better chance to win.

We are thankful that we have such considerate teachers who are always willing to aid us in our work, and always show an interest in our outside activities.

The students of the typing class appreciate the new typing equipment which enables them to work to better advantage. There are always many other improvements which aid us in working.

The Siren

Harpies, the Goddess of storm and death,
And Neptune God of the Sea,
Desired to have all the sailors fall dead
In the Kingdom Thessaly.
They plotted together for many a month
Before they could agree
That the thing to do was to call on Siren.

A maiden who lived in the sea.
This beautiful Goddess of sin and death,
The sailors had paid their fee.
Yes, certain it was they were satisfied,
But, Oh, That Kingdom, Thessaly.

Reverence for the Past

As a nation we have great reverence for the past. We are thankful for those who have lived before us and paved our way to national success.

The lives of the men who have given us ideals and won fame is one of the first things taught to school children. They are taught how their country was discovered, named and built from a savage wilderness to a highly civilized nation. The men who sacrificed so much, and the high ideals they stood for, are imbedded in their minds. Time softens and glorifies these men and their deeds until they become demi-gods and their deeds become miracles. The knowledge of these things makes the country very dear to the people of today. The lives of war heroes, great statesmen, inventors, artists and writers make the country much more worth while.

Many poems and stories are written about these people, not only for fictional purposes but to give us a more true account of their lives and accomplishments. As we read we understand better their lives and the things they strived, slaved and fought for. They are glorified until they become symbols of valor, courage, high adventure and strategic, mixed usually with a highly patriotic feeling for our country.

Recently a medal was given to Thomas A. Edison, showing the people's admiration for a man who has done wonders for our country. With his remarkable genius, had he wished to use it for an evil purpose, there is no way of estimating the harm he might have wrought on the entire world.

The reverence for the past is also shown by the days set aside for the that purpose, such as Washington and Lincoln's birthdays, the Fourth of July, Thanksgiving and other days.

Our national holiday is Thanksgiving. This day was first observed by the Pilgrims. During the first winter spent on these shores many were killed by the savages or died of disease caused by the severe hardships of the country, but the Pilgrims did not lose their faith in God or their new country. The next fall, after a bountiful harvest, they set aside a day in which to thank God for his mercy and goodness to them.

In this modern age has the true meaning of Thanksgiving been forgotten?

Thanksgiving is the real home coming day of the year. Everyone who can possible get home joins their family for at least this one day, and those who cannot, send gifts of flowers or telegrams and letters to their family and friends.

Just as our ancestors shared their feasts with the Indians on the first Thanksgiving day, so many people help those less fortunate than themselves on this day. The churches have special services and the collection is usually used for some special work of charity. The radio sending stations put on special programs to commemorate this day.

This shows that the modern generation have not all forgotten to give thanks and help others on this, our national Thanksgiving holiday.

The band is progressing with unusual rapidity and we feel that soon we can compete with any of Northern Michigan's high school bands.

We think that we, in this new age have more to be thankful for than the Pilgrim fathers in early days had, when they crossed the sea.

Domestic Science Department— "Thanksgiving"

When a person thinks of Thanksgiving he also thinks of good things to eat. The Pilgrims gave thanks because they had plenty of food to keep them through the winter. It was a time of feasting and since that time people have celebrated Thanksgiving with a feast.

The Domestic Science class has been studying Thanksgiving menus. How does this one sound?

Freshmen News

Whew! What a relief, tests are nearly over and that is one thing we freshmen will be thankful for.

It seems that it has been rumored about the building that there are no freshmen this year, and if so, nothing has been heard from them.

So, come on freshmen and let's show them we're here, and very much so.

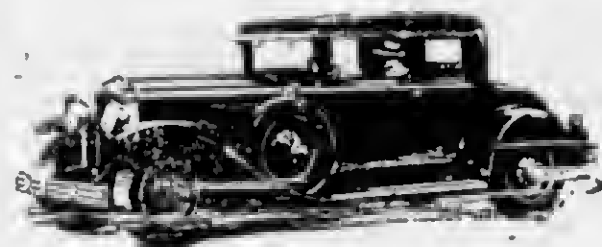

History

The students in history are doing well. Aside from their text, they have studied extensively on Michigan history and have also studied current history once a week from the Literary Digest.

We do not memorize our work as our fathers did. But we do not forget that there is history accumulating every day. Are we always going to look backward? No, we are progressive.

Wise Sayings

Among the prominent characters in our high school, (beside the teachers,) we have a Beau Brummel, "Abie's Irish Rose," Volantino and Ichabod Crane. If you are puzzled as to the identity of some of these (Continued on page 6.)

CHICAGO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA BROADCASTSeries From Several Stations Beginning November 25th

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra under the personal leadership of Dr. Frederick Stock, has consented to give a series of radio broadcasts to be sponsored by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

These outstanding broadcasts will be on the air from six to seven o'clock Central Standard time every Sunday evening, beginning November 25th and continuing until the orchestra disbands in the spring.

This sensational announcement will be received with enthusiasm by music lovers everywhere, for the fame of the Chicago Symphony is international, as is the reputation of its great conductor, Dr. Frederick Stock.

The Chicago Symphony, which is the third oldest orchestra in the United States, has adhered strictly to the ideals of its founders, to bring to the people the best, and nothing but the best in music. It is because of this adherence that the organization has won its enviable place as the foremost symphonic orchestra of the world.

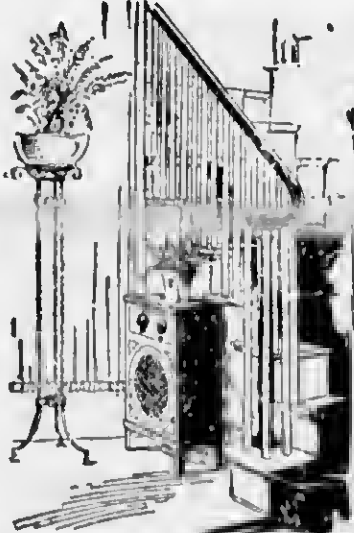

The Standard Oil Company of Indiana also are sponsoring a mid-week program which while not as outstanding as the Sunday evening concerts, will meet a wide popular approval. It is to be known as the 10-11 hour and features a splendid orchestra, an outstanding tenor, and a number of other special features. These programs will be popular in character with considerable variety from week to week. They will be on the air every Thursday night between 9:30 and 10:30 o'clock Central standard time.

Both broadcasts will be sent out over stations W. G. N., Chicago, W. O. C., Davenport, W. H. O., Des Moines, W. D. A. P., Kansas City, W. T. M. J., Milwaukee, W. O. W., Omaha, K. S. U., St. Louis, and W. F. B. C., Duluth.

assembled for a single picture will be seen in "The Haunted House," First National's ghostly thriller which comes next Wednesday to the Palace Theatre.

As there is much comedy as well as thrill in the film, which Benjamin Christensen, European expert, directed, Chester Conklin was an ideal type for the comedy lead. Thelma Todd, blonde and beautiful, lately seen with Milton Sills in "The Crash" and in "Vamping Venus," both First National Pictures, is the heroine, a lovely nurse.

Montagu Love, who has the heavy in "The Hawk's Nest" with Sills, and in "The Moon" supporting Richard Barthelmess, will be seen as the mad doctor.

Larry Kent, handsome young First National stock actor, is Billy, who falls in love with the nurse. Eve Southern is a sleep walking maiden, Flora Finch is funny as Mrs. Rackham, Barbara Bedford is charming as Nancy, a lively girl, while William V. Mong is a mysterious caretaker.

METHODIST CHURCH
John E. Luckey, Minister

The next latitude sermon will be "How the Earthbound May See God." Special music and a chat to children. These programs will be popular in character with considerable variety from week to week. They will be on the air every Thursday night between 9:30 and 10:30 o'clock Central standard time.

A church school of religion meets at 7 p. m. each Sunday. We have a class for each child or adult. "Topic, 'Paul Defends His Life Work.'" Eeworthy Leaguers invite any young person to share their 6 p. m. Sunday meetings. They always discuss vital topics. This is youth's own service.

At 7 p. m. the pastor has arranged a very interesting service of vocal and instrumental music to conform with the religious message in art of "Sir Galahad's Search for the Holy Grail." We have a number of art reproductions, some of them large ones, of this famous masterpiece to distribute to the congregation. This is the first of six "Art Nights" with "Messages from the Masterpiece." On Tuesday the pastor meets the Leaguers at 7 p. m., and would like to meet a goodly number of active members.

And in the midst of all our feasting this week may we each find time to thank the "Giver of every good and perfect gift" for the goodness which has crowned the year. If we deeply think we shall profoundly thank.

COMING WEDNESDAY EVENING, DEC. FIFTHThe Di Giorgio Concert Orchestra at High School Gymnasium

The Di Giorgio Concert Orchestra, consisting of four artist-instrumentalists, will be heard on the Lyceum course here Wednesday evening, December 5th.

Under the able leadership of Signor T. Di Giorgio, a recognized orchestral conductor of more than twenty-five years' experience, the Di Giorgios have attained to a high rank among the concert orchestras of the country.

With the exception of one member the company has had ten years' experience together in concert work.

The individual versatility of the Di Giorgios enables them to present a wide range of musical combinations. From a concert orchestra of piano, violin, cornet and trombone or alpine horn they readily change to a straight string organization of violin, cello, mandolin and guitar.

Both classical and popular selections make up the interesting program of the Di Giorgio Concert Orchestra which is sure to meet with enthusiastic approval.

This company comes to us directly from East Jordan where it will have presented its program the evening before.

It is hoped that the residents of Charlevoix and surrounding community will turn out and give this number the support that they gave to Private Pent. The school board spent considerable time in picking out the numbers of this course. They wanted something that would meet the approval of the citizens of Charlevoix. Let's fill the auditorium the evening of December 5th and show them that the citizens of Charlevoix appreciate good numbers on the Lyceum course. Don't forget the date, Wednesday evening, December 5th, in the high school auditorium at eight o'clock.

The Lesson Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Detach sense from the body, or matter, which is only a form of human belief, and you may learn the meaning of God, or good, and the nature of the immutable and immortal." Superintendent Duncanson of East Jordan schools has been asked by the Petoskey Evening News to select an All-Northern Michigan class C football team for publication at an early date. Mr. Duncanson saw every Northern Michigan class C team in action, refereeing for eight games.

He will correct the situation which developed when Cheboygan was placed in class C, a position she occupied for several seasons. Cheboygan's school enrollment has now advanced far beyond the 300 mark and she is now back in the class B ranks. Places held by her men on previous selections will be given other class C teams.

Three men prominently mentioned for places of honor in the revised list are Shepard, sensational right end, of East Jordan; Captain Seuer, of Gaylord for a tackle place, and Smith, the crack open field runner of Mancelona's team.

OWNER ON THE CARPET

Two hundred dog owners in Emmet county are likely to face arrest any day now for failure to pay their dog taxes. The list of dog owners who have not yet paid has been placed in the hands of Sheriff Cr. . . . Official notice has gone to all of them, it is said, and the next step will likely be a visit by the sheriff. If the sum is not then forthcoming formal arrest will follow. The new state dog law is being strictly enforced every where and in Emmet county about $2,000 per year in dog taxes. It also helps rid the county of a lot of useless dogs, dogs which have been killing sheep and wild game, officers declare.—Petoskey Evening News.

LOCAL CITIZENS OBSERVED SERVED THANKSGIVING

Charlevoix city schools closed Wednesday afternoon and will remain closed until Monday to allow teachers and out-of-town pupils a chance to spend Thanksgiving at their homes. All business places likewise closed Thanksgiving day and most local citizens devoted their time to being thankful. Some few motored to Traverse City for the Traverse-Dearborn football game which was held on the 26th. Many out-of-town people were in Charlevoix to spend the day with relatives and a general spirit of the occasion was prevalent about the city.

The Annual Thank Offering meeting of the Congregational Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. A. F. Bridge last Wednesday afternoon. WINTER SPORTS HAVE A HEARING COUNCIL DISCUSSED PROJECT INFORMALLY.

Definite Action on Winter's Activities Will Likely Be Taken Up Next Thursday Night.

During the routine business of the city council at their meeting a week ago Monday evening, winter sports at Charlevoix for the coming season received their first hearing. Inasmuch as the action on winter sports was informal, no definite plans were made, although the council discussed among themselves, how far the city would go to back the project financially.

We understand it was generally agreed to maintain a municipal skating rink on the school grounds as in former years, only using a larger space than formerly. By tearing down the tennis court fence on the east side, space would be available for an L-shaped rink, a portion of which could be utilized for a hockey pen. The material used a year ago on the south side could be moved to the school grounds. It was pointed out the school yard location would permit better lighting facilities, shelter from winds that sweep the location last winter, and would, at the same time, tend to centralize activities. The cost of maintaining two rinks would be dispensed with, which is no small item to consider.

Bridge street hill would again be iced for coasting and skiing and tobogganing activities carried on as usual. It would appear that a two-day winter sports carnival to climax the season is favored, with additional sports to suit the public demand.

As yet there has been no meeting of the winter sports committee and it is probable no definite action will be taken until after the annual meeting of the Association of Commerce next Thursday evening.

Winter sports are receiving attention at Petoskey tonight (Wednesday). The annual meeting of the Michigan Winter Sports Association is being held at the Cushman House, with representatives from the entire state in attendance. A meeting was called to order at 4:00 p. m., and this is to be followed by a seven o'clock banquet and program.

Present officers of the association are: Wm. L. McManus, Petoskey, president; Arthur W. Stace, Ann Arbor, vice president; John A. Doelle, Lansing, secretary-treasurer. Among the speakers on the program are Mr. McManus, P. J. Hoffmaster, superintendent of state parks; J. B. Wagner of Cadillac; Frank Kenyon, superintendent Mackinac Island state park; George E. Bishop, Marquette, secretary-manager Upper Peninsula Development Bureau; Arthur W. Stace, director, Michigan Committee on Public Utility Information, Ann Arbor. A delegation from Charlevoix is expected to attend.

POLAR BEARS DEFEAT ELK RAPIDS QUINTET

Won Fast Opening Game By a Score of 26 to 21.

The Charlevoix Polar Bears, local independent basketball team, opened the season here Thanksgiving evening by winning a close game from the Elk Rapids independent quintet 26 to 21.

"The visitors had things pretty much their own way in the first quarter. They scored five points before the home team made a counter and were still on the long end of a 10 to 7 score when the initial period ended. The second quarter, however, found the Polar Bears getting their bearings and the battle waxed fast and furious from then on. Charlevoix led by a 16 to 13 count at the end of the half and held a slender margin until the final whistle. Dean Davenport was the outstanding star for the Polar Bears.

In the preliminary contest, the high school regulars gave the second team a trouncing to the tune of 34 to 1. The varsity squad showed a vast improvement over their form of the evening before when they met Ellsworth.

ROGERS TO RE- SIGN STATE JOB

RESIGNATION NOW IN HANDS OF THE GOVERNOR.

Has Been Connected With the Highway Department Since Early in 1905—A Good Man.

Frank F. Rogers will resign as state highway commissioner before the first of the year it was definitely learned Tuesday morning of last week at the highway department offices in Lansing.

His resignation will be handed to Governor Green shortly after the executive's return from his hunting trip in the upper peninsula.

Mr. Rogers plans for the future are indefinite, although it is learned that he contemplates continuing in highway work in a private capacity. He will be succeeded at the helm of the highway department by G. C. Dillman, who has been deputy commissioner for several years. Dillman will complete Rogers' four year term which expires next spring.

It is said for Mr. Rogers that he feels that weight of the cares of his department is becoming a danger to his health. He believes that he has served in his present capacity long enough and he wishes a rest. While it is possible that he may retire, those close to him believe that despite advancing years he will not be willing to entirely give up his work.

Mr. Rogers has been connected with the highway department since 1905, when he was named deputy commissioner under Horatio S. Earle, Michigan's first commissioner. He served under Townsend E. Ely, the next commissioner and was placed in the commissioner's chair himself in 1913, holding office until the present.

Among the rivals Mr. Dillman will face in the spring election for the highway commissioner's job will be A. L. Burridge of Crystal Falls, who was defeated by Mr. Rogers in the convention four years ago. Burridge is now divisional chief in the department. It is said to have been predicted the votes of several delegations.—Lansing Capital News.

Wednesday evening, December 12 is the date set for the operetta "Pickles," to be given in the gymnasium by Charlevoix high school students under the direction of Eleanor Thomas and Roena Wilson. Those who saw and enjoyed the operetta "Miss Cherry Blossom" last year, should plan to be at the auditorium Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock. The plot of "Pickles" is laid in "old Vienna." You'll see Viennese maidens and men, Gypsies, tourists. This is a musical comedy of modern times and the plot is full of many laughs. Plan to attend.

RECENT PURCHASES INCLUDE
KEILER AND ECKINGER LOTS

General Improvements Planned for Coming Spring—Property Has 270 ft. Lake Frontage

Although the deals were completed some time ago, it has just been disclosed locally that R. E. Olds, Lansing capitalist and Charlevoix summer resorter and property owner, has purchased the D. J. Eckinger and John Keiler lots on the south shore of Round lake.

With his present boathouse site and adjoining holdings, Mr. Olds now has a total frontage of 270 feet on Round lake. In addition he owns several hundred acres on Lake Charlevoix and a spacious lodge on what is known as Oldswood Point.

According to Alfred Brown, who has supervision over the Olds property in and about Charlevoix, no new building operations are contemplated on the newly acquired frontage. A general program of improvements to include painting the buildings and cleaning up the lots will be started in the spring.

In a recent edition of the Courier, a somewhat erroneous article was published concerning a new yacht recently completed for Mr. Olds. It stated the yacht was the largest on the Great Lakes. We have since learned that the new boat is the latest equipped with Hilt Diesel pump injection engines, manufactured by a company of which Mr. Olds is a heavy stockholder.

The Reometta, the yacht above referred to, was recently completed at the yards of the New York Yacht Launch and Engine Co., Morris Heights, N. Y. She is 67 ft. O. A., 15 1-2 ft. beam, and 3 1-2 ft. draft. Mr. Olds is responsible for the general layout of the yacht, resulting in a more commodious, convenient and comfortable home on the water than is usually found in yachts of similar dimensions.

The boat is designed for use in Florida waters and will be taken to Mr. Olds' winter home at Daytona Beach.

One of the important features of the new yacht are the two 6 cylinder 5x7 Hilt Diesel Pump Injection engines turning 26 x 22 Columbian wheels at 800 RPM, giving the boat a speed of more than 14 miles per hour. At her maximum speed the fuel consumption is 7.5 gals. per hour, costing at the highest price 67.5 cents per hour, or 5 cents per mile. With a fuel capacity of 600 gallons the cruising radius at full speed is over 1200 miles at a cost of $54.00.

DUNCANSON PICKS ALL-STAR SQUADS

CHARLEVOIX PLACES TWO-ON CLASS C FIRST ELEVEN

Max Novak Giveo End Berth; Dick Marshall Chosen All-Northern Halfback.

In Friday's issue of the Grand Rapids Herald was published the all-star Northern Michigan Class C selections of A. J. Duncanson, superintendent of East Jordan schools, who refereed eight of the games played by the several teams in this classification. Mr. Duncanson's article follows:

Quite in keeping with football throughout the country, many upsets took place in northern Michigan football. This was true of the Class C teams to a greater extent than to the Class B teams of the north.

The following schools completed class C football schedules: Boyne City, Charlevoix, East Jordan, Gaylord, Mancelona, Onaway, Harbor Springs, Frankfort and the writer has seen all the above schools in action, many of them four and five times and after seeing each individual play, knowing the conditions surrounding his success or failure, and the record of his team, has selected the following men as the best in his position in the class C ranks of northern Michigan:

It is not difficult to select a very strong class C team. The material was quite evenly distributed among five or six of the leading class C teams. Backfield material was especially plentiful, including men that would be able to make any high school team.

At ends we have Shepard of East Jordan, who without question is the fastest end among the class C teams of the north—down under every punt, a good pass receiver and first class defense man. The other end and a team mate for Shepard—Novak of Charlevoix, a great pass receiver, catching many of his passes above the heads of the defense.

Good tackles were plentiful. Skornia of Boyne City, heavy, fast and aggressive, was the best tackle in his position with Capt. Seuer of Gaylord, who played end during the season, moving over to the other tackle. There was no better defensive man in the north than this Gaylord boy—six feet tall and 185 pounds—an ideal running mate for Skornia.

At the guards, Jones of Boyne City played strong, aggressive games most of the year, and without question should get one of the guard positions with Cornell of Harbor Springs at the other. Perhaps Cornell was the best guard in Class C ranks.

For center, Faunce of Harbor Springs was as good a center as could be found, never making a bad pass and stopping almost anything that came through the center position.

Smith Named Captain.

At quarterback we have one of the outstanding players of all northern Michigan—Smith of Mancelona. He was not only a heavy quarter, but could stand the gaff, run, kick, or pass—a triple threat man. He should be captain of the class C team. In the backfield there were many good men besides Smith. McBride of Harbor Springs, Miller and Myers of Gaylord, Quinn and Pray of East Jordan, Grimes and Campbell of Harbor Springs, VanHusen and Morgan of Boyne City. McBride of Harbor Springs perhaps was the hardest charging and best defensive back in the class C ranks. At the other half, Dick Marshall of Charlevoix, another triple threat man, is too valuable a player to be left off the first team and is, therefore, awarded the position of right half. At full, Miller of Gaylord without question was the hardest charging back any of the class C schools had and could carry the ball four plays out of five the length of the field without apparently weakening, and is awarded fullback position. Morgan of Boyne City, all-around good halfback throughout the season, gets the other half.

All-Northern Michigan Class C Team

Center—Faunce, Harbor Springs.

Right Guard—Jones, Boyne City.

Right Tackle—Seuer, Gaylord.

Right End—Novak, Charlevoix.

Fullback—Miller, Gaylord.

BOARD OF COM- MERCE MEETING

ELECTION OF OFFICERS NEXT THURSDAY EVENING

Annual Reports and Business Session —Winter Sports to Be Prominent Topic.

An event that always holds the attention of every business man and others interested, is the annual meeting of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, which will be held Thursday evening, December 12, in the dining room of the Hotel Charlevoix.

A banquet dinner will be served at 6:30, followed by the routine work of the association. Various committees will make their reports and the secretary-treasurer's annual report, covering receipts and disbursements of the association during 1928 will also be given. Election of officers is another important matter which will come before the meeting.

Winter sports will probably hold the center of the stage at next Thursday evening's meeting. J. J. Hall has received inquiries from a Toledo party wanting to come to Charlevoix for sports and George Smith has another inquiry from a Chicago party numbering ten couples who are planning to come here for the New Year's week end. A program and extent of winter sports activities will likely be threshed out Thursday evening.

Everyone interested in the future welfare of the city, whether a member of the association or not, is invited to this annual meeting.

CHARLEVOIX WON OPENING BATTLE

DEFEAT ELLSWORTH HERE BY 14 TO 8 COUNT

Max Novak is High Point Man for Charlevoix—Clare High School Comes Here Saturday

The Charlevoix high school basketball team successfully opened their season in the local gymnasium last Wednesday evening by defeating Ellsworth high school in an interesting game 14 to 8. Although the local five showed only occasional spurts of the brand of play that won them the district and regional class C championship last season, they revealed themselves a smooth running machine after they once started pulling together.

In the opening half, which was marked by close guarding but erratic passing on both sides, Coach Ray Kipke started practically a substitute team with only two of last year's regulars in the line-up. McCall and Smith held down the forward berths, Helms was at center, and Max Novak and Bill Supernaw at guards.

A free throw by McCall was the only score made by this combination and towards the end of the period, Coach Kipke completely changed the line-up. Bill Novak and Dick Marshall went in as forwards, Max Novak was shifted to center and Rex Supernaw took Novak's guard position. The change made little difference, however, and with the exception of a goal by Bill Novak, the count remained practically the same with the locals on the small end of a 4 to 3 count. Poor passing seemed to be the greatest fault, many chances to score being lost when local players threw the ball into the hands of their opponents.

The first few minutes of the second half were a nip and tuck affair with the score passing from the advantage of one to the other. It was in the period, however, that Kipke's men started to find themselves and he for the final whistle sounded they had Ellsworth checked and piled up 11 points to the visitor's 4.

Max Novak was Charlevoix's high point man with a total of 6 from three goals. He was followed closely by Marshall with 5 points from two goals and a free throw. Although not featuring heavily in the scoring, Bill Novak played a good game at forward and was in practically every play to advance the ball toward the goal. Bill Supernaw played his regular good game at guard, while Rex Supernaw and Foster showed equally as well at the other guard position. Elzinga, diminutive Ellsworth forward, scored most markers for his team and was the outstanding star for the visitors. This little fellow caused a lot of trouble at the district and regional tournaments last year when Ellsworth won the class D crown.

The line-up:
Charlevoix
McCall Right Forward
E. Novak Left Forward
V. Smith Center
Marshall Center
Helms M. Novak
B. Supernaw Right Guard
R. Supernaw Left Guard
R. Supernaw, Foster

MAN AND WIFE
BACK TO HEALTH, PRAISE KONJOLA

One of the Many Cases of Homes Freed From Suffering and Made Happy Again.

MR. AND MRS. DONALD DICKSON

As the fame of Konjola spreads, there pour in day by day an endless stream of endorsements of this super-medicine from the men and women, old and young, that are rejoicing in the new and glorious health this remedy has brought them. Think of the new happiness in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dickson, 43 Alden avenue, Battle Creek. Read what Mrs. Dickson says:

"What Konjola did for me is nothing short of wonderful. For years I suffered from indigestion and kidney trouble. Medicine after medicine did not a bit of good, and I grew worse. I lost in weight, strength and general health. When things looked darkest a friend recommended Konjola, and I started with it. Within a few weeks I was well again; full of joyous health. My system is built up, and I feel years and years younger. My husband had rheumatism for 15 years, and, seeing what Konjola did for me, he started taking it. Wonder of wonders—it restored him just as it had me. He was made a new man again in a few short weeks, free from indigestion, headaches and rheumatism. Surely Konjola has been a blessing in this home."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's Drug Store, and by all the best druggists throughout this entire section.

At the school program on Wednesday the chief event was a poem reciting contest by all the grades. The following were the winners: Beginners' class, Jessie Potter; first grade, Sidney Clarke; third grade, Charles Dhaseler; fourth grade, Hattie Potter; fifth grade, Clayton Smith; sixth grade, Warren Shapton; seventh grade, Ernest Potter; eighth grade, Elizabeth Dhaseler. Charles Dhaseler received the grand prize. This was very interesting to the parents present, and the children enjoyed very much the treat of peanuts, candy and apples.

The Case of the Day-Coach Passenger versus the Elimination of the Pullman Surcharge

ABOLITION of the Pullman Surcharge is once more being urged for passage by the Congress of the United States.

ADOPTION of the Robinson (Senate) Bill involves direct losses to the railroads in revenues aggregating $40,000,000 per annum and this loss of necessity will have to be made up in some manner. There are three expedients only:

- (1) Increased passenger rates for all passengers whether in the day coach or in the Pullman or Parlor Cars.
- (2) Restricting passenger service on certain lines.
- (3) Charging this expense to the shippers of freight.

ANY one of these three expedients is undesirable, unfair from the community standpoint, and not in the best interests of society as a whole.

AFTER all the Pullman service—for passengers traveling in sleeping or parlor cars—is a high class hotel service on wheels, that a great part of the traveling public does not demand nor expect.

THE surcharge—the 50 per cent. additional—tacked on to the regular Pullman charge—is the special revenue derived by the railroads for the performing of special service to the passengers who want to travel in extra comfort and luxury. Such passengers require:

A heavier capital investment in cars per capita.

Two and one half times the space that is allotted to the passenger in the day coach.

An average of twelve thousand two hundred and sixty pounds of car as against 8,800 pounds per passenger riding in day coaches.

Parking of Pullman cars before train departure from and after arrival at the terminals involving considerable extra work and heavier terminal costs and requiring the holding, for that purpose only, of the railroads' highest-priced lands in the larger cities.

Pullman cars being often moved one way empty—as for instance, in the California and Florida service, which means a double road haul for one fare and in many cases to take care of these movements, cars have to be hauled extra distances.

Railroads having to guarantee earnings on every line of Pullman cars operated and contracting for their use over a period of years.

ALL of these obligations are extra expenses upon the railroads which are not involved in the handling of day coach passengers.

IT is a principle of good business and good government to make the user of a service pay for that special service. That is followed in the higher charge for air mail as against the ordinary service.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission has twice refused to abolish the surcharge as being contrary to the basic principle of the greatest good to the greatest number, the guiding standard of all of that body's decisions. The Interstate Commerce Commission is a properly constituted court that represents the interests of all the people. Why should its decisions be upset for the benefit of the few to the prejudice of the interests of the many?

"Do you want me to pick up the horse?"

"It would only waste your time," Harris said. "We couldn't prove it on him—the way things are."

"That's all right," Harris said. "But I could hold him till after you're back at the ranch. Some day folks may wake up and need a sheriff. It's hard to say."

The men had finished working the herd and were crowding around the wagon for their meal.

"You go ahead and eat, Billie," Alden said. "I'll feed a little later on. I've got a fuss to pick with Cal."

Billie left them together and the sheriff squatted on his heels.

"What's this rumor about your farming the Three Bar?" he asked. "Horne said all the hands were guessing, but I haven't heard anything about it outside."

"And I don't want it leaking out before we start," Harris said. "But we're going to break out the fat. I find the plans all laid and sent word off. Things are moving toward the start right now."

"If I see things up," Alden predicted. "With one forefinger he traced a design in the dust, then he looked out. 'I'll play in with you the best I can.' 'We've got to make a clean split,' Harris said. 'Get the wild ones off the place. Then they can be handled.'"

Alden was regarding old Rile Foster who had drawn apart from the rest and was eating his meal in solitude. The old man had taken a foot stool from his pocket and was studying it as if fascinated by the souther reflections it roused in him. Alden shook his head as he rose and moved toward the wagon.

"Horne was telling me about Bangs too," he said. "Pretty tough for Rile. They was as close as father and son those two."

Harris and the sheriff joined the rest at the wagon and held out plates and cups to Whittles. The girl was oddly excited, anxious for the start, now that the decision had been made. "How long will it take to get things moving after we get back?" she asked. "Not more than a week at the outside," Harris said. "Probably less."

"You don't mean that?" she asked. "I want to know the truth."

"You have it," he assured her. "I had the plans all laid. Our crew is already headed for the Three Bar. Before they get there every man will have filed on a quarter I designated for him. Inside a week we'll have covered the flat."

Long after the hands had turned in for the night she heard a faint murmur of voices and looked from her teepee. The brilliant moonlight showed Harris and the sheriff sitting off by themselves. For no apparent reason she thought of Carlos Deane and, peep by peep, she contrasted him with the man who sat talking to the sheriff. Each was almost super-efficient in his own chosen line and she caught herself wondering what each one would do if suddenly transplanted to the environment of the other. Then her mind occupied itself with Harris who would soon break out the first plow furrow that had ever scarred the range within a radius of fifty miles and she pictured again a sign she had seen that day: "Squatter let your wagon wheels keep turning."

Three heavy wagons, each drawn by four big mules, traveled north along the Coldriver stage trail. Every wagon was loaded to the brim of the triple box. Two men were mounted on each wagon seat, the man beside the driver balancing a rifle across his knees.

He pointed out across a flat beside the road toward a sign that loomed in the center. The black-browed plow designated as Tiny swung the mules off the road and headed for the sign. The three wagons were drawn up some fifteen yards apart in the shape of a triangle, the mules unbridled and given a feed of grain from nosebags, tied to the wagons and supplied with hauled hay. Tiny walked over and viewed the sign.

"Squatter don't let sunner find you here," he roared.

"It's about that time now," he observed, squinting over his shoulder. "It'd be a mistake to leave evidence like that around." He tore down the sign and worked it into a wooden box with an ax. "Now they can't do nothing to us for drifting in here by error," he remarked to his companions. "It wouldn't be fair."

In the morning the three wagons lumbered on. Near sunset they passed another sign where the Three Bar road branched off to the left. They pulled up the mules.

"Uproot that little beauty, Russel," he advised. "We're getting close to home."

The current red glare descended and threw his weight against the sign, working it from side to side until the posts were loosened in the ground, pried it up and loaded it on the wagon.

"Quick work, Russel," the big man complimented. "For a little fellow you're real spunky and active. He ducked to the mules and they settled steadily into the collars and moved on to the Three Bar."

The Three Bar men viewed the freighters curiously as they swung the wagon seat across the top of the wagon and when the containing sacks were cleared away there were three heavy plows showing under the hands between them piled with shavings of fence wire. The second load consisted of a dismounted drill, a crate of long-handled shovels, and more barbed wire; the third held a rake and a mowing machine, more wire, legs of fence staples and a dozen forks.

"The Three Bar will be the middle point of a cyclone," Moore prophesied as he viewed the implements. "Just as soon as this leaks out."

"We fetched our cyclone openers with us," Russ assured him. "Let her back."

From the cook-shack door the girl viewed these preparations, then turned her eyes to the flat and visioned it with a carpet of rippling hay.

There was a clatter of hoofs and a rattling of gravel as five horsemen put their sure-footed mounts down the steep slope two hundred yards back of the house and followed along the fence of the corral. The five Brandons had cut across the shoulder of the mountain. The girl wondered at this visit as she heard late Harmon, the father and head of the tribe, ask Harris to put them up for the night.

An hour later Harris and Lark came to her door and she let them in. "The Brandons are riding down to file on a quarter apiece," Harris said. "Art quit the wagon below their place as we came in and told the rest that we're going to farm the Three Bar."

"Then you're doing the same?" she asked Lark with sudden hope that her brand would have company in the move.

Old man Brandon shook his head. "Not right off," he said. "Until we see how you folks pan out. We can't be too sure of the way you do. We're going to protect ourselves before some nester outfit turns up at our front door."

"But the other small outfits feel the same way," Harris said. "If two of us start the rest will join in."

"Maybe so," the old man said doubtfully. "But noways likely. They're too set on the other side. The thought was deep-rooted and he could not be moved."

"We'll let it out it's only for protection that we all are filing," he said. "And that we don't aim to prove up. The outfits that don't file now will lose out. This will always be open range, more than where we can control the grass. As soon as the squatters see one outfit starting, they'll take out papers on every piece of dirt they can get water to. They'll have six months to move on, then a six months' stay. They'll hang round waiting for things to open up so they can rush in here. The brand owners who haven't hedged themselves before-hand will run down to file and find that nesters have had papers on all the good pieces right in their doorway for months. They'll have only the plots left that their home ranch sets on, and likely no water even for that."

The Brandons stayed for the night and rode off at daylight the next morning, while the Three Bar men prepared for a trip to Brille's. As the rest were saddling for the start Harris saw old Rile Foster seated by himself, gazing off across the hills.

"Better come and ride over with us, Rile," he urged. "Bangs would want you to try and forget."

The old man shook his head.

"I'm drifting today," he said. "I'll likely be back before long. I back-tracked Blue to their camp and trailed them twenty miles to where they joined another bunch. It was some of Harper's devils—I don't know which four. The way or another, whether I get the right four or not, I'm going to play even for Bangs."

There were less than a dozen others in Brille's store when the Three Bar men crowded through the door. Five men sat at one of the tables in the big room and indulged in a casual game of stud. Harper and Lang were among them. Two of them Harris knew as men named Hopkins and Wade. The fifth was unknown to him. The albino eyes met Harris' steadily as he entered at the head of the Three Bar men.

The news that the Three Bar had turned into a squatter outfit had been widely noised abroad. From behind the bar Brille covertly studied the man who was responsible for this change. Four men from the Half-moon D stood grouped at one end of the room. They split up and mingled among the others. Brille moved up and down behind the bar, polishing it with a towel. One after another he drew each of the men from the Half-moon D into conversation with the Three Bar horsemanship to determine whether or not they resembled his taste. There was no evidence of it in their speech.

The men from the two outfits mingled as unobtrusively as before and at last Harris smiled across at Brille.

"Well, have you sized it all up?" he asked.

The storekeeper looked up quickly, knowing that Harris had read his purpose in drawing him into conversation with the four men. He polished the bar thoughtfully, then nodded.

"A man in my business has to keep posted—both ways," he said. "I just wanted to make sure. Five years ago every man would have quit the Three Bar like a snake—feeling was that strong. But the boys drift from place to place and they've seen both ends of it. They don't give a damn one way or the other now. Why should they? They got nothing at stake. Five years ago you couldn't have hired a man to ride for you now they'll be pouring in asking for jobs—just because they figure there'll be some excitement on tap."

The men from the Half-moon D were due back and inside of an hour they rode off, leaving only Harris' men and the five card-players in the place. Harris walked over to the table and the Three Bar men shifted positions, slouching sideways at the bar or leaning with their backs to it, alertly watching this unexpected move as the foreman spoke to the albino.

"Let's you and I draw off and have a little talk," he said. "If you can spare the time."

Harper tilted up the corner of his handkerchief and peeked at it, then turned his other cards face down on the table.

"Pass," he said, and rose to face Harris. "Lead the way."

Harris moved over to another table and the two men sat down, facing each other across it. He motioned to Evans and Lanky joined them. Harris plunged abruptly into what he had to say.

"First off, Harper, I want you to get it straight that I'm not fool enough to threaten you—for I know you're not any more afraid of me than I am of you. This is just a little explaining, a business talk, so we'll both know where we stand. It's up to you whether we let each other alone or fight."

"Good start," the albino commented. "Go right on."

"All right—it's like this," Harris resumed. "I'm going to have my hands full without you hiring on to poster us. I'm not out to reform the country. They set the fashion of dog eat dog and every man for himself; so the Three Bar is not that interests me. You keep out of my affairs and I'll let you go your own gait. If you mix in I'll have your men hunted down like rats."

Harper glanced toward the group at the bar.

"You were prudent enough to pick a time when you're three to one to tell me about that," he said. "If I'd kill you in your chair I might have some trouble getting out the door."

"Of course I'd take every chance to play safe," Harris admitted. "But that is beside the point. I'd have told you the same thing if the odds had been reversed. You've got brains, or you'd have been dead for twenty years. If I thought you were a hap-hazard homicide I wouldn't be sitting here. But you wouldn't kill a man without looking a few weeks ahead and making sure it was safe."

"Co, cheer—let's hear the rest of it," Harper urged. "You've got an original line of talk."

"You're playing one game and I'm playing mine," Harris said. "You're in the middle now—like you have been once or twice before. But you know that the sentiment of a community reverses almost overnight. You've stepped out just ahead of a clean-up a time or two in the past. I've got a hard bunch of terriers over at the Three Bar and you couldn't hold us without a battle big enough to go down in history as the Three Bar war. Either way you'd lose, for it would stir folks up—and when they're stirred you're through. Do you remember what Al Moody did up on the Gallatin and what old Con Blithem sprung on the Nations Trail? That will happen again right here."

The two men were leaning toward each other, elbows resting on the table. Harper relaxed and leaned back comfortably in his chair as he twisted a smoke. Evans propped his feet on the table and Harris hung one knee over the arm of his chair. The men at the bar knew that some crisis had been safely passed.

"You talk as if I was running an outfit of my own and I had a bunch of riders that could swarm down on you," Harper objected. "I don't even run a brand of my own or have one man riding for me."

"The wild bunch is riding for you," Harris stated.

"Suppose that was true," Harper said. "Then what?"

"In one corner after the next they've hit the foreman whenever they got to feeling too strong. If you line up against me that time has come again. If I get potted from the bench I've hedged it so that those boys that filed over there won't be left in the lurch. There'll be a reward of a thousand dollars hanging up for the scalp of each of fifteen men whose names I gathered while I was proving round—reliable men to carry on what I've begun; and marshals thicker than flies to protect the honest things on the Three Bar."

"Then it might be bad policy to bushwhack you," Harper observed.

"You can go your own gait," Harris said. "As long as you lay off Three Bar cows. You landed me one time to come down to your hangout in the Brooks. I won't ever make that visit unless you call on the Three Bar first; then, just out of politeness, I'll ride over at the head of a hundred men."

"Then it don't look as if we'd get anywhere, visiting back and forth," Harper said.

"Now don't think I'm throwing a bluff or threatening; I'm just telling you. You could rectify a number of things that could happen to me in return—all of 'em true. I'm just counting that you've got brains and can see it's not going to help either one of us to get lined up wrong. What do you say—shall we call it hands off between the Three Bar and you?"

The albino half closed his eyes, the pale eyeballs glittering through the slit of his lids as he reflected on this proposition, tapping a careless finger on his knee. He glanced absent-mindedly toward the bar, his thoughts wholly occupied with the matter in hand. A pair of eyes that gazed back at him drew his own and he found himself looking at Bentley, the man who repped with the Three Bar for shade. The albino's suspicions were as thick and easily roused as those of a beast of prey in a dangerous neighborhood. With one of those quick shifts of which his mind was capable he concentrated every mental effort toward linking Bentley with some unpleasant episode of the past. The man had turned away and Harper could only sense a vague feeling that he was dangerous to him, without definite point upon which to base his suspicions. At the sound of Harris' voice his mind made another lightning shift back to the present.

"Well?" Harris asked.

"Why, if I had anything to do with it, like you seem to think, I'd advise against our bucking each other," Harper said. "I'd try to get along—and declare hands off." He rose, nodded to the two men and returned to the stud game.

"He'll do it, too," Evans predicted. "There's that much fixed anyway—not a bad piece of work."

The two men returned to the bar and Brille moved close to Harris for fifteen years he had stood behind that bar and observed the men of the whole countryside at their worst—and best; and he knew them. As well as if he had beaten two oceans on the three at the table he knew that Harris and Harper had reached an agreement of some sort that was satisfactory to both.

Ten minutes later the five men rose to go. Harris looked at his watch.

"I'm off," he said to Evans. "Try and get the boys home by tomorrow morning if it's possible."

He went outside and mounted as the five rustlers swung to their saddles.

"I'm going your way as far as the forks," he said to Harper.

The three Bar men were treated to the sight of their foreman riding down the road beside Harper at the head of four of the worst rustlers in the state.

And behind the bar Brille moved (TO BE CONTINUED.)

E. C. Waller, of the Orchard Bay Farm, whose herd of purebred Holstein dairy cattle is well known in Charlevoix, has recently chosen a trade name to identify his herd, according to an announcement made by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, which registered the name for Mr. Waller. Roy Schneider spent Saturday night with Carlton Ager.

Roy Schneider spent Tuesday evening with Harrison Kidder.

The third and fourth grade language classes are studying "Language Drill Cards."

The first and second grades are learning their Christmas recitations for language.

Mrs. Holcecheck, accompanied by Mrs. Schneider, drove to Petoskey last Friday afternoon.

We have begun our Christmas program, which will probably be given on Friday, December 21st.

A number of the children are in hopes Beth will be back soon so as to help in our Christmas program.

Our basketball and goals have arrived, so we're getting plenty of exercise now and we surely enjoy them when we're unable to be outside playing.

Last Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Holcecheck took the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades (thirteen in number) for a little spin in her coupe.

We first visited the Norwood school, which we enjoyed immensely; then we went for a walk on the Norwood beach and gathered shells. Then we went down the "Old Dixie Highway" to Eastport, where we obtained some goodies. Then we took U. S. 31 back for school. We visited the Hillton school for a short time on our way back. Everyone reports a fine time.

Charlevoix Public School Notes

Honor Department

Mr. Coleman is very glad to announce that the seniors have learned at least one thing in the course of their high school life—the hearty spirit of cooperation, especially during examinations.

Is this the way high school students prepare their assignments? They take out a nickel (if they have one) and say if it comes down heads, I'll go to a movie. If it comes down tails I'll go to the dance. If it lands up edge I'll study. They then toss it up and of course it always comes down on edge.

One day in the long ago, when our principal was a small boy going to school, he and his brother were walking up the street. They met a teacher and Mr. North's brother tipped his hat to her, but Mr. North only said "Hello." "Why didn't you tip your hat to her?" demanded his brother when they had passed. "Oh, she was my teacher last year," replied Mr. North.

The sun never sets on English possessions. Do you know why? Because the good Lord is afraid to trust her in the dark—according to Mr. Coleman. We all know he's Irish.

Advantage of Water

Water has a great influence on the temperature of land. Hence it also influences the lives of the people. Therefore Charlevoix is very fortunate in being situated on the northern shore of Lake Michigan. It stops all the cooling breezes from the lake and keeps the snow away. At Traverse City there are several inches of snow.

History News

The American history classes have completed the study of the Revolutionary War and did exceedingly well in the examination covering the Revolutionary Period.

The Modern history classes are working on projects to illustrate the period of the French revolution, which they have been studying.

The Ancient history classes are still busy with the Greeks.

Domestic Science Department

There is one thing everyone is interested in—cooking.

The ability to prepare good food and a well balanced menu is an art, but this is what the eighteen girls in the cooking class are learning to do. We have studied the composition of foods and how to prepare each in several different ways. We have discussed and made improvements on the recipes. The class has composed a menu, cooked and served it. We are learning new things every day and by the end of this year we all expect to be first class cooks.

English Department

The third year English class are studying Washington Irving. We have started the Knickerbocker history, or the history of New York. We are surprised to find that these governors by weight rather than by brain.

Last week the sophomore English class, while studying Silas Marner, dramatized the chapter in which there was held a party at the Red House. We also dramatized several other parts. We are now studying Romance and Realism in poetry and novels, especially of modern authors.

Physics News

The laboratory has been re-arranged and the seats now face the board, for which we are very grateful.

Last Tuesday we had laboratory for the first time this year. Physics students are reminded that they should always put all apparatus away after laboratory. Our class has been studying the pendulum. Mr. North called our attention to the fact that even pendulums on clocks move faster now than years ago. When our grandfathers went to see their girls, the grandfather clock in the hall ticked very slowly and seemed to say: "Take your time, take your time." But now those little clocks they tick so fast and they say: "Get there, get there, get there," in less time than it takes to tell it.

Mr. North: "Why don't you write your assignment down, Arnold? You certainly can't expect to remember that. You'll probably have to ask some of the girls about it. Oh, I see. That is why you did not write it down!"

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT

Self-Starter or Trailer?

There are just two kinds of men in business: Those who have to be started and those who start themselves. Nobody wants an automobile without a self-starter any more, and nobody will pay very much for the services of a man who has to be cranked up. The fellow who starts himself, then starts a few other people around the town, is the only man who can rise to greater heights of success.

Unfortunately, only a small proportion of the thousands of young men and women who graduate every year from high school are equipped with real initiative. These few are the ones who, with a little special training, in a few years are accused of having pulled or the luck to forge ahead. The rest are the trailers. And there are enough trailers to every leader to make the qualities of the leader stand out clear and strong. If you haven't a natural store of initiative, start now and develop it. If you have to be cranked up—get out of it. Be a self-starter and you will be a Success.

Band Notes

It is a pleasure to announce that the high school band will furnish the music at our home games this year. Snappy music between quarters helps the players to catch a little more pep and every little helps to make us a winning team.

The band boys are working hard to earn their band suits. They wish to look their best at Traverse City when playing in the contest.

The high school band played at the basketball game Wednesday night. Everyone present appreciated the fine music. When the band struck up the musical sounds of "Varsity," it brought the crowd to their feet.

The band boys are planning a concert in the near future. Watch for the date.

The beginning class in band music is progressing rapidly. The new members will join the first class after Christmas, making a total of forty pieces.

It may be of interest to know several girls are taking band music this year. We hope to have more in the future.

Athletic News

First Basketball Game, Charlevoix vs. Ellsworth—Score 14 to 8 in favor of C. H. S.

Rah! Rah! Rah! Three big cheers for "Cornie" McCall. He started the game off in our favor by making a free throw. That wasn't all either. Everything happened along smoothly until Max Novak made a basket. Two more points for us. Things were just beginning to go good when of course, the whistle would have to blow ending the first quarter.

In favor of the Red and White. The quintet that played was Cornie McCall, Max Novak, Crane Helms, Bill Supernaw and Vic Smith. Second quarter began with Vic Smith, Cornie McCall and Crane Helms going out and Rex Supernaw, Bill Novak and Dick Marshall taking their places. This quarter went all for Ellsworth's favor. It ended with the score 4-3 in favor of the opponents.

During the third quarter the outlook seemed to be very much brighter. Max Novak was the star player in this quarter. The game was stepping along very excitingly when Max made a basket. The ball had hardly time to get back to center when Dick Marshall grabbed it and made another basket. While the crowd was still cheering for Dick, Max very nicely made another basket in favor of the colors he wore. The final score at the end of the third quarter was 9-4 in favor of C. H. S.

The fourth quarter, the most exciting of them all, was sort of a fifty-fifty quarter. Both teams put up a good fight, which is shown by the score that was made, Ellsworth 11 and Charlevoix 10. The first part of the quarter was very exciting indeed. The score was 6-9 in our favor and Ellsworth was steadily climbing. The opponents made another basket. Score 8-9. Things were beginning to look serious. The fellows must have realized this for after the crowd had yelled and shrieked awhile, the forwards decided that some action had to be taken. (Please note the good of a big crowd). After the opponents made what was their share of the scores, Bill Novak started our share with a free throw, following it with a long shot. He had barely time to turn around when Dick had the ball, shot for a basket and made it. The score was now boosted to 14-8. Soon afterwards the whistle blew, which marked the end of the first and successful basketball game. The final score was 14-8 in favor of the Red and White.

Don't forget that next Saturday night, December 8, we play Clare here. This is a home game, so let's see everyone out. Come on team. Let's go!

Progress of School

School has been under way now for about three months.

It seems to have been going much more smoothly than for many years, and were we to venture a guess as to the reasons we think we would arrange them something like this:

The use of a new school building. The employing of a new superintendent.

Athletics. Lyceum course.

For many years it has been evident that the old school building with its equipment was not enough to care for the needs of the district. The rooms were very crowded. This was especially true of the high school building, where it was necessary to assemble to six upper grades. Since the six lower grades have been removed to the new building the old central building has been fitted up to accommodate the junior high. They have been placed by themselves in a capacious building in under a competent principal and staff of teachers.

The increased accommodations in the high school building have resulted in benefiting the four upper grades. Regarding the second event, we have nothing to say against the old superintendent. He gave us no efficient school system. Our only point is—"new brooms sweep clean."

As to the third, athletics seemed to have livened up considerably since occupying the new school and gymnasium building. Last spring the Charlevoix basketball team won the class C championship. This fall, for the first time in four years, our football team succeeded in winning some of the games.

Lastly, our lyceum course seems to have improved very much. So far, we have had the pleasure of listening to a very interesting lecture given by Private Peat, a world war veteran. We expect the future numbers to be very good also.

General News

On Wednesday morning Mr. Otterhein read a very interesting editorial from a paper published by the Roosevelt school at Ypsilanti, entitled "Uncle Charlie At a Basketball Game."

"Uncle Charlie" says that you can see a great deal of human nature at a basketball game. You can tell which boys are going to grow up and always give a square deal and which boys are going to cheat his neighbors. The best basketball players do not foul and he certainly is not the kind that is going to grow up to be a bootlegger or a gambler.

The Charlevoix high school put on the following Thanksgiving program Wednesday:

Song, "America and a Merry Heart."

Play, Courtship of Miles Standish. Characters: Clara Kelderhouse, Gerald Roderick, Bill Foster.

Piano solo by Doris Trimble.

Speech by Dr. Mattson.

Song, "How Firm a Foundation."

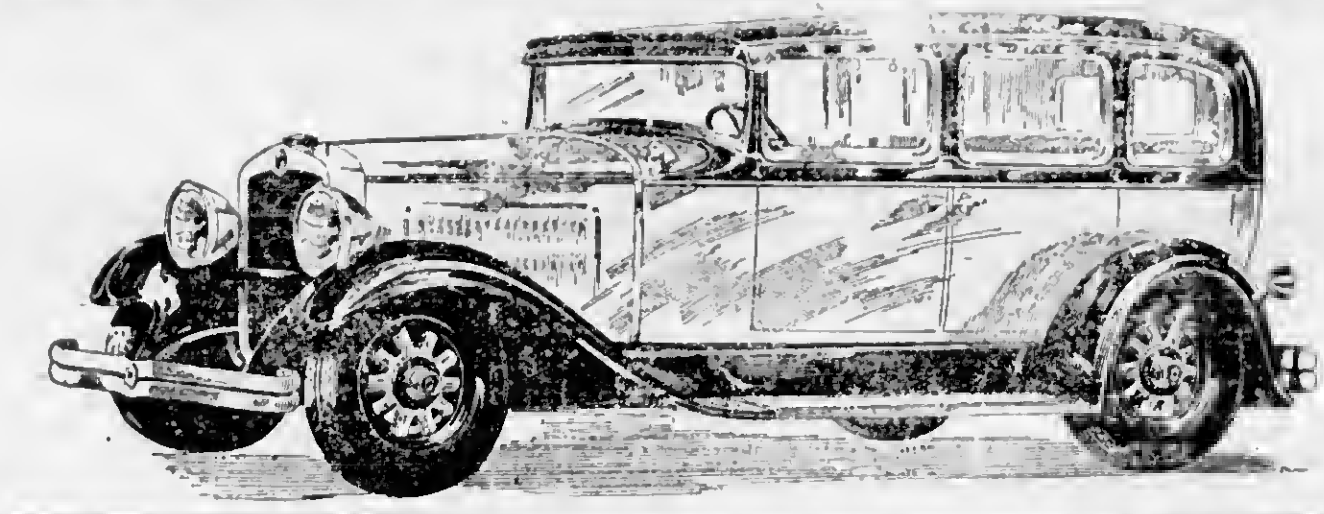

There were a few snappy yells to end the program, given for the boys who played Ellsworth that night.

Miss Thomas, Miss Wilson, Mrs. McKinley and Mr. North spent the Thanksgiving vacation in Charlevoix. Miss Fowler went to Lansing. Mr. Coleman went to Fort Huron and Miss Keller to Detroit.

Thanksgiving Program

Thanksgiving was well remembered by the high school students last Wednesday afternoon. The high school sang appropriate songs, a piano solo was given by Doris Trimble, which was followed by a playlet given by John Alden and Miles Standish in "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Doctor Mattson gave a very interesting talk on his boyhood preparation before Thanksgiving. Nothing was a great hobby for him, he explained, especially at Thanksgiving time. We rarely see the gigantic nuts that were described, such as the walnut, hickory and chestnut. He pictured to us the way he and other kids went about to find these nuts and in climbing about the great forest for each one's tree. Also Dr. Mattson pictured to us his boyhood home, where he spent many happy years. We students were elated over his

RELIGIOUS SURVEYS RE- VEAL STARTLING FACTS

Report Shows But 1200 Children Enrolled in Sunday Schools

Meeting with the executive committee of the Charlevoix County Council of Religious Education in the Congregational church Monday afternoon and evening, pastors, Sunday school superintendents and workers heard from the report of a committee making a religious survey of the county that only about 1200 children were enrolled in Sunday school work, many of whom are too far from a Sunday school to insure attendance.

The Council is making a definite attempt to remedy these conditions. Already arrangements have been made for week day religious instruction in three localities and other work will be undertaken as soon as possible. The plan is for the cooperating churches to accept assignments of territory into which they will be expected to carry the gospel message.

Two parallel conferences were held Monday afternoon, one for the pastors, who took the opportunity to organize a county ministerial association, and the other for superintendents and other Sunday school workers. At the latter meeting there was a discussion of "The Session Program," following a talk on the subject by Mrs. Harker Kirby, who emphasized the need of opening and closing the school on time, of devoting a portion of the hour to real worship, and of giving at least thirty minutes of uninterrupted study to the lesson.

A fellowship supper followed the afternoon session and the entire group went into conference at the evening session.

The next meeting of the council will be held at the Presbyterian church, East Jordan, on Monday, January 7th.

W. H. Henley Wins at Kalamazoo Potato Show.

Another blue ribbon found its way to a new home in Charlevoix county as a result of entering several of our prize winning samples of potatoes in the Southwestern Potato Show held in Kalamazoo, November 26, 27 and 28.

W. H. Henley, Charlevoix, increased his string of ribbons by winning first on his husel sample of certified Russett Rurals.

Lee Sneathen, also of Charlevoix, won a third in the same class. Thus out of three samples displayed, we won a first and third. It is worthy of note that Otsego county won second and fourth in the same class, giving Northern Michigan a clean sweep in this class, competing with Southern Michigan.

In winning, a sample of potatoes that won first at the recent Greenville show and fourth at Big Rapids, did not win at all competing with our samples.

Congratulations are extended to W. H. Henley and Lee Sneathen. Now wait for the state show at East Lansing.

How to Properly Grade Potatoes to Be Demonstrated

All potato farmers are cordially invited and urged to attend a series of three meetings for the purpose of showing how potatoes should be graded to meet the market requirements.

The first meeting will be held at the Boyne City Co-Op Co. on Friday, December 7th, at 9:30 a. m., first time; second at the Charlevoix Co-Op at 10:30 a. m., standard time, and the third at the East Jordan Marketing Assn. at 1:30 p. m., standard time, all on the same day—Friday, December 7th.

It is particularly important that you should have your potatoes graded properly this year, when the price is low and inferior potatoes a drone on the market. No longer can poor graded potatoes be sold, in competition with high quality stuff. These meetings will show you how to interpret the grade requirements and to see for yourself the potatoes as they run over the grader and what should be culled out.

David Inglis of Van, inspector in this district, will be present and conduct the meetings.

It is very common to hear the criticisms that the Co-Op managers are taking too many potatoes out, and that it is all foolish. Come to these meetings and see for yourself how potatoes should be graded, and then thank the graders for doing a good job.

Remember the dates and attend one meeting.

WEAVER SAYS TO USE CHRISTMAS SEALS

Many Letters Are Already Bearing M. T. A. Stamps.

Postmaster George W. Weaver gives hearty endorsement to tuberculosis Christmas seals and the health work they stand for, but warns patrons to take care where they place the stickers.

"Put them on the backs, not the fronts of letters," he says. "The use of any other kind of label than a government postage stamp on the address side of envelopes confuses postal employees and delays the mails."

Although sale of the Christmas seals was not begun by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association until Friday of last week, Mr. Weaver reports that many letters handled at the Charlevoix postoffice already bear the stamps.

The brilliant colors of the 1928 seals are in harmony with the approaching Yule season. Blue, green and red predominate in the design, which features the "Ship of Health" and the double-barred cross, symbol of the crusade against tuberculosis.

Now is the time you will need a Willard storage battery for your car at prices that cannot be under-sold. Benj. Brown—Adv. 41-11.

MICHIGAN WINTER SPORTS ASSN. MET

ADOPT CONSTITUTION AT PETOSKEY LAST WEDNESDAY

Old Officers Were Re-elected for Another Year—Local Winter Club Was Represented

At a meeting of the Michigan Winter Sports association at the Cushman Hotel, Petoskey, last Wednesday evening, the constitution was adopted, formally placing the association on its feet and providing the method of organization, election, dues, etc.

The Lake Charlevoix Winter Sports Club was represented at the meeting by Fred E. Cartier, Archie L. Livingston, Earl A. Young, A. J. Usher and D. T. McHugh. Although Charlevoix did not become a member of the association, the matter is receiving consideration locally and will probably be decided Thursday evening at the annual Association of Commerce meeting.

Officers Elected

The club elected W. L. McNamus, Jr., Petoskey, president; Arthur Stace, Ann Arbor, vice-president, and John A. Doelle, Lansing, Michigan, Real Estate association, secretary-treasurer. Other directors-at-large included Frank Kenyon, superintendent of the Michigan state parks at Mackinac Island and Mackinaw City; H. J. Gray, of the Michigan Tourist Bureau, Grand Rapids; Thomas F. Marsdon, East Michigan Development Bureau, Bny City; George Bishop, Upper Peninsula Development Bureau, Marquette. Each individual club in Michigan will be represented by a director: C. E. Wells, Traverse City; L. E. Juller, Harbor Springs; Norman W. Wells, Petoskey, and Dr. J. F. Currow, Cadillac, having been named from their home towns.

The Constitution

The constitution adopted follows: Name: The name of this organization shall be the Michigan Winter Sports Association.

Object: The object of this association shall be the promotion of winter sports in all its branches in every town of Michigan where climatic conditions make them possible. To render aid in publicity for these activities. To promote the education of the local residents to the advantages of the winter season. To assist by advice, instruction and information the local organizations in conducting successful winter sports programs. To promote and encourage the visiting of Northern Michigan by winter as well as summer tourists.

Membership: This organization shall consist of seven directors at large, chosen from the state of Michigan, and one director from each local organization. This board of directors shall be elected at the annual meeting of the association to be held the first Tuesday of October of each year at a place to be designated by the president.

Officers: Immediately after the election the board of directors will convene and proceed to elect a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. The latter two offices may be combined at the choice of the board of directors. The officers elected shall hold office for one year or until their successors are named.

Dues: Any local organization for the promotion of winter sports may become a member of the association by payment of $2.00 and shall hold membership thereafter by the payment of the annual dues. Dues are to be paid by October first of each year.

This constitution may be amended at any time upon a two thirds vote of the membership.

The committee vns J. F. Carrow, Cadillac; Frank Kenyon, Mackinac Island and A. B. Baekus, Harbor Springs.

Speakers from many points in the state gave an outline of the activities in their communities and their opinion on the possibilities and value of winter sports.

1200 ENROLLED IN THE RURAL SCHOOLS

Misstatement Made in Last Week's Issue of the Courier

In reporting the findings of the survey being made by the County Council of Religious Education, a misstatement was made in this paper last week. We should have said that there are about 1200 enrolled in the rural schools of the county, many of whom are too far from a Sunday school to insure regular attendance. The total enrollment in the public schools of the county, including the cities, is around 3,000.

The Council has learned of twenty-nine active Sunday schools throughout the entire county. Nineteen of these have submitted reports for 1928 showing an enrollment of around 1200 of public school age. The officers, teachers and adults of course swell the enrollment considerably. The ten schools not reporting include two good-sized ones, but it is doubtful if over half the children of public school age are enrolled in any Sunday school.

BANQUET WAS VERY BRILLIANT AFFAIR

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS THE GUESTS OF QUEEN ESTHERS

Miss Nettie Ecklund, Returned Missionary, Gave Interesting Address Covering Her Work

The Mother's and Daughter's banquet given Monday evening at the Methodist church for the mothers by the Queen Esther Circle, assisted by the auxiliary of the Methodist church, was a success far beyond expectations, with sixty people in attendance.

The banquet table, decorated with small Christmas trees alternating with red cyclamen and Christmas candles, lent a festive air. A part of the dining room was converted into a reception room, artistically decorated with flowers and ferns.

The banquet and program was effectively carried out under the personal supervision of Mrs. James Simmons and Mrs. A. C. Belding, directors of the Queen Esther work. Following the banquet the hostess, Mrs. Simmons, introduced Miss Ruth Matchett, president of the Queen Esther's, who welcomed the guests and paid a beautiful tribute to "mothers." The response was given by Mrs. Ada Beeman, president of the auxiliary, and voiced the sentiments of the missionary women, who are proud of the constructive work done by the members of the circle. During the banquet and program the Queen Esther's entertained with their catchy songs, which broke up all formality.

The address of the evening was given by Miss Nettie Ecklund, a returned missionary whose work has been in the West Indies and British Guiana. She vividly pictured her life from the time she left New York harbor, touching the smaller islands, spending some time at Barbados, finally reaching Trinidad, the scene of her labors for four years. Miss Ecklund had numerous pictures and mementoes of the places in which she worked and visited, and these having been shown before her talk, the audience could follow her and picture her life there. Her talk convinced her listeners that there is a genuine response and a true turning from the ways of darkness to the light of a higher life among these needy people.

The Queen Esther's closed the program with the dramatization of a chapter from their study book, "Youth and America," showing their work and how they carry out their programs each meeting.

The singing of "America" closed a very happy evening.

RED AND WHITE LOST TO CLARE

DEFEAT STOPPED STRING OF EIGHT VICTORIES

Aldread-Coached Five Gave Fastest Display of Floor Work Seen on Local Court

Charlevoix high school basketball team lost their first game in eight starts last Saturday evening in the local gymnasium to the fast Aldread-coached Clare high school five by a score of 19 to 7. The defeat marked Charlevoix's first set-back since before the district tournament at Boyne City last March.

Charlevoix held their only advantage in the first quarter, which ended with the score 2 to 1 in their favor. The battle was then between two apparently well-matched teams, and was marked by the close guarding and fast floor play of both teams. The local five counted with a goal, while Clare made their points with a free throw.

The second quarter opened with Clare launching an attack which immediately put the Red and White on the defense and kept them there throughout the remainder of the game. They outplayed and outscored the local five and the half found them leading by a 8 to 3 score. Clare's floor play was perhaps the fastest seen on the local court in many a moon, and they missed but few chances to score.

Even though Charlevoix's defense tightened considerably during the last two periods, they were unable to stop Clare's scoring drive. The visitors piled up 11 points to Charlevoix's 4 during the third and fourth quarters, leading 19 to 7 when the final whistle sounded.

Out of all fairness to Kipke's men, it must be said that the "breaks" of the game were not with them. Many long and short shots which ordinarily would have meant points circled the hoop and failed to go through. On the other hand, Clare missed very few tries.

Lang, Clare center, was the high score man for the visiting team, accounting for 9 of their points. Their attack centered around this fast pivot man, who never missed a goal shot. Graver, right forward, and Johnson, right guard, played well for the visitors. Max and Bill Novak divided scoring honors for Charlevoix with 3 points each.

Many Charlevoix fans who saw Clare defeated at Boyne City last Friday evening by a 33 to 13 score, were unanimous in their opinion that Aldread's men played 100 per cent better basketball at Charlevoix than they did at Boyne.

The local five goes to Ellsworth for a return game Friday evening. Ellsworth is a hard team to beat on their own floor and a tough battle is in prospect.

AUTOS SKID, CRASH ON ICE-COVERED PAVEMENT

Two cars from Clare were considerably damaged last Saturday evening when they skidded on the icy pavement and crashed at the corner of State and Clinton streets. The machines, owned by Coach Aldread, athletic director of Clare high school and a minister whose name we were unable to learn, were taken to the Charlevoix Auto Sales to undergo repairs.

CITY CHURCHES TO PRESENT OPERETTA

SEVENTY PEOPLE IN CAST OF "THE MAGI'S GIFT"

All Denominations Unite for Community Program at Gymnasium Friday Evening, Dec. 21.

A truly Christmas spirit will pervade the community on Friday evening, December 21st. Charlevoix churches—Catholic and Protestant, are uniting in the presentation of a Christmas operetta entitled "The Magi's Gift."

About 70 people are in the cast and the presentation will be given in the high school gymnasium at 8:00 p. m., under the direction of Mrs. A. J. Stelter. No admission will be charged, and everyone—young old, is urged to reserve the evening for this enjoyable community Christmas program. Following is the story of the operetta:

The scene of the story is laid in medieval England on Christmas Eve. In the cathedral there is a shrine believed by many to contain the crown and scarlet robe once worn by Caspar, one of the Three Wise Men. Tradition says that once each year at the Christmas season, Caspar appears again on earth, wearing his scarlet robe and jeweled crown, and walks up and down the highways giving a gift of gold and a heavenly blessing to all who chance to meet him, just as he brought a gift to the Little King so long ago.

Elsbeth, the little girl who lives at the inn, believes with all her heart in this legend. Her life is not a very happy one, as she is living with the innkeeper, old Thomas Moreley, whom she calls her uncle. Elsbeth has only a faint recollection of her father and mother, and Moreley will not allow her to speak of them, and tries in every way to convince her that what she says she remembers is not true.

On Christmas Eve, Sir Arthur Hertford, a Crusader but recently returned from Palestine, comes to visit the rich people in the Manor House. He has been away from England for over five years, during which time he has learned of the death of his father and mother and little sister. The news of Sir Arthur's arrival frightens Moreley so that he plans to send Elsbeth to another part of England. However, before he can do so, Elsbeth meets Sir Arthur, and as he is wearing the white tunic of the Crusader, and a long scarlet cloak, takes him to be the Magi she has so long expected. Sir Arthur on talking to the little girl discovers she is his sister whom he believed to be dead; he also recognizes in Moreley the old coachman who was with his family for many years. Moreley is forced to confess that after the death of Elsbeth's parents who were killed in an accident, he was to take Elsbeth and a considerable sum of money to some distant relatives. However, he was tempted by the sight of so much gold and so he reported that the little one had been killed with her parents, and disappeared with the child and the money. He produces proofs of Elsbeth's identity and the greater portion of the gold which he has never dared spend. So Elsbeth receives her gold and the greatest happiness she could ask for in the return of her brother; and feels that she has really received the Magi's heavenly gift.

The rich children from the Manor House and young Tom, Moreley's son, play important parts in the story.

The concert will be given in the gymnasium on Saturday, December 22, at 7:45 central standard time.

Enjoyable Surprise Party

Eighteen young people surprised Miss Dorothy Beardsley at the home of Miss Pearl Smith Monday evening, the occasion being Miss Beardsley's birthday anniversary. An enjoyable evening was spent in games after which a birthday lunch was served.

story. The Mummer's add a great deal of merriment and fun to the play, and the Carol Singers and strolling players stage "The Nativity," a scene from an old mystery play of the middle ages. The whole operetta has the setting and atmosphere of Medieval times.

Concert to Be Given at High School Gymnasium Sponsored by the M. E. "Litt." Club

The community is indebted to the Literary and Sewing Club of the Methodist church for presenting to Charlevoix people an opportunity to hear this combination of Welsh artists of unusual ability and musical technique. The published repertoire program contains 87 vocal and instrumental numbers.

Mr. Owen P. Franklin is a master organist and pianist. In 1924 he received the degree of Fellow of the Royal College of Organists. He has been a pupil under some of England's leading organists and was for four years organist at St. Alban's church, Holborn, England. The great Queen's hall, London, has several times had Mr. Franklin as concert organist and London critics are enthusiastic about his future.

In Miss Jennette Christine the company has a rare soprano who has been a successful soloist in New York, Chicago, Milan, Italy, and throughout England and Wales. Her's is a voice of flute-like purity, of great flexibility and flawless. She is a charming lyric artist and an accomplished pianist. The press notes say that she is as beautiful and charming in personality as accomplished in song.

This city probably never has had a baritone in its midst of the ability of Mr. Glanville Davies. Four times he has won English and Welsh national competitions for solo work, and in 1926 won the opera solo competition at the Swansea National open to tenors, baritones and basses.

The concert will be given in the gymnasium on Saturday, December 22, at 7:45 central standard time.

STATE SPORTSMEN ASK LAW CHANGES

SHORTER BASS SEASON, ROD LICENSE FAVORED

Three-Zone Proposal Was Accorded Approval and Will Go to the Legislature

The next legislature will be asked, among other things, to approve a shorter bass season, a rod license and to give northern pike protection. This was decided last Tuesday when 50 sportsmen, representing a score of sportsmen's organizations throughout the state approved with only a few changes the codification of Michigan fish laws. They attended a public meeting at Lansing called by George Hogarth, director of conservation.

It was upon the question of a shortened bass season and the three-zone plan for the opening of the state's lakes to anglers, that the conservation commission had expected opposition from the sportsmen. It was indicated, however, that those in attendance were unanimous that Michigan's game fish need the protection that a shorter season may afford.

For the purpose of better protection, propagation, and conservation of fish the commission let it be known that it would propose to the legislature that the state be divided into three zones to be known as northern, central and southern zones.

In the southern zone, in which Grand Rapids is located, waters would be thrown open to black bass fishing on July 1. In the central zone the date would be July 8, while in the northern zone the opening day would be set for July 15. The closing date in all zones would be December 31, except on trout streams, where it is September 1.

Same Opening Date

The opening dates on calico bass, rock bass, warmouth bass, white bass, crappies, bluegills and sunfish would be the same as in the case of black bass. The closing date would be extended, however, to March 31, except in the case of trout streams which close September 1.

For the first time northern pike would come in for a measure of protection. In the southern zone, great northern pike, grass pike and pickerel, pike perch, wall-eyed pike, muskallunge, perch, lake or Mackinaw trout would be taken in pike lakes from May 1 to March 31; in all other lakes from July 1 to March 31; in trout streams from May 1 to September 1 and in non-trout streams from May 1 to September 1. The same dates would apply to the central zone, except in the case of lakes not designated as pike lakes, where the season is from July 8 to March 31. In the northern zone, closing dates would be the same as in the southern zone, but the opening date would be May 15.

The trout season would open as usual, May 1, closing September 1.

The legal size of fish would remain the same, except that pike come in for some protection in that they are to have their legal size established. Fourteen inches was tentatively fixed pending some additional investigation by the department as to the size of adult wall-eyes. Also, no more than five pike could be caught legally in one day, but 25 in aggregate of calico bass, rock bass, warmouth bass, white bass, crappies, bluegills, perch and muskallunge.

are taken with hook and line from the connecting waters of the Great lakes or the lakes themselves, and unlimited number may be caught.

Set Legal Size

Sportsmen present were unanimous that a legal size should be designated for muskallunge. The conservation department will investigate and fix such a size limit.

It was suggested that those engaged in the taking of minnows for commercial purposes should first obtain licenses from the department, the license to cost $10. Sportsmen urged that the minnow dealer be ordered to display his license in a prominent position at his place of business.

The codification, as it will go to the legislature, will provide for a resident fishing license for everyone over 17 years of age, the license to cost $1. This, of course, will not be needed for the regular resident when fishing upon his own lands. A badge similar (Continued on page 2.)

SUFFERING OF 12 YEARS ENDED BY NEW KONJOLA

Miseries of Stomach Trouble Drove Man Into Nervous Breakdown—New Medicine Triumphs.

MR. CHARLES ROSE

There is a happy end to the long trail of suffering for those who give Konjola, the new medicine, a chance, even though all medicines and treatments have failed. This is proven in numberless cases like that of Mr. Charles Rose, 15 Nineteenth street, Battle Creek. He says:

"For the past twelve years my stomach gave me so much trouble that it drove me into a nervous breakdown, and were it not for Konjola I do not believe that I would be alive today. I could not sleep at night; everything worried me; I wanted to be alone. I became so weak I could hardly stand. Nothing helped me, and I had lost 38 pounds, then I heard about Konjola and its wondrous work. Seven bottles of this marvelous medicine made a new man of me. My indigestion is completely gone and, best of all, my terrible nervous condition has been totally banished. I feel and look like a different person. I have gained 20 pounds in seven weeks. I am back on my job in the steel mill, working hard and enjoying it. My friends are astounded—and so am I—over this amazing recovery."

to the small game badge, will be issued with the license.

Instead of two non-resident fishing licenses, as in the past, only one is provided for in the codification and it designates that every non-resident over 17 years of age who desires to fish in Michigan waters must secure this license at the cost of $3.

Ask Spear Ban

The legislature will be asked to ban spears from all inland lakes the year around. The only inland waters where they may be employed will be upon streams which trout do not inhabit and then for the taking of non-game fish and suckers.

One of the most interesting discussions of the day was had on the section which provides for a change in the hooks used on artificial bait. The new law would permit only one gang hook and two single hooks on a "plug." This was satisfactory to the delegates, but many believed that if the bill was passed this winter, to become effective in 90 days, it would work a hardship on sporting goods dealers, jobbers, etc. It was then decided to make this section effective January 1, 1930.

The codification will, if adopted by the legislature, repeal 132 fish laws. Just before the session closed in the afternoon, Charles Corbin of Grand Rapids, representing the West Michigan Game and Fish Protective association, offered a resolution, which was adopted and which would provide protection for the department's artificial snags in trout streams.

DEER SEASON WORST IN YEARS

ELEVEN HUNTERS ARE KILLED
BY CARELESSNESS

Movement Started to Curb Wholesale Recklessness of Men in Game Country.

(By United Press.)

There were an estimated 20,000 fewer buck deer and 11 fewer hunters in Michigan December 1 than when the season opened November 15.

Reminiscent of the Indian's remark in the Maine woods when he was fined for killing a moose immediately after another had been dismissed for killing a companion—"Kill moose, $500; kill man, too bad"—the state was enriched several hundred dollars and a quantity of confiscated deer from illegal hunting, and there have been no prosecutions, so far as reported, growing out of the death of the hunters.

Less violation of game laws than usual was reported. There were only 700 arrests during the month of November. But reckless shooting increased, if the results are to be the measuring standard. So serious is this situation considered in fact that it is certain to be slated as an important topic of discussion at future conservation congress meetings. It is intimated O. A. Mitchell of Flint will suggest severe penalties for reckless shooting, and several sportsmen have signified their intention of getting behind Mitchell in his demand that something be done about it.

Ten Are Killed

Seven hunters were killed by accidental gunshot and one was lost and later found dead in the Upper Peninsula during the deer season just closed. Three men were killed by accidental gunshot in the Lower Peninsula. Dozens were wounded, some so seriously that they will become hopeless cripples for life.

On the whole the deer season was viewed by the state conservation department as an outstanding success. There was a record kill of deer, proof of the pre-season reports that game was plentiful. Unfortunately, there was also a record number of hunters killed and wounded—more than in any other year since the buck law became effective. Only once were more hunters killed; the year before the shooting was limited to bucks, 13 lost their lives. That year, it is pointed out, hunters shot at everything they saw moving in the brush; now there is a penalty for killing does and fawns. The hunter is supposed to see the horns of the animal before he shoots—which is considerable discredit either to the eye-sight of the hunters or to their luckless victims this year.

CHRISTMAS TREES

The perennial question as to whether it is not a shocking waste of our timber resources to cut down hundreds of thousands of spruce and other evergreens for Christmas trees is again being discussed. And once more the American Tree Association defends the use of young conifers for Yuletide ornamental purposes and advises those who are protesting against the alleged waste to direct their energy to educating the people as to the proper use of forests.

The American Tree Association's position on the matter is that taken by all the leading conservationists, who hold that the cutting of trees for Christmas trees shall be curtailment of the legitimate use of resources but that "wasteful exploitation shall be stopped. Christmas trees are a legitimate use of our forest resources."

Some of those who are objecting to the cutting down of evergreen trees for this purpose, are letting their emotions get the better of their common sense. Thus one person says: "Why not teach the children that every Christmas tree may mean that some poor little bird is without a place to sleep."

It is assumed by those who are opposing Christmas trees that if they were not cut down all would grow into tall timber suitable for saw-logs. But the assumption is unwarranted. Both when planted by man and by nature the conifers spring up in thick clusters, so close together that there is no room for all to reach maturity. Some must yield if others are to have enough space and light. Foresters accordingly deliberately thin out the stand by cutting some of the small trees to make room for those that are to be allowed to grow. Trees thus removed may be used for Christmas purposes. If they were not removed they would probably be killed in the struggle for existence with their neighbors.

But even if all the Christmas trees would grow if left undisturbed, the cutting of them would still be justifiable.

Children. Making a fuss over the destruction of Christmas trees is a case of saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung; for the loss of our timber resources from this cause is infinitesimal as compared with the damage done to our forests by fire and insects.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

During the month of December the Michigan Tuberculosis association conducts its annual sale of Christmas seals. Funds raised in the sale will be used in 1929 to finance the twenty-year old crusade against tuberculosis in Michigan.

Whether or not we have had a close relative or friend die from this preventable disease, each of us is affected to some extent by the "Great White Plague." 85 per cent of all tuberculosis sanatoria patients are unable to pay for their care. Consequently the cost must be shouldered by the county and state governments, and each tax payer must pay his share of the bill.

Tuberculosis Christmas seals make an educational campaign that teaches people to recognize the early symptoms of tuberculosis and to secure immediate care, before they become advanced, hard-to-cure cases.

Among other things the seals pay for chest clinics where free examinations are given to all.

So individuals who have the signs of the disease. Every case diagnosed in an early stage at one of these clinics means that a few months of hospital treatment rather than a few years, will be sufficient to cure the patient.

A penny paid for a tuberculosis Christmas seal now may save a dollar later. The stickers are investments in health that pay certain dividends. Buy them.

AN INVESTMENT

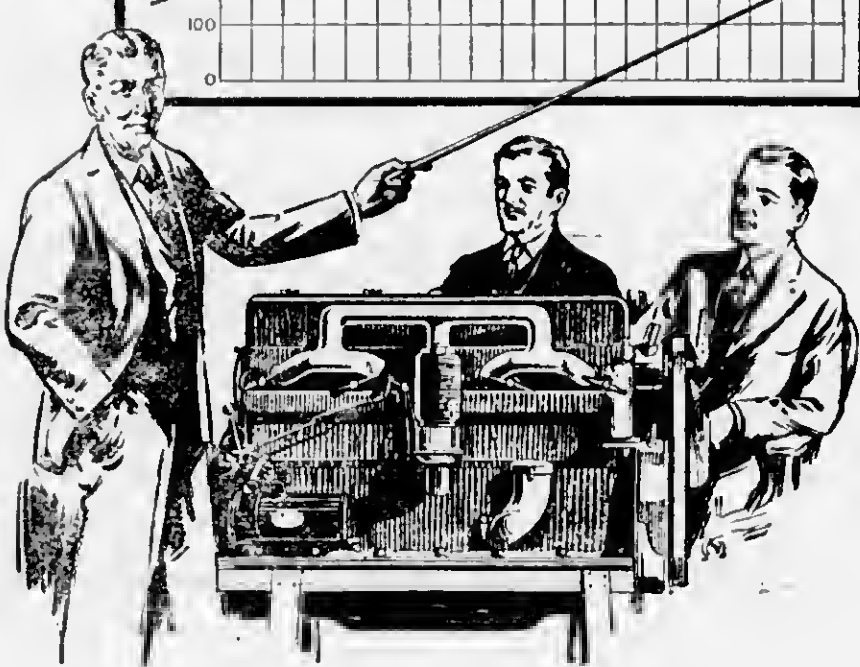

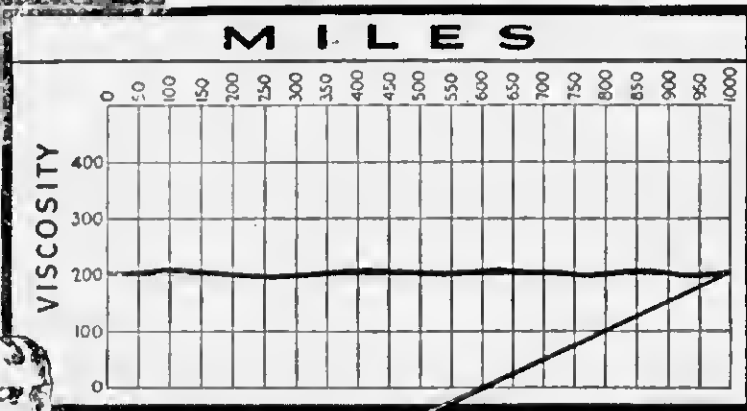

The Red Cross is not a symbol of suffering. It is an emblem of relief.

The Red Cross once found its principal work in connection with welfare and the wounded and dying of the battlefields. Later it became a valued agency in relief of life and property following great national catastrophes.

Today the Red Cross is a constructive agency for health and happiness in every section, community and home of the United States.

Membership in the Red Cross is not a contribution; it is an investment in one of the most splendid and useful organizations in the world.

CHRISTMAS TRADE

The season of Christmas buying has begun. Astute purchasers have been keeping their Christmas needs in mind for some time and they find that the stores of Charlevoix are splendidly stocked with the things they need for gift purposes.

The idea of early Christmas buying may be an old story. But it is something that needs to be told over and over again to the people. The agitation for this purpose has already had a marked effect. "Propaganda on this subject has educated the people up to the point where they partly realize the desirability of early buying, and a great many people are getting these purchases out of the way several weeks before Christmas.

People who buy early accomplish something for their own interest. They get the very cream of the stock which is not so depleted as it will be later after the public has had a chance to pick and choose. Many people appreciate the advantage of getting the first look at goods before the public has come in to handle them. They can now see the full and complete assortment of the things they want.

People save a lot of time when they do their shopping before the holiday rush, and get the packages off before the lines begin to form at the post office windows. It would be a wonderful thing if half of the people could make their Christmas purchases and have them shipped out of Charlevoix three weeks before the holiday. Mark your packages "Do not open before Christmas."

The stores could do business more efficiently, could give better attention to customers, and everyone would be saved time and annoyance by following out this plan. Worry, hurry, and strain would be saved to postal store employees. It is a plan that costs nothing, and works to everyone's benefit. Leave the last two weeks for purchases by those who have no money ahead with which they can anticipate their wants.

The Barnard Grange will serve a Game Supper on Friday evening, December 14, at 6:30 standard time. Good eats and a good time!—Adv. 50-1.

A DOLLAR WELL SPENT

The Red Cross membership drive is now under way and every resident of the county should become a member of the organization.

The American Red Cross has always held itself in readiness and has always been the first on the spot when relief is needed. If it had not been for this organization the death lists in the Mississippi flood, the Florida hurricanes and other national disasters would have been more than doubled. But the Red Cross is not merely a life saving institution for times of stress. Probably its greatest service is the building up of public health through its educational work in schools and community health centers. Thousands of lives have been saved by the organization's relief work but many thousands more have been preserved by the service which the Red Cross is giving to the public daily all over this country.

Membership in the Red Cross is only one dollar and there is no other organization that can do as much with a dollar for the welfare of the country.

BETTER ADVERTISING

Adoption of the plan to make the National Better Business Bureau the medium through which the publishing industry, represented by 6,000 publishers of periodicals, may eliminate fraudulent advertising, means the extension into a large and important field of an agency which has already made its helpful influence felt in the newspaper world.

Resolutions to cooperate with the Better Business Bureau were passed last month at a meeting of publishers in New York City. The action has now been accepted by the Federal Trade Commission as an expression of the trade.

The Better Business Bureau, operating in Cincinnati and many other cities, serves as a check on the advertiser and the medium in which his copy appears. Complaints lodged with the bureau, either by competitors or customers, are investigated and appropriate action taken.

The publishers have arranged that the bureau shall advise periodicals and governmental agencies when advertising is found to be fraudulent and that it shall report to the Federal Trade Commission, through its division of trade practice conferences, violations of the trade practice conference rules.

REAL ENCOURAGEMENT

A famed medical authority says that there are nine and well in the United States 140,000 people who would have died during the past year had the mortality rate from tuberculosis which prevailed twenty-five years ago been allowed to continue.

So striking has been the decline in deaths from tuberculosis within the past few years that there are sober minded men who say that in ten or fifteen years, tuberculosis will disappear as an important cause of death in America. This year the record of deaths will be less than ever before and show a 7 per cent decline from last year. The death rate is but a third of what it was thirty years ago.

It must be remembered also that every case of tuberculosis exposes other people and causes other sickness. The prevention of one case is said to prevent the positive development of ten other cases.

FREAK ACCIDENTS

While the railroads, with the great emphasis they are putting on safety work, are accomplishing much in reducing accidents, they are making no progress in one direction. An increase is reported in the number of mishaps caused by automobiles crashing into the sides of trains. Two such accidents, one of which resulted in loss of life, were reported in Mich-

It would seem that these accidents are proof of gross carelessness by many motorists at grade crossings. While there are places where highways bisect tracks in such manner that visibility is poor, crossings of this kind are not sufficiently numerous to explain the expanding total in wrecks, many of which are accompanied by death and injury.

EAT NO LUMBER

Some scientists are working on the problem of making food out of trees. They are succeeding.

No one should discourage such great scientific investigations. They mean much to civilization.

The present problem is to get our foodstuffs eaten. The trouble is that we have too much food. Too many potatoes makes the price 10 cents a bushel. Too much wheat means loss to the farmers. And if we had to, as we once did, we could double the present production of our farms.

There is plenty of food for the world, if the world can raise a little money to buy it. We shall continue to eat our potatoes, and a man at trees into paper and lumber. That is what trees are for.

THE BUILDERS

When we build, let us think that we build forever. Let it not be for present delight nor for present use alone. Let it be such work as our descendants will thank us for, and let us think, as we lay stone on stone, that a time is to come when those stones will be held sacred because our hands have touched them, and that men will say, as they look upon the labor and wrought substance of them, "See, this our fathers did for us."—John Ruskin.

News of the Grades

Our fountain is now being used as an aquarium. The bottom is covered with colored shells with four varieties of moss and plants. These are arranged to make a balanced aquarium. We have a very pretty castle and five large goldfish.

"An aquarium cultivates a love for nature and all its works."

"Life in a well balanced aquarium is serene. Here is pictured the perfect life, freedom from the struggle for food and the competition for clothes and housing—all make for perfect serenity. One can sit down beside an aquarium and, observing its peaceful and quiet denizens, feel: 'That the cares that infest the day will fold their tents like the Arab And as silently steal away.'"

—Extracts from an essay written by K. N. Cooper for the Health Show, Chicago, May 1925.

The fifth grade children are acquiring a full repertoire of old Christmas carols and hymns. They plan to go caroling some evening next week.

Athletic News

Basketball game December 8th, Charlevoix vs. Clare, score 19-7 in favor of Clare.

The line-up:

Clare	Charlevoix
Grover	B. Novak
Hearns	Marshall
Johnson	Helm
Lange	B. Supernaw
Thayer	M. Novak

We lost our second basketball game, but are we ashamed to admit it? Well, I guess not. Has there ever been a victorious team that has never tasted defeat? If there has, bring them around. We would like to get a good look at them. Remember, you can't keep a good team down!

Charlevoix played very good during the first quarter of the game. The quarter started off in favor of the opponents by a free throw made by Thayer. The game went smoothly along until Bill Novak made a basket. A few minutes later the horn sounded ending the first quarter with a score of 2 to 1 in favor of the Red and White.

The greatest share of the scores of the second quarter were made by Clare. Hearns made a free throw followed by another one by Grover, which Hearns followed by a 2 point basket. Then Rex Supernaw took Helms' place. Marshall then made a free throw, but this was followed by another one made by Johnson of Clare, who soon made a 2 point basket. This marked the end of the second quarter with the score 8 to 3 in favor of Clare.

Helms was put back in again at the beginning of the third quarter. During this quarter the Red and White scored almost as much as the opponents. The quarter was started by Johnson of Clare making a basket. Bill Novak then made a free throw which was followed by Grover making a free throw. Points were being made fast and furious on both sides. Later Johnson made a basket. Again Rex Supernaw was substituted for Helms, then finally a basket was made in our favor by Max Novak. The final score of the quarter was 13 to 6 in favor of the opponent.

C. H. S. scored but one point during the last quarter. This was done by Max Novak when he made a free throw. The remaining six scores were made by Johnson, Lange and Grover for Clare, each one making a basket apiece. During the last few minutes of the game, Connie McCall and Bill Foster were substituted for Rex Supernaw and Bill Novak. But it was too late, the boys had hardly begun playing when the horn blew that marked the end of our second home basketball game. The final score was 19 to 7 in favor of Clare.

play Ellsworth there. Let's see every one with "fizzies" and cars over to see the fellows play. The fellows need your support when they are fighting for the old Red and White.

Physics

The physics class will have laboratory from now until Christmas providing the plumbers don't interfere.

English Department

The second year class is studying punctuation and abbreviation.

The American Literature class have been making maps of New York, showing the important rivers, cities, mountains and educational institutions of that state during the study of Knickerbocker history. Special reports have been given in class on stories from Washington Irving's "Sketch Book."

History Department

The American and Modern history classes have been taking the Literary Digest for the last few weeks. The students are assigned topics to recite from on one day of each week. This week we studied an article on Mr. Hoover's reception in the Latin American countries. In connection with this Miss Keller told many interesting details about her trip to the West Indies, especially about Haiti. The streets there are very narrow and the stores are open to pigs, chickens and goats as well as to human beings. The people eat chicken a great deal because other meat is very expensive. It is a common sight to see the natives carrying several chickens in a basket on their head to market, where they trade them for other articles.

To advertise, the merchants put their products outside their shop. It is a beautiful sight to see the brightly-colored gowns swishing in the breeze outside the dry goods stores.

Domestic Science Department

During the past week the domestic science class has been making Christmas presents. Among the gifts made are dolls, aprons, pillows, towels, scarfs, etc.

Senior Class News

Tuesday, November 11, the seniors had a class meeting where they were informed by Mr. Coleman, senior sponsor, that the play committee had chosen a play called "Laff That Off," which is to be presented by the senior class sometime shortly after the holidays.

Pep Meeting

General News

Mr. Otterbein read an interesting article from a paper to the assembly Thursday morning on the subject of "Concentration." The article advised the students to look around the room and see how it is furnished, then close your eyes and imagine how it would look if it were well furnished.

The second number of the lyceum course was given at the gymnasium December 5th. The Di Gorgio quartette played many classical numbers which were enjoyed by all.

We all hope they will come again and that they enjoyed themselves as much as we did.

Mr. Bingham—Fred, who was the man that saved Missouri to the Union?

POLAR BEARS TRIM FAST GAYLORD FIVE

Play Highly Touted Petoskey Cement Co. Team Here Friday Night

The Charlevoix Polar Bears won their second game of the season Tuesday evening in the local gym by taking the fast Gaylord Independent outfit into camp by a score of 26 to 23.

It was an uphill battle for the Charlevoix five from the opening whistle until near the end of the third quarter when they took the lead for the first time. Gaylord led at the end of the first quarter 9 to 8, and the locals were still trailing at the half 14 to 12. It was an even battle though, with Gaylord's advantage a small one at all times. Near the end of the third frame the Polar Bears slipped away to a lead which they held during the remainder of the contest.

Todd was the high score man for the Polar Bears with a total of 12 points, while Higman, left forward, accounted for 5. Johnson, right guard, and McCoy, right forward, made 7 and 6 points respectively for Gaylord. Hugh Wayne refereed.

What promises to be one of the fastest independent games of the season has been booked for Friday evening of this week, when the Polar Bears meet the Petoskey Portland Cement company team in the local gym. Petoskey boasts one of the best fives in the North and a thrilling contest is in prospect. Plan on attending this important game.

Holley Toyland is open. Come in and make your selections early for Christmas. Will gladly lay away. Games, 10c to $1.00, mechanical toys, dolls, books, trunks and play houses.—Adv. 48tf.

RAILROAD FERRY NOW CARRIES AUTOMOBILES

State Ferries Are Through Until Spring Season Opens

Automobile ferry service across the Straits of Mackinac was taken over for the winter by the Mackinac Transportation company Saturday. For the first time, however, summer rates were paid by motorists.

An agreement with the state highway department, whereby the state pays the excess over the summer rate, was announced several weeks ago by Frank F. Rogers, highway commissioner.

Five round trips daily will be maintained in the winter when traffic justifies. Boats leave Mackinaw City at 3 a. m., 8 a. m., 11:45 a. m., 5 p. m. and 10 p. m. Return trips leave St. Ignace at 6 a. m., 10 a. m., 2 p. m., 8 p. m. and 11:45 p. m.

The car ferry Chief Wawatam will be on the run most of the time.

The cottages were located along the bluff on the south side of the village. They were west of the Shore Drive as it entered the village from the south.

The damage is said to be between $15,000 and $25,000. The Cole home was occupied but the new summer cottage was just being completed and made ready for next year.

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The finding forms of matter, the mortal body and material earth, are the fleeting concepts of the human mind. They have their day before the permanent facts and their perfection in Spirit appear." (p. 263).

suddenly 1, 2 and 3 and forth when not serving drinks, passing opposite first one a cupful of the next to dab at the pocket and a cool with his cloth. Then he carefully to the conversation and gazed at it to determine whether the rider in white at toward the spatter for he was silent or would proceed. When the men, flushed with excitement, were more-trained by his presence.

CHAPTER VII

There was a new contentment in the eyes of the Three Bar girl as she sat her horse beside Carlos Deane and looked off down the bottom. A haze of smoke drifted above the little valley of the Crazy Lake. Three mile outfits were steadily rippling up the sage flats. The two rode down to the fields with the pungent sage smoke drifting in their faces. Harris joined them, and swept his arm across the stretch of plowed ground.

"Can you picture that covered with a stand of alfalfa hay?" he asked.

The girl nodded.

"Yes—and cut and-cured and in the stack yards," she said. "And a straight run of Three Bar cows wintering under fence."

Harris wondered if her new contentment came wholly from the progress the Three Bar was making or was derived partly from the presence of Carlos Deane. Each man had recognized the other as a contender for the love of the Three Bar girl and during the two days of Deane's stay each one had been covertly sizing and estimating the caliber of the other man.

the man. In the early evening they rode out on to a low divide and Bill and Carlos showed below them, a broad expanse of open grassland.

"Feed!" Harris said. "Feed, Worlds of it."

They made camp at the mouth of a branching canyon, just within the timber.

Harris sensed Deane's attitude toward it all for he knew something of the other man's way of life. Those with whom Deane was thrown most in contact were careful of appearance. It was unheard-of in his code that a girl should hunt for days—accompanied by four men. Here appearances seemed entirely disregarded and no one gave the matter a thought.

The moon swung over the ridges and shed its radiance over Bill and Carlos. Deane motioned to Bill and the girl rose and followed him to the edge of the timber where they sat on a blow-down.

"Bill, let me take you away from all this," he asked. "All this hard riding and rough men's work. Let me give you the things that will shut out all the hardships. What's the use of going on like this?"

The girl was conscious of a vague sense of disappointment. She resented that Deane's attitude was that of so many other men, his idea of love synonymous with shelter for the object of it, and his main plea was that of providing her with shelter against all the rough corners of life. Shelter! And what she wanted was to be part of things—to have a hand in running her own affairs.

"I don't want shelter!" she said. "And I can't think of anything else after the Three Bar is a going concern."

The two went back and sat with the others round the dying fire, then all turned in for the night. Bill in her tent and the men in their bed rolls with no other overhead shelter than the trees.

Next morning Deane was once more awakened by a clammy dampness on his face. A fine drizzle was falling. Slade was on his feet showing a few streaks of wood inside the lap of Bill's teepee.

Breakfast was cooked under the dripping trees. The outfit was packed up and the little procession filed away toward the next valley—and Carlos Evans rode down the right-hand slope and the three waited for him.

"Moore and I were working in close and I thought I'd ride over to tell you that the wild bunch has lost a veteran," he said. "Some one put Bar-ton out over in the Breaks."

Gordon, whose name was linked with that of Harper, had been found with a rifle ball through his chest. His own gun, found by his outstretched hand, had showed one blackened cylinder, the empty shell still-evident proof that he had fired a single shot at his assailant.

The girl could find no sorrow in her heart over the passing of Gordon but there was an uneasy feeling deep within her—a vague suspicion that she should be able to pronounce the killer's name. This elusive thought was crowded from her mind when the ranger rode up to the Three Bar accompanied by Slade, each man leading a pack horse.

"Slade's going to look over a little territory up on the Forest," Wilton explained. "So we can get it all done on one trip."

There was no way to avoid this unexpected addition to their party, and in half an hour the little caravan—filled up a gulch back of the Three Bar, the ranger in the lead with his pack horse. By noon they made the first rim and followed over into a rolling country heavily timbered in to let on the less considerable sport—which is a whole lot."

Deane said, "So why should I?"

"This is everyday business with us," Harris pointed out. "And right unusual for you. There's likely a number of things you do every day back your way, but that doesn't signify that I could handle back there and perform as well as you."

"I suspect you'd make out all right," Deane said. "Anyway—I'm much obliged for the endorsement."

They camped again in the drizzle but by noon of the following day the sun peeped through. The ranger pulled up his horse as they struck a game trail in the saddle of a low divide. A bunch of shod horses had been over it a few hours past.

"Some of the albinos' layout," Wilton surmised.

They rode on to a spur and looked down on the low country. Slade and the ranger were coming on the slope returning to the Three Bar. Harris pointed to the country spread out below them.

"That's the Breaks," he told Deane. "I'll point out the albinos' strong hold."

"While they're looking I want to talk to you," Slade said to Deane. "Let's get together," he said, when the others had passed on. "Why are you so dead set on making a squatter out of the Three Bar? Don't you know the masters will look in here and cut the range all up as soon as they see a chance?"

"Not my range," she said. "Outside of the V L and the Halfmoon D there's not another site they can get water for, except maybe a couple of spring gulches where flood reservoirs will hold back enough to water a forty. So we'll still control our home range."

"But there's a dozen sites down in my range," he said.

"And a dozen small outfits wouldn't run any more cows than you do now," she said. "Why don't you have men tile on all those sites?"

"You can't make a contract that will hold a man to turn over his homestead after it's proved up," he said. "Half of them would keep their land."

"Of course," she agreed. "But then you'd have half instead of nothing at all. Do you want the world?"

"I want you," he said, "throw in with me, girl. I'm going to fight these masters off the Three Bar among the rest if you don't quit. I'll smash the Three Bar into submission unless you run this d-d Harris off and quit this game."

It was the first time Slade had ever threatened. Her spirits had soared over the prospects of the Three Bar and she was suddenly afraid for her brand if Slade, who had whittled down a dozen outfits at once, should suddenly turn his whole attention to the Three Bar.

"I've got it to do," Slade stated.

"Since you've started this deal there's been masters filed papers on every good site in my range, waiting to rush in as soon as I lose my grip. Do you think I'll let them crowd me out? Not in a thousand years! I'm telling you—I'll break the Three Bar if you keep it up."

"All right," she said. "And what about the homestead laws?"

"I'm the law out here," he asserted. "It came to me that Slade was fighting on the defensive, that he feared to let the Three Bar succeed and set up a precedent in defiance of the laws that dotted the range."

"Then it's war!" she said. "And you'll go under yourself, from your own size, if you haven't the judgment to hedge yourself now like the rest. The Three Bar is going ahead—and we're going to win."

She turned her horse but Slade caught her arm and whirled her around. He jerked a thumb at the two men down the ridge.

"What can Deane, a half-baked boy, give you?" he demanded. "You want an outfit of your own. I'll give you that—the biggest in the state!"

She shook her head without answering.

"Then I'll break you," he predicted a second time. He drew a folded slip of paper from his pocket and held it out to her. "That's the exchange slip," he said. "It calls for three hundred odd head of mixed stuff. You can send yours over any time." He turned longer while the girl joined Harris and Deane.

Harris had slipped the strap of his glasses and handed them to Deane who had dismounted and was peering off at the spot Harris had pointed out. A few scattered shrubs, showing as toy bushes from the distance, stood in the corner of a broad open basin, sheltered on all sides by the clumpy masses of the Breaks. A solid coral, almost a stockade, stood near the buildings.

"That's Arnold's stockade," Harris explained to Deane. "Arnold was an old-time rustler that finished at the end of a rope fifteen years ago. Now all the drifters in the country stop over here if they want a place to hole up."

"Can't the sheriff clean them out of there?" Deane asked.

"He could," Harris said. "But no man will make a complaint. They can rustle every steer in the country and the losers are afraid to make a report. Every outfit is supposed to protect its own. If Alden should ride up to almost any ranch within a hundred miles and ask them if they'd missed any stock in the last three years they'd shake their heads and swear that they hadn't lost a hoof. But the Three Bar has a clean page; we're not afraid he'll get a line on us while we're having him round up some one else. The first time we get

ROAD BUILDING

BUILD HIGHWAYS TO SUIT AUTOS

For a long time highway engineers have stated that motor vehicles should be adapted to the highways, but now the highway departments are trying to adapt the highways to the vehicles and the traffic, says T. B. Agg, of the highway engineering division at Iowa State college and chairman of a committee of the highway research board of the National Research council, at a recent meeting of the Metropolitan section of the Society of Automotive Engineers in New York.

Limitation of loads and of sizes of vehicles must necessarily continue as a safeguard to the existing investment in highways, but regulations in this regard are made as liberal as conditions allow.

The new conception of the function of highway systems has made it imperative that highway engineers obtain a clear understanding of the interpretation of the highway and the vehicle, that is, the reciprocal effect of the road and the vehicle upon each other.

Low and intermediate types of road surface wear three times as fast as those that have high-type road surfaces, and surfaces of loose angular stone may produce 20 times the wear on tires caused by high-type surfaces. The most economical road grade, as a general principle, said Professor Agg, is one that will allow a vehicle to ascend in high gear at the most efficient engine speed and to descend without using excessive speed.

The best type of car road for heavy traffic is a concrete road 12 inches thick that has about forty pounds of steel reinforcement in each square and with the slabs laid in lanes about ten feet wide so articulated that more lanes can be added if needed and with expansion joints every 25 feet.

On heavily traveled roads each foot of distance saved will justify an expenditure of at least $80, and this should be borne in mind when the shortening of distance entails heavy grading or other expense. When a road grade requires the shifting of gears and excessive use of the brakes, extra cost for gasoline and tire wear will result and can be estimated. This extra cost, however, may be less than that of traveling the extra distance required to secure a lower rate of grade.

The cost of any type of road is the aggregate of the expenditures required to build the surface and to keep it in a condition of maximum serviceability over an indefinite period of years.

Good Road Projects in Latin-American Lands

More than one billion dollars will be invested in new road construction in Latin America within the next two or three years, according to Wallace Thompson, editor of Intercontinental.

"Cuba has recently awarded to an American firm," he states, "a large road building contract. Mexico, in spite of the political unrest, is cutting highways into the interior in every direction. All Central America is speeding up work on road construction. Panama has arranged in the new treaty with the United States, to build several hundred miles of 28-foot concrete highways. Colombia is building a 200-mile macadam road over mountains and through valleys to a new port to be constructed within a few hours' travel from the Panama canal. Venezuela has completed several new roads.

"Peru is laying out an extensive national highway system. Chile is doing a big job, as is Bolivia. Plans are under way for improved roads in Argentina. Brazil is designing a national highway system, under the leadership of her new engineer-president.

RIGHTS OF WAY FOR FUTURE USE

Cities which are paying large prices to extend and widen their ancient highway systems should profit by their experience and buy right of way for future use at a comparatively low cost now. Says George F. Doherty, engineer of Erie county, New York, writing in the American Motorist.

"The importance of securing rights of way for future highways and acquiring additional land along the sides of old roads so they can be widened when necessary cannot be overestimated," says Doherty.

Doherty points to Erie county's policy. Recognizing that piecemeal remedies did not provide a solution to the traffic problem, the Erie county board of supervisors directed the county engineer to make a comprehensive study of traffic in all parts of the county.

From this study there evolved the Greater Motorways system. The plans call for two collected series of widened and improved highways extending from the Niagara river on the north to Lake Erie on the south.

"Rights of way have been acquired on many routes," says Doherty, "where the work of constructing new highways or the widening of existing roads is not to be done for 10 or 15 years."

Ballons Easy on Roads and Are Cutting Taxes

Ballon tires are saving taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars every year by cutting down the shock of traffic on highways, and thereby prolonging their life. The pounding of speeding wheels against obstructions in the highway delivers triplehammer blows which sooner or later break through the surface, and lead to the destruction of the roadway.

However, if wheels are properly cushioned and insulated against the constant shock of the road, this destructive effect will not be experienced. Not only that, but ballon tires with their greater road surface, distribute the load over a wide area, thus lowering the weight any given point must carry, with the effect that roads will not need repairs as soon as they otherwise would.

Ballon tires save roads under the wheels just as much as they save the car and passengers above them, tire engineers assert; for the shock insulation not only is effective from below, but from above as well. Every person who rides in automobiles with ballon tires knows that the roughness of the road is smoothed out into velvety smoothness, and that rough roads are much less of a problem than formerly. He also knows that an automobile on ballon tires will wear longer, because its chassis and body and mechanism are not subjected to the strains and jolts that make cars old before their time.

Would Call All-Canada Highway "Confederation"

The proposal of the New Brunswick national conference for the celebration of the Day and Jubilee of Confederation that the name "Confederation highway" would be fitting for the National highway, from coast to coast in Canada has been approved by the provincial government of New Brunswick.

Among the highways which will be completed are the Kentucky-Virginia highway, from Lexington to Pond Gap, Va.; the Garret highway, from Lexington via Mount Sterling to Paints Valley; the Clinton-Louisville-Mount Vernon highway, from Lexington to Louisville; the Louisville-Lexington highway, from Lexington via Stanford and Liberty to Russell county.

ELECTED AT ANNUAL MEETING HELD LAST WEDNESDAY

Annual Reports of Committees Heard and Approved—Financial Report In Full

The annual banquet and election of officers of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce was held in the dining room of the Hotel Charlevoix on the evening of Wednesday, December 13th. Forty-one in all turned out to hear the annual reports and enter into the general business session.

Mrs. Winder served an excellent country style chicken dinner, which put all the members present in a contented mood to hear the reports of the various committees. The meeting was presided over by Archie L. Livingston, first vice-president, due to the absence of Robert Bridge, who had been called away on business.

After introductory remarks by the chairman, the annual report of the secretary-treasurer was read and approved. F. E. Cartier, chairman of the publicity committee, gave an interesting report and showed some of the work that had been accomplished by members of his committee during the past year.

Chair Webster gave a report of the meeting with the state conservation board relative to the Out-Door Exposition to be held in Chicago next May and what the city council expected to do and accomplish with this exhibit. Dr. Winder, also a member of the committee at the Lansing meeting, added to Mr. Webster's remarks and informed the meeting that prospects were very good for the successful conclusion of the proposition to convert state-owned property south of the city on Lake Michigan into a park.

Henry A. Craig, reporting on industries, gave encouragement regarding the prospects of the Newway Portland Cement Co. location. He also reported on the West Michigan Tennis association meeting, which he and F. E. Cartier attended in Grand Rapids. Winter sports were then openly discussed and plans worked out for the coming season.

The nomination committee's choice of Dr. C. J. Winder as president of the association was accepted and he was unanimously elected. Other officers chosen were the following: 1st vice-president, Archie L. Livingston; 2nd vice-president, Martin Block; 3rd vice-president, Fred E. Cartier; secretary-treasurer, George Beeman.

Following the election of officers the meeting adjourned to enjoy a half hour of locally "shot" movies shown by Earl A. Young. Earl's assertion that he had everyone's picture in the reel was not much amiss, and the program proved one of real enjoyment.

Following is the financial statement of the association for the past year:

Whitefish Seized

Five miles of nets, valued at $1,000 and 3,200 pounds of whitefish were seized by the crew of the conservation patrol boat Rambler, in charge of Conservation Officer A. F. Hudak, Thursday afternoon near Southwest reef, off South Manitou island. The fish tug, apparently from the west Michigan coast, managed to elude the patrol boat through superior speed. The legal sized fish seized in the catch were sold to the Booth Fisheries company here at the market price, while the undersized fish were sent to various state institutions, about 875 pounds going to the state hospital at Traverse City.

ELLSWORTH TOPS CHARLEVOIX FIVE

THREE EXTRA PERIODS DECIDE GAME THERE FRIDAY

Contest Fast and Rough With Free Throws Winning Points Polar Bears Win Tuesday Night

Proving that Ellsworth high school cagers were hard to beat on their own court, Charlevoix's Red and White quintet dropped an over-time contest on the Ellsworth court last Friday night by a 7 to 5 score.

The contest was a battle from start to finish, marked by fast and rough playing due to a small floor. Two field goals were made during the entire game, one by Ellsworth and one by Charlevoix. The remaining scores were made from free throws allowed on fouls.

Charlevoix led by the narrow margin of one point at the end of the first period and again at the half, the score at the quarter being 1 to 0, and at the half 4 to 3. Ellsworth counted with two free throws during the second half, while Charlevoix netted one. The final whistle found the two teams deadlocked at 5 all.

The first and second over-time periods were scoreless, but in the third Ellsworth came through with a field goal to sew up the game 7 to 5.

The Charlevoix Polar Bears ran rough shod over Mancelona's independent basketballers here Tuesday evening in one-sided and listless game. The victory was the fourth straight for the local five, marking them as one of the best independent basketball combinations in this part of the state.

The Polar Bears scored almost all will throughout the entire contest. They led 13 to 5 at the half, 29 to 8 at the end of the third quarter, and 36 to 14 when the final whistle blew.

RED CROSS CALL REPORT IS GIVEN

CHAIRMAN ISSUES STATEMENT OF WORK DONE.

Charlevoix School Children Aided Materially in Drive—Total Received was $173.36.

The 12th annual Roll Call membership drive of the Red Cross, while lasting longer, has proven fully as satisfactory as last year's. The inclement weather during most of the time set for the drive no doubt prolonged the work, and some who were desirous of renewing their membership may not have been solicited.

For the benefit of those who have questioned the use of the money, I wish to state: "No officer of the county chapter and no solicitor receives pay. Their time and work is given for the good of this great cause which is nation-wide."

The Red Cross receives no financial support from the government, so your membership helps to continue local, national and international service.

The greatest pleasure the committee has had this year came from the work of the school children. Mrs. Mary Cooper had charge of soliciting from the schools, and Mrs. Dick, normal critic teacher, suggested that the children buy a membership for their grade and have the flag for their room. Teachers and children enthusiastically entered the drive, and the following memberships were taken: First, second and third grades, central building. Fourth grade, central building. Fifth and sixth grade, central building. St. Mary's school also took a membership. This work gives us a Junior Red Cross that will be a great help in the drive another year.

The American Legion paid for the fuel used in heating the rooms at headquarters.

One veteran of the late war is receiving help from our Red Cross funds while his compensation is being adjusted.

This year's memberships.....$152.00
Donations.....21.36

Total.....$173.36

All money collected by the county chapter during this drive is sent to the treasurer, A. F. Bridge. One-half of the fund is sent to headquarters at St. Louis, Mo. The remainder constitutes a fund for local use.

The committee wish to thank all who so generously gave of their time and helped to make this drive a success.

WAR ROMANCE TO HAVE HAPPY END

LOCAL COAST GUARD TO WED
FRENCH SWEETHEART

Couple Met Ten Years Ago When Both Were Attached to Hospital at Limoges, France

Around Christmas time, with December 26 as the mentioned date, a romance which had its beginning ten years ago during the World War will end happily for a member of the local U. S. coast guards.

In 1918, when a member of the staff of Base Hospital No. 28 at Limoges, France, Julius Wheeler met Jeanne Runud, a diminutive French maiden then 17 years old, who was at that time a nurse in the same hospital. It was there the courtship started and had since continued even after Julius returned to his native country after the close of the war. Regularly and painstakingly Jeanne wrote to her American sweetheart, piecing her letter together by translating French words into English with the aid of a grammar book. Julius was aided in his answers by his sister, who could write and understood the French language.

Early last spring it was decided Jeanne should come to the United States and the couple would marry. With France's immigration quota full the plans were thwarted until in November when passports were secured and Jeanne set sail. On December 4 she was met at New York City by Julius, his sister, Louise, who acted as interpreter, and his brother, David.

Jeanne is now at the home of Julius' parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wheeler of Maple City, Michigan. Under the tutelage of Louise Wheeler, she is rapidly learning the English language.

Although Mr. Wheeler would not give us the exact date of the wedding, we understand it will take place Christmas day at Traverse City. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler will make their home in Charlevoix.

POLAR BEARS STOPPED PETOSKEY CEMENT FIVE

Won Third Straight Victory by a Score of 35 to 20.

The Charlevoix Polar Bears added another scalp to their collection last Friday night when they defeated the Petoskey Portland Cement company engers in the local gymnasium 35 to 20 for their third straight victory.

Charlevoix had the best of the argument throughout the entire game, leading the visiting five from the opening quarter. They took an advantage of 6 points at the half, which ended 15 to 9, and were leading 26 to 16 at the end of the third frame. Petoskey was completely snowed under during the third quarter when the Polar Bears scored 9 points to the visitors 4.

Todd, Charlevoix right guard, led his team-mates for scoring honors with a total of 13. Ray Kipke scored 7 points for the locals, while Ernest led the visitors with 10 points. Hugh Mayne refereed the contest.

FUNERAL FOR PIONEER RESIDENT SATURDAY

Friends Pay Their Last Respects to Mrs. Andrew Ross.

Charlevoix was saddened last Thursday by the death of Mrs. Andrew Ross, a resident of this city the past 39 years, who died at her home on the North side following an illness which had confined her to her bed for six weeks.

Hannah Wilkins was born in Ottawa, Ontario, May 1, 1855. She was married to Andrew Ross on March 13, 1880, and nine years later the couple moved to Charlevoix, where they have since made their home. Mr. Ross was identified with the lumbering industry here in the early days, having been employed by the Charlevoix Lumber company 22 years.

Surviving besides the husband are two daughters, Maud Loy of Chicago, and Caroline M. Cook of Howard City; two sons, Samuel W. Ross of Sault Ste. Marie and P. R. Ross of Charlevoix; also two sisters, Mary Connors of Minneapolis, Minn., and Caroline Hamilton of Fort Williams, Ontario.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the home, Rev. Edward S. Doan, Episcopal minister from Petoskey officiating. Burial was at Brookside cemetery.

Mrs. Ross was a member of the Rebekah lodge and W. R. C.

TEMPERANCE MEET- ING HELD ON FRIDAY

MRS. MILNER HOSTESS AT HOME ON CLINTON STREET.

Annual Reports Given and Work of Local Union for Coming Year Outlined.

"Give prohibition its chance, the liquor traffic had its day." This is the new slogan adopted by the national Woman's Christian Temperance Union at its recent convention and passed on to the local union at its December meeting held last Friday with Mrs. Milner.

Reports for the year were read, showing sixteen new members had been received. The membership totals one hundred and forty-seven, one hundred and twenty-two of whom are on the active list, twelve are extension members, three are local life members and ten are honorary members. The members pledge themselves to total abstinence and to promoting the observance of the eighteenth amendment.

The local plans for 1929 include an unusually fine study program for the regular meetings, the celebration of Victory Day (January 16th), a Hold Fast and Go Forward campaign similar to last year's, a Cooperative Supper later in the winter for the members and their families, and work through seven departments, viz: citizenship, flower mission and relief, international relations, press and publicity, scientific temperance instruction, Sunday schools, moving pictures and social morality.

Friday afternoon's program consisted of roll call with responses of scripture verses prophesying the coming of Christ, an instrumental solo by Miss Frances Milner, a reading by Mrs. Edward Stewart, and the report of the national convention addressed by Mrs. Cassie Hart. The resolutions and plan of work adopted were:

The January meeting of the union will be held with Mrs. A. J. Usher.

COUNTY TEACHERS ENJOY INSTITUTE

FIRST IN FOUR YEARS DECLAR-ED A SUCCESS.

Addresses by Drs. Burnham and Dearing Were Instructive as Well as Interesting.

Through the efforts of William C. Palmer, county school commissioner, Charlevoix county teachers enjoyed their first teachers' institute in four years at the high school gymnasium last Friday. The institute was one of unusual quality and Charlevoix was very fortunate in meeting two such notable educators as Dr. Burnham of Kalamazoo Teachers' college, and Dr. Dearing of Oakland City college, Indiana.

The accomplished young orchestra leader, Master Bobby Wexstaff, with his Toy Symphony orchestra of 42 pieces, opened the day's program with several numbers which were greatly appreciated by all present. Great credit is due Miss Rocena Wilson for her efforts in training this most talented group of six-year-old youngsters.

Dr. Ernest Burnham of Kalamazoo Teacher's college, was his usual cheerful self in his two addresses, on "Comradery in Education" and the other on "Creative Leadership." "What everyone needs," said Mr. Burnham, "is comradery; that association by means of which we absorb from our neighbors and friends those qualities of physical vitality, enthusiasm and mental vigor, and spiritual stimulation which enables us to keep on growing, and really living."

In his address on "Creative Leadership," Dr. Burnham chose as a living example, his fellow speaker of the day, Dr. Dearing. "Leaders in the making," said he, "are bound to be somewhere—may be anywhere awaiting the guiding touch or encouraging words." Anyone knowing the vivacious speaker, knows that he "practices what he preaches."

Dr. Dearing changed both of his addresses of the day. In the first one he talked on "The Other Fellow." Very simply, very forcefully, he pictured the results of the activities of people of countries and of nations not knowing how to get along with "The Other Fellow." "Hate," he said, "and misunderstanding are the fundamental causes of most of the world's friction and discontent." World peace was emphasized in the speech as a new goal in teaching our young people of today. "I am not, however, an internationalist, but first and foremost, an American working for world peace," concluded the speaker.

In his second address he pictured the causes of many failures in the teaching profession. "Our worst enemies," said he, "are not those whom we can see, but those intangible, mental activities whose force is much greater and results much more drastic." The enemies were enumerated as—

1. Weak motives.
 2. Class consciousness.
 3. Lost vision.
 4. Inability to see ourselves as others see us.
 5. Loss of faith in the Infinite.
- If worthwhile addresses, congeniality of spirit, and an appreciative audience make a successful meeting, then the teachers' institute was a great success.

OPPERETTA "PICKLES" HAD PACKED HOUSE

Actors and Sponsors Share Glory in Success of Production.

The operetta "Pickles," given at the gymnasium last Wednesday evening by high school students under the direction of Rocena Wilson and Eleanor Thomas, played to a packed house. While each member of the cast played their part in a very appreciable manner, especial mention is due Miss Norcen Moran as Ilona, and Lloyd Swartout and Roy Kelderhouse, who acted the characters of Bumski and Rumski, faithful sidekicks of the chief detective Capt. Kinski.

The production was in every way a great success and credit to the student actors and instructors supervising.

Those who are suffering from neuritis will find much to cheer them in the statement of Mrs. Christine Susewitz, 5732 Bostwick street, Detroit. She writes:

"A year ago I had kidney trouble, and then came neuritis. Pains in my shoulders and arms were so acute that I cried out in agony. I could not sleep, and grew weak and listless. My kidneys got me up many times at night; terrible headaches nearly drove me frantic, and finally I was forced to take to my bed. There I remained a month. Not a thing gave me even temporary relief. I was discouraged and heart-sick. Then—and how I thank that day—I heard of Konjola, and started the treatment. Now get this—in exactly two weeks my kidneys were corrected and the neuritis had left me. Four days after starting on Konjola I was able to leave my bed. Does this seem possible? Isn't it wonderful that there is such a medicine? I wish I knew words enough to express my amazement and gratitude for this astounding medicine. Konjola is, indeed, called rightly the master medicine."

Deane shook from the thought of the Three Bar girl in such a mixture. Some way she seemed many shades finer than the rest.

"I couldn't be otherwise," Harris said when Deane expressed this thought. "She was raised at the knee of one of the finest women in the world. I remember her mother myself—a little, and I've heard my own mother sing the praises of Elizabeth Warren a thousand times."

The albino interrupted them. "Cal—how come?" he greeted. The three men conversed in the most casual, friendly fashion, as if there had never been a hint of friction between Harris and Harper in the past.

A great voice rose above the buzz of conversation, filling the big room to the very rafters.

"Choose your partners for the dance," Waddles bellowed from the makeshift platform at one end of the room. "Go get your gals!"

Deane moved across to the Three Bar girl. There was a general rush for the side opposite the bar where the ladies had gathered. Compulsed by the shortage of ladies rectified by a handkerchief tied on the arm of many a champagne youth to signify that he was, for the moment, a girl, Waddles picked his guitar; two fiddles broke into "Turkey in the Straw," and the dance was on with Waddles calling the turns.

All through the room they shuffled and howled, whirled partners, locked elbows and swung, the shriek of fiddles and scrape of feet punctuated the caller's boom.

Slade came in alone as the last dance was ended.

A crouper and lookout, imported from Coldriver for the event, opened Bill's route layout in one corner, the rattle of chips, the whir of the ivory ball and the professional chant of lookout and crouper sounded between dances.

The full enjoyment of a new scene was spoiled for Deane by the sickening realization that the Three Bar girl was part of it, rubbing elbows with the nondescript throng. He looked again at Harper, the rustler chief; at Slade, with his peculiar turd-like face, Slade the cattle king—the killer. Willie Warren stood between the two Eggerson girls whose faces betrayed the taint of Indian blood, an arm about the shoulders of each of them. "I'll sheriff who had said that men must humor womenfolk, was leaning against the bar, Deane turned to Harris but found him looking across the room. He turned his own eyes that way and glimpsed a dark man with an overlong, thin face and a set back stare. Morrow had just come in.

Five minutes later Harris stepped out the back door and Deane followed him. At the sound of a footfall behind him Harris whirled on his heel and when he confronted Deane the dim light from the door glinted on something in his hand.

"Sho," Harris deprecated. "I'm getting spooky. I thought it was some one else." He slipped the gun back in its holster. "There's one or two that would like right well to run across me from behind."

"I followed you out to tell you it was decent of you to insist that I stay over a few days," Deane said. "It was a white thing to do, considering that we both want the same thing."

"We both want her to have what's best for her," Harris said. "And I don't know as she could do any better than to take up with you."

"If that's your opinion," Deane said, "I'll have to say that I feel the same way about you."

"Then, if we're both right in our estimates, why she can't go very far wrong, either way she turns," Harris said. "So I reckon we're both content."

Harris moved on and motioned Deane to accompany him.

"I thought I glimpsed a man I knew a few minutes back," Harris said. "I'd like right well to have a talk with him."

They wandered completely round the post and looked in the shadows of the outbuildings but could find no trace of life.

"Likely I was mistaken," Harris said at last. "I saw a face just outside the door. He was more or less on my mind—the party—I thought it was some one else I expect, and he's gone inside."

They returned to the hall. Morrow stood with two Halfmoon D men at the end of the bar. Harris motioned him aside and Morrow withdrew from the others.

"This is pretty far north for you, Morrow," Harris suggested.

"Is there any one restricting my range?" Morrow demanded. "If there is I'd like to know."

"Then I'll tell you," Harris answered. "The road is open—as long as you keep on the road. Any time you stray off the beaten trail you're on the Three Bar range. I don't figure to get gunned up from the brush more than once by the same man. Every Three Bar boy has orders to shoot you down on sight any time you leave in view anywhere within twenty miles of the Three Bar, so I wouldn't stray off the main-traveled road any time you're going through."

Lanky Evans had detached himself from a group and Morrow looked up to find the tall man standing at his shoulder.

"So you hunt in pairs," Morrow remarked.

"And later in packs," Lanky returned. "Why don't you ever come up and visit us? Every time I'm doing north I keep looking back, expecting to see you come cantering up from the south."

"What's the object of all this conversation?" Morrow flared. "If you've got anything to say to me, why, say it over with."

"Nothing special," Evans said. "I just thought maybe I could send you into being independent enough to come up our way—which I'm sure hoping to observe you north of the line and somewhere within a thousand yards."

Evans turned away and Morrow rejoined the two men he had left in the bar. Deane looked about him. Apparently no one had noticed the little by-play.

"Evans didn't exactly mean quite all of that," Harris explained. "Of course if Morrow does come up our way Lanky would prefer to see him first—but he would rather he'd keep away. He staged that little talk as a safeguard for me. If Morrow requires the idea that several folks are anxious to see him up there, he's apt to be real cautious how he grows round the Three Bar neighborhood looking for me."

Deane crossed over to Billie. The music started but she shook her head as he would have led her to the floor.

"Sit down. I want to talk with you. Long time no see 'um after tonight," she said. "It'll be daylight soon and I've a long tale to tell."

As the others danced she gave him a dozen messages to impart to various friends.

"Tell Judge Colton that Three Bar stock is rising," she said. "And that as soon as things are all smoothed out, he can expect me for a boarder." Through an opening in the dancing throng Deane suddenly had a clear view of the open rear door—one brief glimpse before the crowd closed once more and shut off his view. He had an idea that he had seen a face, hazy and indistinct, a few feet outside the door. He wondered if it could be the friend for whom Harris had searched.

"Make the visit soon, Billie," he urged. "It's been a long month since we've had you with us. We thought maybe you'd deserted us back there. How soon will this visit start—and how long will it last?"

"It will start as soon as the Three Bar doesn't need me," she said. "And last a long time."

Again a lane opened through the crowd, affording a view of the door. Deane saw the face outside in the night, and a foot or more below it some bright object glinted in the dim light which filtered through. The music ceased and the chant of the rattle crouper began, mingling with the smooth purr of the ivory ball. There came a sudden hush from the vicinity of the rear door, a hush that spread rapidly throughout the room, so swift are the perceptions of a frontier gathering.

Billie looked up and just as she was half-raised before him. Canfield and Lang stood together in the center of the floor, apart from the rest and with no others in line beyond them. Billie tossed a look back to the floor and as it rolled toward the two men he shot Canfield through the chest. Lang's gun crashed almost with his own. Billie's knees sagged under him and he pitched face down on the floor, his arms sprawled out before him.

The surge of the crowd, pressing back out of line, threw the albino on the edge of it, his big form towering alone.

The old man raised his head from the floor and crooked his wrist with the last of his ebbing strength.

"Four for Bums," he said, and shot Harper between the eyes.

The two loggers had finished cutting their quota of timber for the homestead cabins and the white peeled logs lay piled and ready to be snaked down to the Three Bar on the first heavy snows of fall.

The acreage of plowed ground increased day by day and would continue till frost claimed the ground. As soon as the brush was burnt the mule teams pulled heavy log drags across the field, pulverizing the lumps and leveling inequalities of the surface.

Evans had been sent out as foreman of the beef round-up while Harris remained behind to direct the operations at the ranch. A few days before Evans was due with the beef herd Billie rode Papoose away from the ranch, intending to make a long-deferred visit to the Brandons.

After covering two-thirds of the distance along the foot of the hills to the V L, she saw a rider dip over a ridge two miles away. She reaching Harris' glasses and dismounted to watch for his reappearance. When he came again into her field of view another man was with him and they were driving a few head of cows before them.

She mounted Papoose and angled across to intercept their course.

As Papoose topped a low hogback that flanked the valley she saw the men riding toward her down the bottoms, driving twenty or more head of cows. One of the horses threw up his head, his ears pricked sharply toward her, and the swift upward tilt of the rider's hat, as swiftly lowered, informed her that she had been sighted. The other man did not look up. They lifted their horses from a walk to a stiff trot and veered past the cows, then looked up as "just aware of her approach, and called for her. The men were Bentley and Carp.

Bentley greeted her cheerily. Carp nodded without a word.

"What are you two doing up here?" she demanded without parley.

"I repped with the Three Bar wagon and Carp worked with you for a spell, so we sort of know the range," Bentley explained. "Slade sent us to drift any strays back south."

"Those you were driving are Three Bar stuff—every hoof," she said. "All two-year-old she-stock."

Bentley turned and regarded the herd they had just passed.

"That? Sho—we wasn't driving them," Bentley denied easily. "They just drifted ahead of us as we rode down the bottoms. A cow critter will always move on ahead of a man. We rode on past 'em as soon as we decided to nuble along."

She knew that they were on safe ground. Any cow would drift on before a horseman.

"The only way to convict a man on a case like this is to shoot him out of the saddle before he has a chance to pass the cows," she said. "That's what will happen in the next Slade rider that gets noticed with any Three Bar cows moving out in front of him and headed south. You can carry that word to Slade."

She whirled Papoose and headed back for the ranch, the intended visit to the Brandons postponed. Harris was piling brush in the lower field when she arrived and she informed him of the act of the two men.

"I wouldn't put it past Carp," he said. "But I hadn't sized Bentley up just that way. It's hard to tell. If Carp shows up here again we'll make him a visit in the middle of the night—and he won't trouble us much after that."

"We'd better pay Slade a night visit, too," she said. Her feelings toward Slade had undergone a complete revision. She knew beyond a doubt that he had been responsible for the raid on Evans' line once.

The bunch would have had no object in such a foray. Fixing it from any angle Slade was the only one man who could possibly derive any benefit from that. She had come to see that Slade was fighting with his back to the wall—that he had run his course and come to the end of it. If squatters secured a start in his range, and he considered the net of the Three Bar the opening wedge which would throw open the way for the nesters to crowd him out.

The evening of the following day the beef herd trailed into the lower end of the Three Bar valley and headed for the night. In the morning the trail herd was headed for the railroad under a full crew, for Harris had kept his hands on the job.

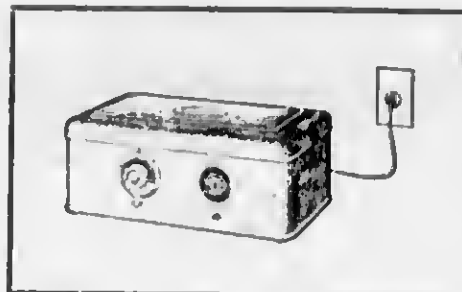

The drive was a nondescript lot. In addition to the steers and older cows that comprised every trail herd, the off-color she-stock had been carefully culled from the range.

Harris pointed to the bunch. "Look that assortment over well, Billie," he advised. "A few seasons more, with fair luck, and you won't see one of these rainbow droves with every color from brindle to strawberry roan; none of these humpbacked rants; they'll all be gone. That's almost the last mongrel herd that will ever wear your brand. They'll run

By B. C. Mellencamp

Of great interest to residents of Charlevoix county is the announcement that W. P. Porter, well known Northern Michigan lumberman, will set out several thousand cherry trees this spring. The orchard will be located on the Peninsula on the John Seiler farm, which he recently purchased. This location should prove excellent for fruit, having fine air drainage and the right type of soil.

Few people realize the number of cherry trees planted in Charlevoix county the last two years and the effect on the agricultural prosperity that should result. While accurate figures are not available, without a doubt in the neighborhood of 15,000 trees have been set out. Within the next five years cherries will be one of our major crops and will take their rank with potatoes, beans, alfalfa, sweet clover and our livestock industry.

Such diversification will assist the agricultural prosperity materially. With the canning factory at East Jordan developing rapidly and expanding every year to meet the demands of the farmers, a ready market is available to cherry growers right here in our own county.

During the past three years a multitude of spray materials have been put on the market, both dust and liquid, until today the average fruit grower is uncertain as to the proper spray to use. Particularly the dust sprays have several dozen different names and nearly a different dust for every fruit disease and pest. In order to assist fruit growers in settling these matters, a series of spray meetings will be conducted by Prof. H. A. Cardinell, extension specialist, on January 8, 9 and 10.

Watch papers for further announcements.

POWER COMPANY WILL SPEND $32,000 ON LINES

New Line to Connect Mancelona With Elk Rapids

Chas. Bleicher, line foreman who has just completed building the 33,000-volt line from here to connect at Elk Rapids with the main lines of the Michigan Public Service company up and down the state, begins today the rebuilding of the pole-lines and services here in Mancelona.

The company has set aside $25,000 for the reconstruction here and at Alba, also appropriated $7,000 for installing a new street lighting system here.

The material needed—poles, wire, transformers, etc.—is here. Cross-arms alone have not yet showed up.

The nearly three erlonds of poles came from Vancouver, and are straight and with very slight taper. The freight alone on the poles was $1040.48, the total cost of individual poles running from $6.70 for 30-footers to $20.80 for 50-footers. There were 322 poles in the shipment making the average freight alone over $3.00.

It was planned to cut Mancelona and Alba onto the main 33-volt line last week, but the substation work at the Elk Rapids junction did not get completed. The cut-in will be made tomorrow.—Mancelona Herald.

"God the Preserver of Man," was the subject of the lesson-lesson in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, December 16.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-lesson was the following from the Bible: "And when Peter was come to himself, he said, now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectations of the people of the Jews" (Acts 12:11).

The lesson-lesson also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Truth and Love come nearer in the hour of woe, when strong faith or spiritual strength wrestles and prevails through the understanding of God. The Gabriel of His presence has no contests. To infinite, ever-present Love, all is Love, and there is no error, no sin, sickness, nor death" (p. 567).

Five minutes later Harris stepped out the back door and Deane followed him. At the sound of a footfall behind him Harris whirled on his heel and when he confronted Deane the dim light from the door glinted on something in his hand.

"Sho," Harris deprecated. "I'm getting spooky. I thought it was some one else." He slipped the gun back in its holster. "There's one or two that would like right well to run across me from behind."

"I followed you out to tell you it was decent of you to insist that I stay over a few days," Deane said. "It was a white thing to do, considering that we both want the same thing."

"We both want her to have what's best for her," Harris said. "And I don't know as she could do any better than to take up with you."

"It may sound rather trite—coming out of my mouth—but I feel the same way about you."

"Then, if we're both right in our estimates, why she can't go very far wrong, either way she turns," Harris said. "So I reckon we're both content."

Harris moved on and motioned Deane to accompany him.

"I thought I glimpsed a man I knew a few minutes back," Harris said. "I'd like right well to have a talk with him."

"They wandered completely round the post and looked in the shadows of the outbuildings but could find no trace of life."

"Likely I was mistaken," Harris said at last. "I saw a face just outside the door. He was more or less on my mind—the party I thought it was. Some one else I expect, and he's gone inside."

They returned to the hall. Morrow stood with two Halfmoon D men at the end of the bar. Harris motioned him aside and Morrow withdrew from the others.

"This is pretty far north for you, Morrow," Harris suggested. "Is there any one restricting my range?" Morrow demanded. "If there is I'd like to know."

"Then I'll tell you," Harris answered. "The road is open—as long as you keep on the road. Any time you stray off the beaten trail you're on the Three Bar range. I don't think to get gunned up from the brush more than once by the same man. Every Three Bar boy has orders to shoot you down on sight any time you leave his view anywhere within twenty miles of the Three Bar; so I wouldn't stray off the main-traveled road any time you're going through."

Lanky Evans had detached himself from a group and Morrow looked up to find the tall man standing at his shoulder.

"So you hunt in pairs," Morrow remarked.

"And later in pairs," Lanky returned. "Why don't you ever come up and visit us? Every time I'm riding north I keep looking back, expecting to see you come cantering up from the south."

"What's the object of all this conversation?" Morrow flared. "If you've got anything to say to me, why, get it over with."

"Nothing special," Evans said. "I just thought maybe I could send you into being imprudent enough to come up our way—which I'm sure hoping to observe you north of the line and somewhere within a thousand yards."

Evans turned away and Morrow rejoined the two men he had left at the bar. Deane looked about him. Apparently no one had noticed the little display.

"Evans didn't exactly mean quite all of that," Harris explained. "Of course if Morrow does come up our way Lanky would prefer to see him first—but he would rather he'd keep away. He staged that little talk as a safeguard for me. If Morrow acquires the idea that several folks are anxious to see him up there, he's apt to be real cautious how he prowls round the Three Bar neighborhood looking for me."

Deane crossed over to Billie. The music started but she shook her head as he would have led her to the floor. "Sit down. I want to talk with you. Long time no see 'im after tonight," she said. "I'll be daylight soon and I've a long tale to tell."

As the others danced she gave him a dozen messages to impart to various friends.

"Tell Judge Colton that Three Bar stock is rising," she said. "And that as soon as things are all smoothed out, he can expect me for a boarder."

Through an opening in the dancing throng Deane suddenly had a clear view of the open rear door—one brief glimpse before the crowd closed once more and shut off his view. He had an idea that he had seen a face, hazy and indistinct, a few feet outside the door. He wondered if it could be the friend for whom Harris had searched.

"Make the visit soon," Billie, he urged. "It's been a long month since we've had you with us. We thought maybe you'd deserted us back there. How soon will this visit start—and how long will it last?"

"It will start as soon as the Three Bar doesn't need me," she said. "And last a long time."

Again a lane opened through the crowd, affording a view of the door. Deane saw the face outside in the night, and a foot or more below it some bright object glinted in the dim light which filtered through. The music ceased and the chant of the roulette croupier began, mingling with the smooth purr of the ivory ball.

There came a sudden hush from the vicinity of the rear door, a hush that spread rapidly throughout the room, so swift are the perceptions of a frontier gathering.

Old Rile Foster stood fast inside the door, his feet planted on the floor and Lang stood together in the center of the floor, apart from the rest and with no others in line beyond them. Rile tossed a boot heel on to the floor and as it rolled toward the two men he shot Canfield through the chest. Lang's gun crashed almost with his own. Rile's knees sagged under him and he pitched face down on the floor, his arms sprawled out before him.

The surge of the crowd pressing back out of line, threw the albino on the edge of it, his big form towering alone.

The old man raised his head from the floor and crooked his wrist with the last of his eldritch strength.

"Four for Bangs," he said, and shot Harper between the eyes.

The two loggers had flushed cutting their quon of timber for the homestead cabins and the white pecked logs lay piled and ready to be snaked down to the Three Bar on the first heavy snows of fall.

The acreage of plowed ground increased day by day and would continue till frost claimed the ground. As soon as the brush was burnt the mule teams pulled heavy log drags across the field, pulverizing the lumps and leveling inequalities of the surface.

Evans had been sent out as foreman of the beef round-up while Harris remained behind to direct the operations at the ranch. A few days before Evans was due with the beef herd Billie rode Papoose away from the ranch, intending to make a long deferred visit to the Brandons.

After covering two-thirds of the distance along the foot of the hills to the V I, she saw a rider dip over a ridge two miles away. She pushing Harris' glasses and dismounted to watch for his reappearance. When he came again into her field of view another man was with him and they were driving a few head of cowboys before then.

She mounted Papoose and angled across to intersect their course.

As Papoose topped a low hogback that flanked the valley she saw the men riding toward her down the bottom, driving twenty or more head of cows. One of the horses threw up his head, his ears pricked sharply toward her, and the swift upward tilt of the rider's hat, as swiftly lowered, informed her that she had been sighted. The other man did not look up. They lifted their horses from a walk to a stiff trot and veered past the cows, then looked up as 'just aware of her approach, and waited for her. The men were Bentley and Carp.

Bentley greeted her cheerily. Carp nodded without a word.

"What are you two doing up here?" she demanded without parley.

"I topped with the Three Bar wagon and Carp worked with you for a spell, so we sort of know the range," Bentley explained. "Slade sent us to drift any strays back south."

"Those you were driving are Three Bar stuff—every hoof," she said. "All two-year-old she-stock."

Bentley turned and regarded the little herd they had just passed.

"Then? She—we wasn't driving them," Bentley denied easily. "They just drifted ahead of us as we rode down the bottoms. A cow critter will always move on ahead of a man. We rode on just 'em as soon as we decided to make a move."

She knew that they were on safe ground. Any cow would drift on before a horseman.

"The only way to convict a man on a case like this is to shoot him out of the saddle before he has a chance to pass the cows," she said. "That's what will happen to the next Slade rider that gets noticed with any Three Bar cows moving out in front of him and headed south. You can carry that word to Slade."

She whirled Papoose and headed back for the ranch, the intended visit to the Brandons postponed. Harris was piling brush in the lower field when she arrived and she informed him of the net of the two men.

"I wouldn't put it past Carp," he said. "But I hadn't sized Bentley up just that way. It's hard to tell. If Carp shows up here again we'll make him a visit in the middle of the night—and he won't trouble us much after that."

"We'd better pay Slade a night visit, too," she said. Her feelings toward Slade had undergone a complete revision. She knew beyond a doubt that he had been responsible for the raid on Three Bar bulls. The wild hunt would have been his job.

Such a foray, flinging it from any angle Slade was the only one man who could possibly derive any benefit from that. She had come to see that Slade was fighting with his back to the wall—that he had run his course and come to the end of it if spalliers secured a start in his range, and he considered the net of the Three Bar the opening wedge which would throw open the way for the nesters to crowd him out.

The evening of the following day the beef herd trailed into the lower end of the Three Bar valley and bedded for the night. In the morning the trail herd was held for the railroad under a full crew, for Harris had kept all hands on the job.

The drove was a nondescript lot. In addition to the steers and older cows that comprised every trail herd, the off-color she-stock had been carefully culled from the range.

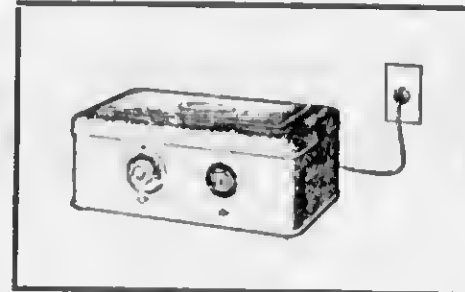

Harris pointed to the bunch.

"Look that assortment over well, Billie," he advised. "A few seasons more, with fair luck, and you won't see one of these rainbow droves with every color from brindle to strawberry-rose; none of these humpbacked rants; they'll all be gone. That's almost the last mongrel herd that will ever wear your brand. They'll run

5,255 DEER CROSS THE STRAITS OF MACKINAC

Hugh Green, chief conservation officer of the department of conservation, has announced that there were 5,255 deer shipped across the Straits of Mackinac during the deer hunting season. Mr. Green believes this number represents 50 per cent of the total deer shot. He pointed out that many animals were shot by upper peninsula residents while others were bagged by hunters in the lower peninsula.

The figures given by Mr. Green indicate that over a thousand more were shipped from Cloverland this year, as compared with last year. Records reveal that 4,144 were carried across in 1927. Other animals to cross the straits and their number follow: Bear, 56; coyote, 26; wolves 7; bobcats, 7.

Sleapstick Mill Graduated Many Stars of Today

"The traditional college of hard knocks is the greatest school for motion picture players," said William Haines, co-star with Marion Davies in "Show People," a film of life and love behind the scenes in the California motion picture colony, which comes to the Palace Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

In this special Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, which King Vidor directed, Haines plays a slapstick comedian, who guides a film novice, Miss Davies, into dramatic stardom, where she becomes so puffed up she can't see him any more.

Player's Career Full of Amazing Ups and Downs

After managing a big studio for five years, then, when it failed, going into the ranks of the extras and rising to fame once more in a new capacity as a character actor, Eddie Sturgis, pioneer of the screen, is playing the role of a gangster chief in "Shadows of the Night," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vivid newspaper drama coming next Thursday and Friday at the Palace Theatre.

Carl Anderson is helping John Cooper get buzz poles.

Mr. Sherman taught interestingly the Bible class Sunday.

Rev. Mattson called at the school house Monday in the interests of the Sunday school census.

George Miller has purchased eight horses for his fox farm this winter.

He returned from Bellaire last week.

There were twenty present at the Union Sunday school last Sunday and fourteen at rock Elm Sunday school.

The community was greatly shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. Elmer Ingalls. They have the sympathy of their many friends here.

Much credit is due Supt. of Public Instruction Pierce for the institute speakers Dearing and Burnham. Both of their lectures were along spiritual and moral lines. Mr. Dearing told the teachers that if their mission was to merely teach and draw their pay, and then go back to town, they had better not teach. Rather they should work for the betterment of the community they were in, such as organization and helping in Sunday school work, handicraft clubs, etc.

Prof. Burnham said a more friendly spirit should be created between patrons of a school district. Prof. Dearing said we could not get away from the fact that we should labor to lift up the people from lower morals. If we did not, we could not escape their influence on our children.

Charlevoix Public School Notes

"Flu" in Charlevoix
During the last week a number of cases of "flu" have been reported by the local physicians in Charlevoix. The epidemic has the same nature as the "flu" which occurred in the United States in 1918 and 1919.

The "flu" started this year on the Pacific coast and has spread rapidly until cases have been reported throughout the states.

In several cities the schools have been closed for some time and will not open until the beginning of the new year.

In Grand Rapids the "flu" has been raging furiously. Many of the industries have been seriously crippled because of the illness of the laborers.

Doctors say that the surest way of preventing the disease is to stay away from those who have the least symptoms of it. If one has a cold and a headache, they should, for the benefit of both themselves and others, remain alone. The disease is probably spread by breathing in small particles of mucus or sputum which have been thrown into the air by the coughing and sneezing of those who have the disease.

Start the New Year Right

The person whose first thought is making the New Year's Resolution has done his bit towards making the world a better place to live in. Even if we forget many of our resolutions, we still hold on to one or two of them, it has helped us in great deal.

So let us resolve to start January 1st, 1924, to do our school work and home work with more than a desire to just "get by." It is the fellow who is willing to put his best into his work that reaches the goal, not the fellow who just tries to "get by," for he never gets anywhere.

We are not showing due respect to our teachers when we lay aside lessons for the sake of mere pleasure. There is a time for all things, but we are sure that the teachers and everyone else would be glad if we could only learn just what that time is. We wish you all a Happy New Year!

The Crayfish

The biology class has found out that the crayfish has many peculiar habits. His most rapid way of escape is by backing up when seeing danger.

The crayfish is very fortunate in being able to replace a lost appendage by growth. If a foot has been cut or broken off he can replace it in a short time by growing another on in its place.

During the winter months the crayfish digs a hole in the ground where it stays until warm weather. On the top of the hole is a mud chimney several inches high, which surrounds the entrance of his home.

Band News

The high school band played at the basketball game Saturday night. This is the second time the band has played at the games this year. Music gives pep to the players and practice for the band boys. We hope to have them with us at every game.

Science Department

The chemistry and physics classes are proud of the rejuvenated appearance of the laboratory. Almost one hour of the day the pupils are busy performing experiments in order to make up for lost time.

Domestic Science Department

Miss Hood told us we were to have the next four days in making Christmas candy, which we are to do in the approved fashion of professional candy-makers. The domestic science class wishes you all a very Merry Christmas.

Commercial Department

The typewriters have finally been repaired and are all in first class working condition. An old typewriter has also been exchanged for a new one. The only sad part about this is that no longer can we blame the typewriter for the mistakes that are made in speed tests or find any excuse to take the test over.

Latin News

The Latin II students have recently given very interesting reports on some of the mythological characters; important ancient buildings and characters important at the time of the Greek and Roman history. The reports were given in an interesting way, and proved helpful to everyone.

English Department

The English I class are studying the life of Sir Walter Scott. They have finished "The Lady of the Lake."

English III have been studying punctuation for some time.

English III have finished the life of Washington Irving and took an examination over it. They are now studying the life of William Cullen Bryant.

Junior News

A class meeting was called Tuesday morning by the president to announce that the class rings will arrive this week, also to advise the people to bring the remainder of the money for their rings as soon as possible. A letter was received from the Gleason Wallace Company stating that the rings are being made up beautifully and they are sure everyone will be well pleased with them.

Journalism—A New Class Organized

A number of the students of the Charlevoix high school have recently formed a class in journalism under the leadership of Miss Keller, our history teacher. We have been allowed a space in the Charlevoix Courier and write the news of the school weekly for that paper.

General News

Mr. Ottenbein and Mr. North spent the week end in Lansing at an educational meeting.

Rev. Lockyer made a brief announcement regarding the Welch musicians who are to be town soon.

The County Teachers' Institute, held at the gymnasium December 13, was largely attended by the teachers in Charlevoix county.

After spending a whole week memorizing Gray's Elegy from a country churchyard, we are glad to report that practically every member of the senior class has accomplished this difficult feat and upon being asked to recite it can render this selection very admirably. Although it seemed practically impossible, now that it is finally accomplished we are indeed very happy, and if perchance you should hear some absent-minded senior quoting "The curfew tells the knell of party day," just smile and pass on unheeding, for they know not what they do.

The high school was entertained Wednesday morning by the boy's quartette and the girl's sextet. Members of the quartette are: Ty Kirby, Edwin Mndill, Bud Gill and Lloyd Swartout. Members of the sextet are: Clara Kelderhouse, Doris Solomon, Mary Simmons, Annie Scott, Gwendolyn Miller and Jane Sininow.

Jack—To match his coat, silly.

Athletic News

After a rough and fast game including three over-time periods, the Red and White basketball team was beaten by the Ellsworth quintet by a score of 7 to 5, the score being low probably on account of the floor, which was about one-third the size of an ordinary court.

The game was a battle from start to finish, with the score ending 1 to 0 in the first quarter. The one point was made by Dick Marshall. The second quarter opened with Billy Novak scoring a field goal and a foul for Charlevoix and Elzinga and Rood scoring two and one fouls, respectively, for Ellsworth. The score at the half was Charlevoix 4, Ellsworth 3.

The last half Charlevoix scored but one point, while Ellsworth made two fouls, the half ending with the score Charlevoix 5, Ellsworth 5. The first and second over-time periods were scoreless, and it was not until the third towards the last that one of Ellsworth's forwards slapped one in the basket which ended the game.

A meeting was called Friday morning by the girls' athletic director, Eleanor Thomas. The purpose of the meeting was to organize and elect basketball captains of the various classes for the year.

Little interest has been shown in former years in girls' athletics, but this season there are a larger number of promising players who intend to practice harder than ever before.

A meeting will be played between the girls' basketball teams at game between school.

At the end of the season class tournaments are to be held and the various teams compete for class championships.

The girls are looking forward to an interesting year in basketball.

A meeting of the basketball girls was held Friday morning for the purpose of electing class captains. Results were as follows:

Freshmen, Viola Stifford.
Sophomores, Doris Struthers.
Juniors, Clara Kelderhouse.
Seniors, Nellie Smith.

JUNIOR HIGH

Eighth Grade

Certain junior high boys were selected to get our Christmas trees and they made a good job of it. We have two trees, one at each end of the assembly room. Monday morning was started with great pleasure for the room is all decorated with red and green trimmings.

Wednesday morning our cheer leaders will have at least three more yells, which will make six. They have more than enough yells, but the motions are yet to come.

Everyone was holding their breath Monday morning when Mr. Bingham said to bring notebook, paper, pen and ink to class. But, when section II came back we were quite relieved when they told us not to worry for we only had to copy some programs from the board.

We had a "pep" meeting last Wednesday morning. We practised three yells and after we get started we will make some noise. The leaders were Marjorie Partridge, Drew Young, Lucina Richardson, Winfield Kirby, Jermine Atchison and Junior Superintendent.

We are going to have our Christmas program Thursday evening, December 20th.

Pep Meeting

Friday, following the close of school, a short but snappy pep meeting led by Bob Foster was held for the boys going to Ellsworth that same night.

"The Untidy Bookcase"

As a rule, people of today do not believe in fairies, but I have very good proof there are such creatures alive today. Someone—fairies, gnomes, brownies, elves or tishbits noticed the bookcase situated in the back part of the assembly room, which was in a sad state of affairs. Books here, books there, books everywhere except in the neat piles and sections in which one would expect them. But one night if someone had looked into the assembly about 12 o'clock (for that is the time when most fairies work) they would have seen much scampering around, hurrying, hustling, bustling, rushing—because the fairies were at work arranging the books into their proper order, sorting them over and destroying the useless ones.

And do you know, if you go into that bookcase now, you will find it neat as a pin.

Who did this?
Fairies, of course!

We have some promising poets among the seniors—Elwood Livingston and Bud Gill. If any are interested, perhaps we could supply you with a few of their original poems.

County Normal News

On Thursday evening, December 20th, a Christmas party is to be given by the Misses Straw, Sullivan and Sainow, at the Siminow residence. We are certain that a good time will be had by all and are very anxious to see Santa Claus once again.

Christmas carols are being prepared by the normal and training room. These will be sung at the program Friday afternoon in the training room.

Under the direction of Miss Woolley we are all making woven yarn bags for Christmas.

We, as a class, attended the teachers' institute on Thursday, December 13, which was enjoyed by all.

Through the combined efforts of the state department, the county school commissioner and the county normal teachers, a very helpful health program has been conducted in the county normal class and in the training room.

As a result of the last of these series of lectures and examinations, we have the following report: Number of children whose teeth were examined, 28; number graded A, 2; number graded B, 22; number graded C, 4; number who needed filling, 24; number who needed extraction, 18. Watch the health dental honor roll grow.

FARMER ATTEMPTED SUICIDE SATURDAY

Sets Fire to Home and Strikes Self on Head with Hammer

Antoine Sharrow, farmer living on U. S. 31 four miles southwest of the city, was taken to the Traverse City state hospital Monday morning after being held in jail since Saturday following an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide.

It is understood Sharrow had been acting queerly for some time. Saturday morning he scattered a bunch of newspapers on the floor of the kitchen in his home, saturated them with kerosene and, after touching a match to them, struck himself over the head with a hammer. The blow was not of sufficient force to stun him, however, and before help was rendered by neighbors who had gathered attracted by the fire, Sharrow managed to crawl out of the house, then a seething mass of flames. He was painfully burned and his home totally destroyed.

It will be replete with carols and other special music, charming costumes and attractive lighting effects. And the Christmas spirit will be continued in the evening at the 7:00 o'clock service. Christmas stories, picture masterpieces and splendid music.

On Monday at 7:00 p. m. the Sunday school Christmas tree and program will be given in the church. The usual "treats" and fun will be the order of the evening.

STORAGE PLANTS FOR CEMENT CO.

Petoskey Portland Is Building Three Large Ones.

The Petoskey Portland Cement Co. is building three great cement storage sheds, one at Chicago, one at Milwaukee and the third in Detroit. Each will have a capacity of 35,000 barrels of cement. The plant will run all winter and these sheds or silos will be filled with bulk cement from which jointly shipments can be made by boat or rail. The shipments to the sheds will be made by the company's steamers. The company steamer J. B. John is being made over this winter into a bulk carrier instead of a package carrier. These changes will throw a lot of men out of employment at the plant, men who have sacked cement and helped load the boats. The cement will be sacked at the different sheds hereafter, if it is to be delivered in sacks. John L. A. Galster, the manager of the company, has just returned from the annual meeting held at Chicago and announced these things on his return.

INSTRUCTIVE AD- DRESSES AT P. T. A.

SUPT. OTTERBEIN AND DR. ARM-STRONG GAVE TALKS.

Problems Presented by Youth of Nation Subject of Discussion—
Meet Next Jan. 9th.

The December meeting of the PTA held last Wednesday evening at the high school auditorium, was a most enjoyable and instructive occasion.

Supt. Otterbein and Dr. Armstrong were the speakers. They both have a keen interest in the young and gave their hearers something to take home with them to think over. The superintendent spoke first and expressed himself as thoroughly sold to the PTA idea and gave a talk which he hoped might be used as a basis and background for future meetings.

He made mention of two comparatively recent movements which have done much for the children of the world—the scientific and humanitarian. The first named began in 1858 when Chas. Darwin wrote the origin of the species and this should be discussed at another time.

The humanitarian movement began about one hundred years ago and gradually the earlier notions in regard to the child gave way before it. The ancient idea "coarced in sin and born iniquity" and others of a similar nature have colored our ideas and influenced our dealings with the young. In consequence of this the child is the last vest of civilization to be freed and given its day and its rights.

But brave pioneers dared to break away from ancient beliefs. The Christ came and taught, "suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of Heaven." Yet for fifteen hundred years or more the old ideas still predominated. Even the early New England settlers, worthy as they were, erred in believing in the doctrine of child depravity.

The awakening began about two hundred years ago with Schiller, Kant, Goethe, Wilberforce and others who advanced the idea that the child was not responsible for evil. Pestalozzi, in the 18th century, turned his home into a social center, primary and kindergarten room combined for some poor children in practicing his theories along this line and made a great stride forward.

Then came a form of child tyranny known as the Industrial Revolution in England. Children were put in the mills to work 14 and 16 hours a day under unhealthy conditions. That cruelty in England was transplanted to this country.

The child labor question is not settled yet, though Michigan and many other states have passed child labor laws. Only three years ago the question was still of such importance that the subject for high school debate in this state was: "Resolved, That Congress should pass a child labor law to protect children."

Charles Dickens, through some of his novels such as "Dombey and Son," "Oliver Twist," and "Nicholas Nickleby" called the world's attention to the wrongs of the child, and at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893, because of service rendered, there was an exhibit depicting Dickens' contribution to child life in England.

There are teachers who can reach every child, but not enough of them. Industrial and manual training teachers are needed in many instances, but the majority of schools cannot offer these courses. They would solve the problem for children who are not interested in mere book learning.

A delinquent may be defined as one who falls short of what is right and proper. Parents and teachers must take their share of the blame in these cases. To understand the incorrigible child one must study the influences on his life from infancy and go back to his parents and even his grand parents.

Psychiatry and behaviorism are words which we should accustom ourselves to if we are to study the child. Look them up in the dictionary and get their meaning. We should think of a child's doings as his behavior and not as a crime, and try to understand why he behaved in that way. He is probably reacting to some condition.

Nature is unmerciful. We do a certain thing to a child and there is a condition created right there.

The question is what conditions can we place around our boys and girls so that they will react just right.

We as fathers and mothers and teachers must study and understand boys and girls and know why they do wrong things. We must get together and agree on standards so they will be the same in the home and the school. The PTA is an excellent place to discuss these questions and we ought to have 150 out to these monthly meetings.

Charlevoix schools are to be congratulated as having a superintendent who is an educator and who reads and thinks along these lines.

Dr. Armstrong spoke on "Vocations." He thinks too many parents pay no attention to what their children like to do—they want to set their course for them. So many want their boys to go into the professions when they have no liking for them. Doing the thing you don't like to do is drudgery and the child's natural bent should be considered.

In the course of his remarks the doctor related a painful incident of his own school days when corporal punishment was in vogue and which he considers was the high point in his youthful career. The attitude which his father took at the time of taking (Continued on Page 6)

CHARLEVOIX HAS NEW VOTE FIGHT

ONE MAN INQUIRY GOING ON INTO CONTESTS COSTS.

Anderson's Primary Battle Against Judge Harris for State Representative Being Aired.

Echoes of the recent bitter primary fight in Charlevoix and Leland counties came to the surface last Thursday when it was disclosed that Circuit Judge Joseph Barton of Big Rapids, had just held a secret one-man grand jury hearing involving the campaign expenses of Louis Anderson of the latter county, who won out on the face of the returns.

While neither Judge Barton nor A. L. Fitch, Charlevoix county prosecutor, have made any direct statement, it is believed that startling testimony was developed, which will be aired when Judge Barton reconvenes the hearing.

The primary law limits members of the state legislature to an expenditure of $200.00 to obtain the nomination. Anderson's successful campaign was marked with pointed circular letters, sarcastic comments on representative Harris' political activities, which were sharply resented by the Charlevoix legislator. At one time it was anticipated that the statements made by Anderson's political committee would result in a slander suit started by Harris, which however did not develop.

In case it is proven that Anderson's expenses were in excess of the $200 limit, his seat in the state legislature will be in doubt, the primary law barring a violator of its provisions from taking his seat at the capitol.

The grand jury investigations conducted by Judge Barton is attracting considerable attention in northern Michigan political circles, and is being closely watched, both within and without the two counties involved.

Wilfred A. Bissard, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bissard of Antrim, pulled a pint cup of boiling water onto himself last Sunday. The little fellow's neck and chin were blistered a trifle, but his left arm received the bulk of the scalding water.

Monday the baby died from heart failure due to the shock from his injuries. His age was 1 year, 1 month and 21 days.

The funeral was held at the home of Mrs. Bissard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Irvin, living east of Wetzel, last Wednesday afternoon. Rev. M. A. Oldt officiating.

Rev. B. G. Mattson of the Congregational church, conducted funeral services Monday morning at 10:30 for Will Bird, another of Charlevoix's pioneers, who died Saturday morning at his home on Park avenue from heart complications, following an illness of some three years.

Mr. Bird was born October 29, 1863, in Wall Lake, Oakland county, Michigan. He came to Charlevoix county at the age of five years with his parents and had since resided on a farm at what is known as the Ironton corner.

"AUNT" CLARA SHERMAN DIED LAST SATURDAY

Had Lived at Robert Sherman Home
For Past 19 Years

Miss Clara Sherman, one of the oldest residents in this county, passed away December 22, aged 92 years and three months, at the home of her nephew, Robert Sherman, on the East Jordan road.

Miss Sherman had been a member of Robert Sherman's home for the past 19 years. She was born in Canada in September 1836, and lived for many years in the region bordering on Georgian Bay with her brother, who was the father of Robt. Sherman.

She was a woman of quiet and domestic tastes, whose constant industry and self-reliance made her presence always helpful in the home of which was to the last a beloved member.

Rev. B. G. Mattson conducted the funeral service on Monday, December 24. The interment was in Lake-side cemetery.

POPULAR SUMMER VISITOR IS DEAD

DONALD C. OSBORN DIED AT KALAMAZOO, DEC. 10.

Was Trustee at Belvedere Club for Many Years and Active Member—Well Known.

Members of the Belvedere summer colony and Charlevoix citizens alike will next season miss the presence of one of the city's most prominently known summer visitors on account of the death of Donald C. Osborn, who died December 10th at his home in Kalamazoo.

Mr. Osborn's cottage was No. 115 Belvedere and for many years he had been a trustee of the Club as well as one of its most active members. He was an ardent sportsman and took a keen interest in the affairs of the city.

The following item concerning Mr. Osborn was taken from the Kalamazoo Gazette:

"Donald Cornell Osborn, 51, former state senator and long a leader in state Republican circles, died Monday evening at his home, 527 West South street, after an illness of many months. He was born in Franklin, Pa., March 26, 1877, being the son of James W. Osborn and Augusta Cornell Osborn. He moved to Kalamazoo at the age of seven years with his parents and has made this city his home since. He attended Berkeley school in New York City and the University of Michigan. He was graduated in 1905 from the law department of the latter institution. After admission to the bar he joined the law firm of Osborn & Mills.

After the death of the senior member of the firm he continued his practice in the same office.

"December 21, 1905, he married Myra Eberstein, who survives him. He leaves also a sister, Mrs. Robert C. Hall of Cleveland. Mr. Osborn has always taken a prominent and active part in the life of the community. He was for two terms a member of the state senate. During the war he was government appeal attorney for cases arising under the selective service law. He was delegated from the third congressional district in 1920 to the Republican national convention. He also served as Republican county chairman of Kalamazoo county from 1918 to 1922. He was respected and generally popular alike with his own party and those with whom he differed politically."

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon, December 12, from the late residence. Members of the Kalamazoo county bar association met at the court house and attended in a body. Burial at Mountain Home cemetery was private.

KALKASKA COUNTY MAN HAS IRON-ORE ON FARM

Specimens Sent to Lansing for Analysis Show Rich Content

Residents of Garfield township, Kalkaska county, are elated over the fact that iron in paying quantities has been found on the farm of Dines Fredrickson. Some weeks ago Mr. Fredrickson sent specimens of ore to the Cadillac foundry for analysis and the test showed it to be rich in iron, 64.5 per cent. Another specimen was sent to Lansing for further investigation, this also showing a content of 64.5 per cent iron.

Several Lansing firms have already interviewed Mr. Fredrickson in regard to purchasing the property for its mining possibilities. Mr. Fredrickson has not sold as yet, holding out for a price that is worth while. The vein of ore runs through 560 acres of the farm land and although the depth of the vein has not been determined, signs show it to be exceedingly rich.

Mr. Fredrickson states that he has been aware of the presence of ore for fifteen years but had not believed the vein so rich. Mr. Fredrickson is an old settler, having lived on the farm for forty years.—Maecelona Herald.

GRAYLING DEFEAT- ED C. H. S. QUINT

LOCAL FIVE DROPPED CONTEST
THURSDAY 18 TO 13

Charlevoix Polar Bears Meet Saginaw Triangles Friday Night
In Feature Contest

In a game not listed on the regular schedule, Charlevoix high school basketball team lost to Grayling high school at Grayling last Thursday evening by an 18 to 13 count.

The contest was a close one throughout, with the local quintet leading until after the opening of the second half. The score at the intermission was 9 to 7 with Charlevoix holding a two point advantage. Grayling overcame the lead against them in the third quarter and, although hard pressed by Kipke's men during the remainder of the contest, piled up a lead of 5 points in the last two stanzas. Bill Superaaw, Charlevoix right guard, led his team-mates for scoring honors.

In the next regular scheduled game, Charlevoix meets Pellston Friday evening at Pellston.

A basketball tilt that has all the earmarks of being a "red hot" affair is in store for local fan Friday evening, December 28, when the Charlevoix Polar Bears tangle with the Saginaw Triangles on the local court.

The Polar Bears have been playing a championship brand of basketball in their contests so far this season and have so far defeated all comers. In the Saginaw Triangles they meet one of the best independent basketball combinations in Michigan, a team rated among the top-notchers.

It is probable the Polar Bear lineup will be strengthened by Floyd Brown, former high school star, who is home for the holiday vacation. The team is in far better condition than a year ago and may be looked upon to give a good account of themselves against any team.

Admission prices will remain at the same popular figure and a record crowd is expected to be present Friday evening.

POLAR BEARS TO MEET STRONG MIDLAND FIVE

Game on Home Court Monday Evening, December 31

Announcement has been made of another feature basketball game arranged for the Charlevoix Polar Bears. On Monday evening, December 31st, they will play the strong Midland independent team on the local court.

A. star and Madill forwards; Chamberlain, all-inter-collegiate of Tulane, New Orleans, center; Brown, all-state high school star player from Saginaw Eastern and Martin, Fort Wayne, guards. Subs are Langley, Ypsilanti; Parker, Plattsburg, N. Y., and Carpenter, University of Detroit. The average weight of the visiting team is 176 pounds, and the average height 5 ft. 11 inches.

WINTER CARNIVAL DATES ARE CHOSEN

EVENT ONE WEEK IN ADVANCE
ON FEBRUARY 6 AND 7.

Winter Sports Committee Discussed
Details of Program Wednesday Night—Thursday Half Holiday

With inquiries and reservations for accommodations the greatest in any previous year, Charlevoix is preparing a winter sports program to entertain visitors during the 1929 winter season. Although weather conditions are far from ideal for winter sports, preparations are going forward nevertheless.

At a meeting of the winter sports committee at the Hotel Charlevoix last Thursday evening, matters pertaining to the season's program were discussed. Members of the committee elected D. T. McHugh as chairman and also director of winter sports and set a precedent by putting the director on a salary for the months of January and February.

The committee met again on Wednesday evening of this week. Alonzo Powers, representing the board of education, was present. He told the committee of the arrangements made between the school board and the city council for maintenance of the community skating rink at the school grounds. It is planned to have an L-shaped rink this season, with the hockey pen at the north end on the space where the tennis courts are situated. Material for the pen is now on the ground to be set up. Snow was scraped off the ground last week, but soft weather has not permitted further preparations.

The matter of dates for the 4th annual winter carnival was settled after considerable discussion. The past four years Charlevoix has had their carnival on the Wednesday and Thursday of the second week in February, those dates this year falling on the 13th and 14th. It seems that Petoskey, making preparations for their winter program, set the dates of their carnival one week ahead and chose the 12th and 13th of February. It appears efforts to untangle the situation on conflicting dates were without results, so rather than have two carnivals under way in neighboring towns at the same time, the committee voted to set Charlevoix's carnival dates a week ahead, Wednesday and Thursday, February 6 and 7. It was generally conceded that co-operation of all Northern Michigan cities would spell greater success for winter sports, and that our neighboring city might have used a little more tact than they did when choosing the date Charlevoix held a carnival for the past four years.

The half holiday on Thursday afternoon of each week will be in force again this winter, with a program of sports on each of these days. The committee will draw up a tentative budget of expenses to be presented to the city council tonight (Thursday). It is also planned to open an extensive membership drive to obtain additional funds.

Permission to use the former ski and toboggan slide-sites on Mt. Mezauba on the Waller property is still in matter to be settled, and it is possible a new site will have to be prepared.

opportunity to retreat in kind, in addition to this there was always the chance of a swift raid on the men who had filled their homestead rights in the valley.

As a consequence Harris had taken every possible precaution. The full force of Three Bar hands had been kept on the pay roll instead of being let off immediately after the beef was shipped. These riders were stationed in line camps out on the range, their sensible purpose being to hold all Three Bar cows close to the home ranch but in reality they served two ends, acting as a cordon of guards as well.

Three times in as many weeks strangers drifting in from other localities stopped in Coldriver and profusely reported the fact that for no reason whatever, while passing through the Three Bar range, they had been held up and forced to state their business in that neighborhood.

Hostilities had ceased. The Three Bar girl had anticipated a series of raids against the cows wearing her brand, swift forays in isolated points of her range, but no stock losses were reported. On the surface it appeared that Slade had given up all thought of harassing the Three Bar. But the girl had come to know Slade. He would never recede from his former stand. She noted that Harris' vigilance was never for an instant relaxed and it was gradually impressed upon her that the cessation of petty annoyances held more of menace than of assurance. Slade had seen that the Three Bar was not to be discouraged in its course and he now waited for an opportunity to launch a blow that would cripple, striking simultaneously at every exposed point and delaying only for a propitious time. In the face of continued impunity she was filled with a growing conviction of impending trouble.

Christmas had found the range covered with a fresh tracking snow which precluded possibility of a raid and all hands had been summoned to the home ranch for a two day rest. The frolic was over and the hands back on the range. Harris sat with Billie before her fire.

"They'll be satisfied for another two months," he said. "Then we'll have to call them in for another spree."

This evening conference before the fire had come to be a nightly occurrence. Together they went over the details of the work accomplished during the day and napped out those for the next.

"Another two months and the cabins will be roofed and finished," Harris said. "Then we'll be through till the frost is out of the ground. We'll start building fence as soon as you can sink a post hole; and we'll have time to break out another two hundred acres of ground before time to seed it down."

The girl nodded without comment, content to leave him to his thoughts, her mind pleasantly occupied with her own. For long her evenings had been lonely but now she had come to look forward to the conferences before the blazing logs. She had made no attempt to analyze the reasons for the new contentment which had transformed her evenings, formerly periods of drab reflection, into the most pleasant portion of each day.

The weekly letters still came from Donna. The girl valued Harris as a friend and partner without apparent trace of more.

It wondered which would prevail, the ties which bound her to the life she had always known or the lure of the new life which beckoned.

Suddenly, without having sought it, the explanation of her recent contentment bubbled to the surface of the girl's consciousness, and she turned and gazed at Harris. Night after night she had sat here with old Cal Warren and discussed the details of their work and after his passing her evenings had been hours of restlessness. Now Harris, the partner, had crept into the father's place—had in a measure filled the void.

Harris rose and flicked the ash from his cigarette, suppressing the desire to take her in his arms, for he knew that time had not yet come. As he opened the door to leave an eddy of warm air of the room battled on the threshold with the thirty-below temperature of the outside world. She heard the hissing crunch of his boots on the frozen crust—and reached for Donna's Christmas letter to reread it for the fourth time.

During the night a chinook poured its warm breath over the hills and morning found the snow crumbling before it.

Billie rode with Harris through the lower field as he pointed out the various fence lines and the lay of the ditches and latents which would carry water to irrigate the meadow, all these to be installed as soon as winter should lose its grip.

As Harris outlined his plans his words were tinged with optimism and he allowed no hint of possible disaster to creep into his speech. But the girl was conscious of that hovering uncertainty, the feeling that the months of peace were but to lure her into a false sense of security and that Slade would pounce on the Three Bar from all angles at once whenever the time was right.

She found some consolation in the fact that Lang's men no longer rode through her range at will, but skirted it in their trips to and from the Breaks. She attributed this solely to Harris' precautions, in the matter of outguards, for of all those within a hundred miles she was perhaps the single one who had not heard of the sinister rumor that was cutting Lang and his men off from the rest of the world.

Men were discussing it wherever they met; in Coldriver they were speculating on the possible results, the same in the railroad towns; across the Idaho line and south into Utah it was the topic of the day. And the sludge pattern of Billie's store found the same question uppermost in his mind.

Carson, one of the many who were neither wholly good nor hopelessly bad, one who had drifted with the easy current of the middle course, and he was wondering if that middle course would continue to prove safe. His horse and saddle had been lost in a stud-poker game just prior to his catching the stage to Billie's, where his credit had always been good. He rose, stretched and accosted Billie.

"Put me down for a quart," he said.

"Whenever you put down the cash," Billie returned.

"What's the matter with my credit?" Carson demanded. "I've always paid."

Billie reached for a book, opened it and slid it onto the bar. He flipped the pages and indicated a number of accounts ruled off with red ink.

"So did Harper," he said. "He always paid; and Canfield—and Magill; these others, too. Their credit was good but they've all gone somewhere I can't follow to collect. And they was owing me." He tapped a double account. "Bangs was into me a little. Old Rile paid up for him and then got it in his turn—with his name down for a hundred on my books. Harris and Billie Warren paid up for Rile. Now just whoever do you surmise will pay up for you?"

"Me?" Carson inquired. "Why, I ain't dead. I'm clear alive."

"So was I, when I charged those accounts," Billie said. "But it looks like stormy days ahead. I sell for cash."

"I'm not on this death list, if that's what you're referring to," Carson announced.

"But it's easy to get enrolled," Billie said. "Your name's liable to show up on it any time. Seen Lang in the last few days?"

"Not in the last few months," Carson stated. "Nor yet in the next few years. He's no friend of mine."

"I sort of remember you, said to be right comradely," Billie remarked.

"That's before I really knowed Lang intimate," Carson said. "He didn't strike me as such a bad sort at first, but now he's going too strong. Folks are getting plum down on him."

Billie used to be friendly and growing apathy about getting their own names on that list," Billie said. "That's what has opened their eyes."

"Maybe so," the thirsty men confessed. "But anyway, I'm through."

"They're all through," Billie said. "A hundred others just like you, scattered here and there. It's come to them recent just what a bad lot Lang is. It's hell what a whisper can do."

"It is when that whisper is backed by a thousand-dollar reward," Carson agreed. "If he really pays up it'll wreck Lang's little snip for sure."

Billie dabbed his cloth at an imaginary spot on the polished slab and nodded without comment.

"I reckon he lunched that scheme because Slade put a price on him first," Carson said.

"I didn't know Slade was into this," Billie stated softly. "There's no proof of that. Not a shred."

"No more than there's any proof that Harris is behind these rewards," Carson said. "But you know that Slade is out to wreck the Three Bar since they've planted squatters there."

The storekeeper failed to respond. "There's a likely dozen men looking for Harris' right now," Carson prophesied.

"But it's hard for one of 'em to get within ten miles of the ranch," Billie observed. "So while they're maybe looking for him, it's right difficult to get him that far off."

"I don't mind admitting that I'm for Harris—as against Slade," Carson said.

"Just between us two I don't mind confessing that I'm neutral—as against everything else," Billie returned.

"Now you know how I'm lined up. Do I get that quart?" Carson urged. "I know now you was lined up months back," Billie turned on a dry smile.

"I ain't told a soul till right now," Carson objected. "So how could you know?"

"You didn't need to tell. As soon as that rumor leaked out it was a cluck where you'd stand. And a hundred others are crowding on to the same foothold along with you."

"And why not?" Carson demanded. "Who wants to get a thousand plastered on his scalp? It would tempt a man's best friends."

"Or scare 'em off," the storekeeper commented. "Which is all the same in the end."

A half dozen men clattered up in front and surged through the door. More arrivals followed as the regular afternoon crowd gathered before the bar. There were many jobless hands drifting from one ranch to the next, "grubbing" on each brand for a week or more at a time during the slack winter months.

Carp entered up alone. Billie lowered one lid and jerked his head toward Carson.

"Broke—and reformed," he said. "Maybe."

Some minutes later Carp bought the thirty men a drink.

"You looking for a job?" he asked. "I can use you down my way."

Carson was well versed in the bends of the devious trail and Carp's ways smacked of irregularities. Carson had ideas of his own why the other man was allowed to start up an outfit down in Slade's range. One day Carp's name would be cited on the black list. As diplomatically as possible he refused the offer of a job.

The storekeeper smiled as he noted this. Carson had turned into a solid citizen almost overnight. As Carp left him and joined another group Billie poured Carson a drink.

"You're a fair risk at that—as long as you stay out here," he remarked. "I'll stake you to a horse and saddle. You can ride the grubline with the rest of the boys till spring and get a job when work opens up." He slid a bottle across the bar. "Here's your quart."

He stood looking after him as Carson moved to a table and motioned several others to join him over the bottle.

"That's about the tenth reformation that's transpired under my eyes in as many days," Billie mused. "Give us time and this community will turn pure and spotless. I don't mind any man's owing me if he stands a fair show to go on living."

The sheriff dropped in for one of his frequent visits to Billie's. He waved all hands to a drink.

"I've just been out to the Three Bar to see Harris," he announced. "And ask him about this news that's been floating about. He came right out flat and says he's not offering a reward. That's all a mistake."

Every man in the room grinned at this statement. There was no other possible reply that Harris could make.

"Of course," the sheriff said reflectively. "Of course there's just a chance that Cal lied to me."

"He lied all right," Carp prophesied. "I'd bet my shirt he'll stand to pay the price for every man that's cited on that list."

"Pshaw," the sheriff deprecated. "That's dead against the law, that is."

"He will do it," Carson predicted. "If I was on that list I'd be moving for somewhere a long ways remote from here."

"Then you'd better be starting," Alden counseled mildly. "For Harris was just telling me that your name had got mixed up with it. Morrow's name has sprung up, too. Cal seemed mystified as to how it had come about, for he says you and Morrow never rode with the others on the list. He couldn't figure how this thing came to start."

"Figure?" Carp snapped. "He figured it out himself, who else? Are you going to stand for his putting a price on every man he happens to dislike?"

"But he says he don't know any more about it," the sheriff said.

"So now can I prove he does? I'd like to know for sure. If I thought he was actually set to pay those rewards I'd have to ride over and remonstrate with Cal."

One or two who had been drinking with Carp moved over to speak with others and failed to return. He was left standing alone at the bar. He shrugged his shoulders and went out.

"Folks are considerable like sleep," Billie observed. It occurred to him that in every saloon and in every break house within a hundred miles the topic of conversation was the same.

He lowered one lid as he looked at the sheriff and jerked his head toward Carson.

"He's broke—and reformed," he said. "Absolutely."

The sheriff drew Carson aside.

"If you're wanting a job I'll stake you to an outfit and feed you through till spring. For a month from then on, I'll need a parcel of deputies, likely, after that."

"You've got me," Carson stated. "I'll sign now."

The storekeeper, the sheriff and the new deputy stood at one end of the bar.

"It's queer that folks don't see the great subject of this rumor," Billie observed.

"It's object is to clean out the hardest citizens in the country," Carson said. "That's why they're named. Why else?"

"The object is to clean up the rest of the country first," Billie said.

Carson grunted his dissent. "If Harris only wanted to wipe out those on the list he wouldn't go to all this fuss," Billie explained. "He'd just put on an extra bunch of hands and raid the Breaks himself. Swear he caught them running off a bunch of Three Bar cows. Simpler and considerable less expense."

"Then what's the object of this bounty?" Carson insisted.

"That's aimed at the doubtful folks," Billie stated. "Folks that was on the fence—like you. This death list makes them spooky and they turn into good little citizens in the round of the clock. It leaves the worst ones outside without a friend. Every one lined up solid behind the law. Public sentiment will start running strong against those outside. Then it'll be easy for the sheriff and a bunch of deputies—like you—to clean the country up from end to end, with the whole community backing your play."

Carson considered this for some time.

"Well, I can furnish the deputies," he said at last. "Boys that are strong for law and order from first to last."

"I've got about all I need," the sheriff said. "A dozen or so. Mostly old friends of yours. I've picked 'em up on and off in the last two weeks. They're strong for upholding the last letter of the law—just like you said."

"A dozen?" Carson asked. "How'll you raise the money to pay that many out once?"

"I'm sort of expecting maybe the Three Bar will make up the deficit," Alden said. "It's cheaper than paying rewards. That's another reason I don't think Cal had a hand in this blacklist report."

The storekeeper grinned.

"Surely not. Surely not. I'd never suspect him of that," he said. "But all the same it's working just as well as if he really had."

The first warm days of spring had drawn the frost from the ground. Billie rode beside Harris down the lane to the lower field. A tiny cabin stood completed on every filing. Two men were digging post holes across the valley below the edge of the last fall's plowing and the mule teams were steadily breaking out another strip.

"Almost a year," she said, referring to the commencement of the new work.

"Just a year today," Harris corrected, and he was thinking of the day he had first met the Three Bar girl. "This is our anniversary, sort of."

She nodded as she caught his meaning.

"The anniversary of our partnership," she said. "You told me there were millions of miles of sage just outside. And millions of cows—and girls."

"Later I told you something else," he said. "And I've been meaning it ever since. The road to the outside is closed. If I was to start now I'd lose the way."

She pointed down the valley as a drove of horses moved toward them under the guidance of a dozen men.

He reminded the following day. The spring work was on.

"Off to a running start on another year," he said. "And sure to hold our lead. From today on out, you and I'll be a busy pair," he prophesied.

His prediction proved true. The Three Bar was a beehive of activity and it seemed that the hours between dawn and dark were all too short for the amount of work Harris wished to crowd into them.

The cowhands were breaking out the horses in the corrals while the acreage of plowed land in the lower fields steadily increased.

The day that Evans led the men out on the calf round-up, the mule teams made their first trip across the plowed land with the drill.

The fields were being seeded to alfalfa and oats so that the faster growing grain might shade and protect the tender shoots of hay. Before the grain ripened it would be cut green for hay, cured and stacked.

Early rains had moistened the fields and they were faintly green with tiny shoots of oats. These thickened into a rank velvety carpet while the homesteaders were hauling a hundred loads of rocks to form a crude dam across the stream below the take-out. The water was gradually raised till it ran almost flush with the top of the head gate. The gates were lifted and the diverted waters sped smoothly down the new channel in carry life to a portion of the sugarcrush desert.

MRS. ELMER INGALLS BURIED LAST MONDAY

Service Held at Lake Home With Interment at East Jordan

Nettie Julia Ross was born in Lexington, Michigan, April 19, 1872, and passed away at the Charlevoix Hospital Friday, December 14.

Her maternal grandfather came to this country from the Scottish highlands, and eventually settled on one of Michigan's earliest homesteads. Her mother, Annette Phillips, was educated in Boston and at the age of fourteen came with her parents to Michigan, where she later became the wife of Henry W. Ross.

After graduating from high school and normal schools, Miss Ross taught for eight years in the schools of Sanilac county, Michigan.

October 15, 1900 she was united in marriage to James R. Colden, V. S., of Avoca, Michigan, and with him came to East Jordan, where they made their home on the Lake Shore Drive, north of town.

Dr. Colden passed away December 3, 1922, aged 56 years, following a long illness.

To this union were born seven children, the oldest and youngest dying in infancy. Those surviving are Inez (Mrs. Edward Metz) of Chicago; Doris and Helen of East Jordan; Annie of Johannesburg, and James Jr., of Charlevoix. Also one sister, Miss Florence Ross of Lexington, Michigan.

On November 26, 1927, Mrs. Colden was united in marriage to Elmer Ingalls of Charlevoix, where she lived until claimed by death.

Funeral services, conducted by Rev. B. G. Mattson, pastor of the Charlevoix Congregational church, were held from her late home on Monday, December 17th, with burial at Lakeside cemetery, near East Jordan.

Her home was her castle, all other interests being subservient to those of her family. Her many sterling qualities are reflected in the lives of her children as the result of her unremitting care and training. Truly "they shall rise up and call her blessed."—Charlevoix County Herald.

FUTURE WARDENS TO PASS EXAMINATIONS

Civil Service Exam. is Favored by Conservation Dept.

In the future prospective employees of the department of conservation must meet certain requirements imposed by the commission. The civil service plan is to be followed as the result of recommendations made to the commission by Director George R. Hogarth.

Director Hogarth has studied the situation for several months and has arrived at the conclusion that some step must be taken to improve the personnel of the field organization.

"After a careful study of our field organization over a 22 month period," Director Hogarth told the commission, "I am convinced that some radical changes must be made in the personnel; and above all, a new policy must be adopted as to manner of selecting our field workers."

The recommendation was immediately approved by the commission. He at once appointed a personnel committee that consisted of the director of conservation, and the chief forest fire warden, the chief conservation officer and the chief of the division in which the vacancy may exist. This group will carefully examine all properly qualified applicants for position in the field force.

Some of the general requirements are that the applicant shall be at least 25 years of age and not over 50; that his physical condition must be such as to permit him to carry out the duties of his position; that he be of good character and his social standing in the community be unquestioned; that his training be such as to equip him for the work and that preference be given those who have previously served the department in a satisfactory manner. The applicant will be required to appear before the examining board and shall be willing to be stationed wherever the board may designate.

$50.00 PRIZES TO BEST TEN PICKLE GROWERS

Charlevoix Pickle & Produce Co. Mail Out Awards.

The Charlevoix Pickle & Produce company has just made the annual prize awards to the ten best pickle growers of the past season of 1928. Cheeks totalling $50.00, as offered in prizes, were mailed to reach the winners at this appropriate Christmas time—on Monday, December 24th.

The following ten growers secured the highest cash yields on an acre basis, and are the prize winners this year:

Yield on Acre Basis	Name	Prize
$331.45	Joe Hoffman	$15
$284.72	S. Bystron	$10
$276.55	John Hoffman	$5
$256.68	John Triplett	$5
$214.48	Wm. Shaw	$3
$192.50	Oscar Krusell	$3
$181.66	Paul Venstron	$3
$173.44	Thos. Finety	$2
$167.94	James Houts	$2
$166.98	Chas. Zitka	$2

From a total of 382 contracted growers at the stations of Atwood, Charlevoix, Horton Bay and Petoskey this year, many very fine cash yields were secured. A great many of the yields went over $100 per acre and numerous growers held places very close to the prize winners above.

Farmers having had this crop benefited in numerous ways, such as guaranteed contract prices, free seed, spot cash pay, a sure market, etc. And the cash came in handy during August and September when other crops were still unsold. All told, it pays to grow pickles as one of the regular farm crops year after year.

This firm of builders has a contract for more than a mile of 20 ft. cement road to construct early in the spring. The road through Boyne Falls has been very much improved as well as straightened. No. 75 will also be improved by filling in some twenty feet of the mill pond and the highway in front of the power house will be widened which will much improve conditions.—Boyne Citizen.

KONJOLA RESTORED HIS HEALTH AFTER ALL ELSE FAILED

Pere Marquette Employee Was in Rundown Condition—Lauds New Medicine for Its Restorative Powers.

MR. CHARLES SLEEMAN

Those who have lost faith in medicines; who fear there is no help in sight; who may be tempted to give up, are asked to learn about Konjola, that is winning victory upon victory over the most obstinate cases. Take that of Mr. Charles E. Sleeman, well known Pere Marquette employee of R. R. No. 10, Grand Rapids, for instance:

"Every medicine I tried had failed to give the slightest relief," he writes. "No wonder I had lost faith in all of them. But Konjola brought me the most wonderful surprise of my life. I suffered with pneumonia, and though I combated this disease, I was in a terrible condition when I was able to get out of bed. Then the sciatic nerve became affected. I was just about to give up completely when I was prevailed upon to try Konjola. Three bottles did the work. Headaches disappeared, my bowels began to function normally and I was better in every way. Soon strength returned, and I was able to get back on the job. When I think that one medicine made a real man from a complete wreck in such a short time, I am lost in amazement. Surely the person who called Konjola the master medicine knew what he was talking about."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

FORMER LOCAL GIRL MARRIED IN SAGINAW

Ceremony Performed at Parents' Home Last Wednesday.

The following account of the marriage of Miss Flora Dutton, granddaughter of Mrs. C. R. Bellinger of this city, taken from the Saginaw Daily News, will be of interest to Charlevoix citizens:

"Miss Flora Avis Dutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Dutton, 223 South Porter street, and Paul E. Jaquish of Saginaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jaquish, Madison, Wis., were married at 6:00 o'clock Wednesday evening in a pretty ceremony that was performed by Rev. Frank C. Waters of Ames church before 30 guests at the home of the bride's parents.

"The ceremony was performed before a bay window that was banked with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums. Before the marriage, Mrs. F. A. Schuler of Muskegon, an aunt of the bride, played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Miss Dutton was attractively gowned in white georgette and taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice and a full skirt of the georgette with ruffles of taffeta. The dress had an even hemline with taffeta scalloping. Miss Dutton wore a bridal veil of white with a cap fastened with orange blossoms in a wreath. She carried a bouquet of white roses and baby breath.

Attending the bride was Miss Charlotte Bowman, who wore orchid crepe and carried roses and snapdragons. Harold Smith acted as best man.

"A wedding dinner was served after the ceremony, white and yellow chrysanthemums being used for table decorations.

"After the dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Jaquish left for Madison, Wis. They will be at home after January 15 at 223 South Porter street.

"Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding was the bride's grandmother, Mrs. C. R. Bellinger of Charlevoix and Mrs. Schuler of Muskegon."

POLAR BEARS WIN ONE AND LOSE ONE

DEFEATED BY SAGINAW TRIANGLES FIVE LAST FRIDAY.

Win 25 to 24 From Midland Monday Night in Fast and Exciting Contest.

The Charlevoix Polar Bears broke even over the week end in their two games with down-state professional teams. They felt defeat for the first time this season Friday evening, when beaten 32 to 22 by the Saginaw Triangles. The second contest, the fastest seen on the local court this season, was a one-point victory for the Polar Bears over the Man-Shop Athletic club team of Midland.

Charlevoix's inability to make good their chances for baskets was the biggest factor in their defeat by the Saginaw five. They outplayed and out-scored the visiting teams during the early part of the first quarter and led nearly to the end of the period, when the advantage changed to the Triangles and the quarter ended with the score 9 and 8.

The second quarter was a walk-away for the Triangles and ended with the score 22 to 10 in their favor. Charlevoix's defense tightened and held the visitors to a few markers in the third quarter and although they outplayed Saginaw in the final period, they were unable to overcome the lead against them.

Charlevoix showed their sportsmanship by allowing three of the Saginaw players to remain on the court after four personal fouls had been called against them.

The game Monday evening with Midland was a Charlevoix victory by a 25 to 24 score. It was the fastest contest seen on the local court so far this season and marked a great improvement in the team play of the local five.

The Polar Bears had an advantage of 2 points at the end of the first quarter, the score being 5 to 3. The period was marked by the close defensive work of both teams. Midland outplayed Charlevoix in the second quarter, scoring 8 points to 3 for the local team and the half ended with the visitors leading 11 to 8.

Two field goals by Ikens, who replaced Gimble at left forward, started a scoring spree which put the Polar Bears far in the lead when the third period closed. The final stanza, however, nearly proved disastrous for the Polar Bears when Midland took advantage of a lull in activities and scored three field goals and a free throw to come within one point of tying the count. Two of the field goals were long shots from center court. The final whistle sounded with Charlevoix leading by one point.

Kipke was high score man for the Polar Bears with 8 points, and was a bulwark of the team's defense. His close guarding hurried the Midland forwards at all times and his floor work brought the crowd to their feet repeatedly. Todd scored 6 points for the Polar Bears, Davenport 5 and Ikens 4. Langley, Midland right forward, scored 13 points for the visitors.

92 YEAR OLD MAN PLAYS SANTA AT TRAVERSE CITY

Traverse City's first Santa Claus, now 92 years old, very aptly played that role again at the First Congregational church this year. He is Alec Mason, a pioneer resident, now residing with his daughter, Mrs. A. L. VanNatter, on Second street.

He is a good Santa Claus. He needs no make-up, having long white whiskers, jolly disposition and all. But he can recall when he did need make-up, and that was 65 years ago when he distributed gifts in the little school where Traverse City celebrated its first community Christmas.

NEW CHEVROLET SIX IS ON DISPLAY HERE

Charlevoix Auto Sales Showing New 1929 Models.

The initial showing in Charlevoix of the new 1929 model Chevrolet Six was made Saturday at the Charlevoix Auto Sales garage on Antrim street. Great interest is being shown locally in the new General Motors product and many people have already seen the car.

Showings were made earlier in the month in a few of the larger cities of the country, but not until Saturday had the public in other communities been given an opportunity to satisfy their curiosity. The local agency has one model, the coach, on display. Other models are the roadster, phaeton, convertible landau, coupe, sedan and sport cabriolet.

Other new features in addition to the six-cylinder vlv-in-head motor include longer bodies finished in various new colors, new type four-wheel brakes, foot control dimming device and adjustable driver's seat. Among the mechanical features are the gasoline pump and filter, heavier transmission and rear axle, advanced combustion chamber design, force oil feed and a high speed gear ratio, 3.8 to 1.

RED AND WHITE TRIM PELLSTON

WON FRIDAY EVENING CONTEST BY 36-24 SCORE.

First After-Holiday Game on East Jordan Court Next Tuesday Evening.

Charlevoix high school basketballers marked up a game on the blue side of the book last Friday evening by defeating Pellston high school at Pellston 36 to 24. Stewart Coleman accompanied the team in the absence of Coach Kipke, who was in Lansing for the holidays.

Only once in the contest did Pellston have the lead. After Max Novak gave his team their first counter in the opening moments of the game, the Red and White had the upper hand from then on with the exception of once in the opening period when Pellston led 6 to 5. Charlevoix had the advantage at the end of the quarter, however, with the score 9 to 6.

From the opening of the second period on, it was Charlevoix's game. The home team led 17 to 10 at the half, 24 to 14 at the close of the third period and 36 to 24 at the final whistle. Coleman used several substitutes during the last quarter.

Bill Novak was high score man for Charlevoix with a total of 11 points. Max Novak and Dick Marshall shared second honors with 7 each. Warner, Pellston forward, was high point man for his team with a total of 8.

GEER-ALLERS NUPTIALS HERE MONDAY EVENING

Couple Will Reside Here Following Wedding Trip

A pretty wedding was solemnized at 8 o'clock Monday evening at the Methodist parsonage when Rev. John E. Lockyer read the marriage service for Miss Hazel Geer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Geer of this city, and Leroy Allers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allers of Beaver Island.

The young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gebeau. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Allers left on an extended trip to Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, South Haven and other points in southern Michigan. Upon their return they will reside in Charlevoix.

Blue Sunoco gas sales in Charlevoix increased 123 per cent in 1928 over 1927. Sunoco motor oil sales increased 100 per cent. This was not due to extensive advertising, but to repeat business from satisfied drivers. Try this perfect winter fuel and oil at no premium price. Sunoco Oil Station.—Adv. 112.

BELOVED CITIZEN CALLED BY DEATH

MRS. JONE DURANCE VICTIM OF HEART ATTACK SATURDAY

Funeral Service at Family Home Friday with Rev. H. R. E. Quant, Grand Rapids, Officiating

Charlevoix residents were greatly shocked to learn of the sudden death of one of the city's beloved citizens, Mrs. Jone Durance, who succumbed to heart attack at her home on Petoskey avenue Saturday evening, December 29. She had apparently been in good health and had just returned from a down-town shopping trip when death took her.

Lulu Olive Carter was born in Frankfort, Michigan, January 19, 1872, and was 56 years, 11 months and 10 days old at the time of death. At the age of fourteen, she moved to Charlevoix with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Carter. She graduated from the local high school and taught school in this vicinity for several years before her marriage to Jone Durance some thirty-seven years ago.

Deceased is survived by her husband, also three sons and two daughters, viz: Clarence of Seattle, Wash.; Ned of Flint, Mich.; Percy of Charlevoix; Mrs. Charles Leachman of South Haven and Mrs. Frank Jones of Frankfort. There is also a sister, Mrs. George Hass of Washington Island, Wis., and eleven grandchildren.

Mrs. Durance was a member of the local Methodist church and the Rebekah lodge. Her life was a model one, she being the embodiment of sympathy, love and self-sacrificing charity. She was an ardent church worker and had been identified with the activities of the Methodist church for many years. She was a consistent christian, a loving wife and mother, and will be missed by a large circle of sorrowing friends, to whom she had endeared herself by her loving ways.

Funeral services will be held from the family home on Petoskey avenue Friday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Rev. John E. Lockyer officiating, assisted by Rev. H. R. E. Quant of Grand Rapids, former pastor of the local Methodist church, officiating. Interment will be at Brookside, with Rebekah rites at the grave.

NEW R. F. D. SERVICE JANUARY 1

STAR ROUTE BETWEEN BOYNE CITY AND EAST JORDAN.

Contract for Carrying Mail Awarded to Frank E. Crowell of East Jordan.

Star Route service between East Jordan and Boyne City has been granted by the postoffice department through the efforts of Hon. Frank P. Bohn, our congressman, says the East Jordan Herald.

The contract has been awarded to Frank E. Crowell, of East Jordan. Service is to begin January 1, 1929. The mail will leave East Jordan daily except Sunday at 9:30 a. m. Arrive at Boyne City daily, except Sunday, by 10:30 a. m. Leave Boyne City daily, except Sunday, at 10:45 a. m. Arrive at East Jordan daily, except Sunday, by 11:45 a. m.

Only firstclass mail, special handling, special delivery parcel post and newspaper mail will be transported over this route.

East Jordan has similar mail service now which was established Oct. 25, 1924. The mail now leaves the office at 7:30 a. m., every morning except Sunday with Carrier Arthur Hill who leaves the pouch in the large box at Afton for Carrier Theodore Ecker of Boyne City, who is due at Boyne City about 10:00 a. m.

The mail for East Jordan leaves Boyne City at 7:15 with Carrier Theodore Ecker, who he delivers to the mail box at Advance for Carrier Irm S. Foote from East Jordan.

This is excellent mail service for East Jordan and Boyne City while the carriers could operate with automobiles, but when they are obliged to travel with horse-drawn vehicles, East Jordan could only dispatch mail for Boyne City because carriers arrived too late for the train which leaves Boyne City at 11:15.

The new Star route which begins January 1st will be a big improvement in mail service for East Jordan, because mail leaves the office two hours later and will bring daily newspapers here with the noon mail.

Your mail for this route should be in the postoffice at East Jordan not later than 9:10 a. m.

YOUNG LAD DROWNS WHEN ICE GIVES AWAY

First Skating Fatality Takes Place on Clam Lake.

Billy Dewey, fourteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Dewey, was drowned in Clam lake Sunday morning while skating. He was alone and ran into a patch of thin ice which broke, letting him fall into about 21 feet of water. His cries for help were heard by Wm. Rigler, who hastened to the place where the lad fell through, but the body had sunk when he reached there. The lad made desperate efforts to climb out, but the thin ice broke through at the edge each time he grasped it.

Mr. Rigler summoned help and the body was recovered after an hour's search by a party of neighbors. Dr. Miller of Reed City, was called and worked over the boy for quite a while but all efforts to resuscitate him failed. Billy, who was the eldest child, was in the eighth grade in school and was well liked by all who knew him. The lad was a constant chum and pal of his father, and Mr. Dewey is badly shaken up by the tragedy.—Mancelona Herald.

FEW CHANGES IN COUNTY OFFICIALS

NEW PROSECUTOR AND ROAD COMMISSIONER TAKE OFFICE

Rollie L. Lewis Succeeds A. L. Fitch. Frank Wangeman is New Commissioner.

The new year will barely change the official face of Charlevoix county though it is time when terms of office end and the new terms begin.

Two changes were made Wednesday, the official opening of routine business for the year 1929. Frank Wangeman of Eveline township, well known and active worker in county affairs, succeeds Frank Thompson of Boyne City as a member of the Charlevoix county road commission.

Rollie L. Lewis, Charlevoix attorney, officially takes over the office of prosecuting attorney for the second time, having formerly served from 1915 to 1919. He succeeds A. L. Fitch, who retires after two terms in office. Mr. Fitch is now grand chancellor of the Michigan Pythian grand lodge and will confine himself to the duties of this office and his law practice in Charlevoix. Mr. Lewis has been acting prosecutor for several weeks and had already moved into the office.

County Clerk George E. Roderick, County Treasurer Joseph Wm. Flanders, Probate Judge S. A. Correll, Sheriff Dave Vaughan and Frank F. Bird, register of deeds, were re-elected to office at the November election.

We note from the Tuesday issue of the Grand Rapids Herald that Joseph Sanford, son of Capt. and Mrs. James Sanford of this city, took over the office of prosecuting attorney of Muskegon county Wednesday. "Joe" is a graduate of the local high school and Notre Dame university.

MICHIGAN HAS VERY GOOD YEAR

BOTH INDUSTRY AND FARMING HAVE PROSPERED.

Potato Grower About Only One Hit By Low Prices—Season Best of Many.

While the larger Michigan cities were spurring rapidly ahead, or cementing their positions of leadership, rural and urban Michigan generally strengthened its economic position during 1928 and is highly hopeful of a "boom" in 1929, a United Press survey shows.

Oil gushing already at the rate of $2,800 a day from several wells near Muskegon, with abundant natural gas, has brought great hope to land owners of the northern peninsula.

Have Steady Work.

The smaller Michigan community factories did not show as great a numerical increase in employment as many of the larger cities. Most of them worked far more steadily throughout 1928, than the preceding year, and nearly all were operating above normal with the start of the new year.

The economic condition of fruit growers never was on a higher plane, Fred L. Granger, president of the Michigan Fruit, Inc., said. The state cherry orchards, for instance, swept into first place in production, outstripping New York and Wisconsin for the first time.

Potato Growers Hit.

The potato situation has been the most grave one of all. The yield was extra large and the quality fine, but prices would not pay for fertilizer, growers reported. Many of the growers are holding their crop and planning to curtail this year's growth from thirty to fifty per cent.

Most of the large shipping cities prospered during 1928, and are laying plans to take advantage of the greater St. Lawrence waterways, when and if that project is completed. Shipping through the Canadian and American canals at the Soo showed a healthy increase.

Tourist trade reached a new peak, and so great was the traffic to the rapidly improving roads of the upper peninsula from the south, that a third ferry across the Straits of Mackinac was needed, and talk started of building a bridge.

LICENSE PLATES MUST BE VISIBLE

Strict Enforcement of State Regulation is Required.

With the sale of the 1929 automobile license plates under way here, attention is called to the state law requiring that plates be attached to a motor vehicle in such a way that they can be easily read.

The following section of the motor vehicle law gives the requirements:

"No person shall operate a motor vehicle on the public highways of this state under license plates other than those issued for it by the secretary of state, except as is provided in this act for non-residents. The front license plate shall be rigidly attached in the center and in front of the motor enclosure above and parallel to the axle in such a position that the visibility of same is in no way obscured.

"The rear license plate shall be rigidly attached in a conspicuous position, parallel with the axle, and either in the center or to the left of the center in such a position that the visibility of same is in no way obscured.

License plates shall not be covered, obscured, bent, altered or defaced in any manner and shall be kept free of dirt or other substances likely to impair their legibility. Trailers need display but one registration plate attached in the rear as provided herein. Motorcycles shall conspicuously display one rear license plate."

The penalty for the first violation of this law is a fine of $25.00 and costs, or imprisonment for 10 days.

AT THE MOVIES
Remarkable Boy Actor Lists Accomplishments

One of the most remarkable young actors in Hollywood portrays the role of Jack Holt as a boy, in "Avalanche," Zane Grey's drama, which will show at the Palace theatre next Saturday and Sunday.
The actor is Dick Winslow, 12 years old. He has been in motion pictures five years. He plays a dozen musical instruments including the pipe organ, piano, accordion, ukulele, drums, traps, marimba and saxophone. He has played on the KJLJ radio program weekly for a year. He has interviewed most of Los Angeles' visiting celebrities during the last seven years. He has sold a story to Collier's. He is a first class infielder for a youngster and is a good hitter.

According to Otto Brower, who directed "Avalanche," young Winslow is also a very good actor.

In addition to Jack Holt, who portrays the role of the square-shooting gambler, the featured players include Baclanova, the Russian actress, and Doris Hill.

Cody and Pringle Reunited for "Beau Broadway"

Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle renew their screen partnership in "Beau Broadway," coming to the Palace theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, the first of a new series of comedy-dramas in which this inimitable team are to be co-starred by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In their new film triumph the superb cinema farceurs reach new heights and bring to the screen a sparkling story that glitters with the high spots of the New York sporting world.

Cody, as a man-about-town and fight promoter, is seen in a role capably tailored to his histrionic talents, and Miss Pringle, as the woman who "understands" him is admirably cast in a part that displays her versatility to utmost advantage.

Evidences of the approaching winter sports season became more apparent this week as workers started icing the community skating rink on the school grounds.

The regular weekly half holiday for winter sports goes into effect next Thursday, January 10th. Winter sports will be an important subject of discussion at the Association of Commerce meeting tonight (Thursday) and full program details will likely soon be announced.

As the tangible results of the work became more apparent Harris' vigilance increased. There was now more than plowed ground to work on; crops to be trampled at a time when they would not lift again to permit of mowing; fences to be wrecked so that range stock might have free access to the fields. A single night could upset the work of many months. But as he stood with Billie at the mouth of the lane he allowed none of his thoughts to be reflected in his speech. Billie Warren half-closed her eyes and viewed the broad expanse of rippling green in the bottom. How many times she had stood here in the past with old Cal Warren while he visioned this very picture which now unrolled before her eyes in reality; the transformation of the Three Bar flat from a desert waste to a scene of abundant fertility under the reclaiming touch of water.

It was a quiet picture of farm life if one looked only upon the blooming fields and took no account of the raw, barren foothills that flanked them—the giant, towering range behind. She found it difficult to link the scene before her with the devilry of a few months past. The killing of Bangs and the Foster's consequent grim retaliation; the raid on Three Bar bulls and the stampede of her trail herd; all these seemed part of some life so far away.

No man in the field ever strayed far from the title which was part of his equipment. But even this was an evidence of vigilance which had met her eye every day for months and had ceased to press.

They walked to the near edge of the field and Harris dropped a hand on her shoulder and stood looking down at her.

"Billie, don't you think it's about time you were finding out what Judge Colton wants?" he asked. "He's been right insistent on your going back to confer with him."

The girl shook her head positively. Two months before Judge Colton had written that she must advise with her on matters of importance and suggested that she come on at once. Harris had urged her to go and almost daily referred to it.

"I can't go now," she said. "Not till I've seen one whole season through. When the first Three Bar crop is cut and I'm stuck I'll go. All other business must wait till then. You two can't drive me away till after I see that first crop in the stack."

"If you'd go now you'd likely get back before we're through cutting," he urged. "And the judge has written twice in the last two weeks."

Before she could answer this a horseman appeared on the valley road. The furthest irrigator, merely a speck in the distance, exchanged shovel for rifle and crossed to the fence. The rider, as if expecting some such move, pulled up his horse and approached at a walk.

Harris saw the two confer. The horseman handed some object to the other and urged his horse on toward the house. He was one of the sheriff's deputies. He grinned as he tapped his empty holster.

"One of your watchdogs lifted my gun," he said. He handed Harris a note.

After reading it Harris looked at his watch and snapped it shut, glanced at the sinking sun and turned to the girl.

"I have to make a little jaunt," he explained. "Alden wants to see me. I'll take Waddles along. As we go down I'll send Russ or Tiny up to look for the rest."

The deputy turned his horse into the corral and five minutes later Harris and Waddles rode away. Waddles was mounted on Creamer, the big buckskin.

"We'll have to stop right along," Harris said. "It's forty miles."

They held the horses to a stiff swinging trot that devoured the miles without seeming to tire their mounts. For four hours they headed south and a little east, never slackening their pace except to break the horses on some steep ascent. The buckskin and the paint horse had lost the first snap of their trot and it was evident that they would soon begin to lag. Another hour and they had slowed down perceptibly.

The two men dismounted and tied the horses to the brush in a sheltered corner, then started across a broad flat on foot. Out in the center a spot showed darker than the rest—the old cabin where Carpenter had elected to start up for himself after being discharged from the Three Bar.

When within a hundred yards of the cabin a horse, tied to a hitch post in front, neighed shrilly and Harris laid a restraining hand on Waddles' arm. They knelt in the brush as the door opened and a man stood silhouetted against the light. After a space of two minutes Carp's voice reached them.

"Not a sound anywhere," he said. "Likely some horses drifting past." He went inside and closed the door. The two men crept the cabin and came up from the rear. A window stood open some eight inches from the bottom. Through the holes in the ragged flour sack that served as a curtain Harris secured a view of the inside. Carp and Slade sat facing across a little table in the center of the room.

"I want to clean up and go," Carp was saying. "This d—n Harris put me on the black list."

"You've been on it for three months," Slade said. "Nothing has happened yet. But don't let me keep you from pulling out any time you like."

"But I've got a settlement to make," Carp insisted. "Let's get that fixed up."

"Settlement?" Slade asked. "Settlement with who?"

Carp leaned across the table and tapped it to emphasize his remarks.

"Listen. Morrow gave me a bill of sale from you calling for a hundred head of Three Bar she-stock, rebranded Triangle on the hip."

Slade nodded shortly. "I gave Morrow that for two years' back pay when he quit. He could sell out to you if he liked."

"And now I want to sell out," Carp said. "And be gone from here."

"How many head have you got?" Slade asked.

"Three hundred head," Carp stated. "You've increased right fast." Slade remarked. "I'd think you'd want to stay where you was doing so well. How much do you want?"

"Five dollars straight through," Carp said.

"Cheap enough," Slade answered. "If only a man was in the market." He looked straight at Carp and the man's eyes slipped away from Slade's steady gaze.

"But I'm not buying. Likely Morrow will buy you out." Morrow ought to be here now," Carp stated. "He's coming tonight."

"Then I'd better go," Slade said. "I don't like Morrow's ways."

The third of horse's hoofs sounded from close at hand. The two men outside lay flat in the shadow of the house. A shrill whistle, twice repeated, called Carp to his feet and he crossed to the door to answer it. Morrow dismounted and came to the door. He nodded briefly to Slade, hesitating on the sill as if surprised to find him there.

Carp lost no time in stating his proposition. He spoke jerkily. "I want to get out," he said. "I'll sell for five dollars a head."

Morrow held up a hand to silence him. "I'll likely buy—but I never talk business in a crowd." He crossed the room and sat with his back to the window. "There's plenty of time."

"I take it I'm the crowd," Slade remarked. "So I'll step out."

Morrow stiffened suddenly in his chair as a cold ring was pressed against the back of his neck through the crack of the window. At the same instant Carp had tilted back and raised one knee. The gun that rested on his leg was peeping over the table at Slade.

"Steady!" he ordered. "Sit tight!" The window was thrown up to its full height, by Waddles and the curtain snatched away from the gun which Harris held against Morrow's neck. Carp flipped back his vest and revealed a marshal's badge.

"I'd as soon take you along feet first as any way," he said. "So if you feel like acting you can start any time now."

Slade's eyes came back from the door. "So that's it," he said with evident relief. "A real arrest—when I figured it was an old-fashioned murder you had planned. What do you want with me?"

Waddles had reached down and removed Morrow's gun.

"A number of things," Carpenter said. "Constructing the homestead laws for one."

Slade shook his head and smiled. "You've got the wrong party," he said. "You can't prove anything on me."

"I don't count on that," Carp said. "You've covered up right well. We know you work through Morrow but can't prove a word. We've got enough to hang him; but I expect maybe you'll get off."

There was a scrape of feet outside the door and the sheriff entered and took possession of Slade's gun as Harris and Waddles moved round from the window and went inside.

"I'm a few minutes late," Alden said. "I wasn't right sure how close I was to the house so I left my horse too far back."

"Here's your prisoners," Carp said. "Captured and delivered as agreed. I haven't anything on Slade myself but if you want him he's yours."

"What do you want with me?" Slade demanded a second time.

"I'm picking you up on complaint made by the Three Bar," Alden said. "I'll have to take you along."

Slade turned on Harris. "What charge?" he asked.

"Killing twelve Three Bar bulls on the last day of August," Harris stated. "I was out with the ranger," Slade said. "Back in the hills. You know that yourself. That charge won't stick."

"Then maybe it was the second of May," Harris returned. "I sort of forgot."

Slade suddenly grasped the slight curve of this arrest. "How many of you fellows are passing footling round out here?" he inquired of Carp.

"I don't mind confessing that several of the boys are riding for you," Carp informed. "But while we've checked Morrow we haven't been able to trace it back to you. I even got put on the black list, thinking you might do business with me direct after that—knowing my word wouldn't stand against yours. But not you! You've covered your tracks."

Carp spoke softly, as if to himself, detailing his failure to gather conclusive evidence against Slade.

"I even ran your rebound on fifty or so Three Bar cows. You knew there wasn't a dollar changed hands when Morrow gave me that paper which showed me to myself my own she-stock. The idea in my starting up was to run your rebound on any number of Three Bar cows. Later Morrow would buy me out—acting for you; can't be proved. Oh, you're in the clear, all right."

Slade broke in upon the monologue. This recitation of his probable immunity from conviction on every count, far from reassuring him, served to confirm his original suspicion as to the reason for this arrest without witnesses. If the sheriff had wanted him he had but to send word for Slade to come in. He threw out one last line and the answer convinced him beyond all doubt.

"Then a lawyer will have me out in an hour," he predicted.

"A lawyer could," Alden said. "If you save one. But we've decided not to let you have access to legal advice for the first few days."

Slade turned on Carpenter. "This sort of thing is against the law," he said. "You're a United States marshal. How can you go in on a kidnapping deal?"

"I'm not in on it," Carp shrugged. "The sheriff asked me to arrest you at the first opportunity. I've turned you over to him. The rest is his affair. Besides, like I was mentioning, they can't prove a thing on you. As soon as they're convinced of that they'll turn you loose."

The sheriff nodded gravely. "The very day I'm satisfied Harris can't prove his charges I'll throw open the doors. You'll be a free man that minute."

A vision of the near future swept across Slade's mind. If he should be locked up for three months and discharged for lack of evidence it would wreck him as surely as the rumors of the last few months had cut Lang's men off from the rest of the world. Squatters had filed on every available site throughout his range and now waited to see if the Three Bar would win its fight. If the news should be spread that he was locked up these nesters would rush in. On his release he would find them everywhere. With marshals scattered through the ranks of his own men, intent on upholding the homestead laws, he would be helpless to drive them out. If they locked him up at this time he was lost.

He nodded slowly. "Well, I guess you've got me," he said. "I don't see that it will amount to much, anyway. Sooner or later you'll let me out." He raised his arms high above his head and stretched. Under cover of this casual move he swiftly raised one foot.

Slade planted his foot on the edge of the light table and gave a tremendous shove. The far edge caught the sheriff across the legs and overthrew him. The lantern crashed to the floor and at the same instant Morrow aimed a sidewise, sweeping kick at Carpenter's ankles. As the marshal went down his head struck the corner post of a bunk and he did not rise.

With a single sweep Morrow caught the back of his chair and swung it above his head for the spot which Waddles had occupied at the instant the light went out. The weapon splintered in his hands as it found its mark.

Slade leaped for the dim light which indicated the open door. A huge paw clamped on one ankle and a back-handed wrench sent him flying across the room to the far wall. With a sweep of the other hand Waddles slammed the door with a bang that jarred the cabin.

"We've got 'em trapped," the big voice called. "We've got 'em sewed in a sack."

Harris made one long reach and swung the butt of his gun for Slade's head as the table went down but Slade, with the same motion, vaulted the prostrate sheriff. The force of the blow threw Harris off his balance and as he tripped and reeled to his knees Slade's boot heel scored a glancing blow on his skull and felled him. He regained his feet, gripping a fragment of the chair Morrow had smashed over Waddles' head, and struck at a dim form which loomed against the vague light of the window.

The shape closed with him and he went down in a corner with Slade. Slade struck him twice in the face, writhed away and gained his feet, back-slashing at Harris' head with his spurs. Harris caught a hand-hold in the long fur of the other's chaps, wrapped both arms round Slade above the knees and dragged him back. His hand found Slade's throat and he smothered down on it as the man raised both feet and thrust them against his stomach to break the hold. Slade's arm swept a circle on the floor in search of the gun Harris had dropped but he was jerked a foot from the spot.

again and Slade crumpled into a limp heap. Harris held him there, unwilling to take a chance lest the other might be feigning unconsciousness. But Slade was out of the fight.

The sheriff struggled to his feet as Waddles tossed Morrow back from the door and slammed it shut. He closed with Morrow but the man eluded him. He dared not shoot with friends and enemies struggling all about the black pit of the little room.

Morrow leaped one way, then the opposite, as the sheriff groped for him. Alden turned toward a rattle at the stove as he heard Slade's head crunch against the wall under Harris' savage thrust.

"Down him!" Waddles roared. "Tear him down! Tear him down! I'm holding the door."

From the corner by the stove an iron pot hurtled across the room for the sound of the voice and crashed against the wall a foot from his head. A second kettle struck Alden in the chest and he went down. Waddles saw the light vanish from the window, then reappear. Morrow had made a lead-long dive through the little opening.

NEW FORD HAS THEFT PROOF IGNITION LOCK

Peculiar Device Has Puzzled the Automobile Thief.

One of the features of the new Model A Ford which is typical of the care that has been devoted to details of design, is the theft-proof ignition lock with which it is equipped.

Many automobile ignition locks, designed to lock the switch against theft of the car, have been little or no safeguard against the clever thief with some knowledge of automobile ignition systems. The thief could simply reach behind the instrument board, cut the wires back of the switch and make a new circuit on which the ignition system would operate perfectly.

This cannot be done on the new Ford, because the wires run direct from the switch into an armored conduit which is integral with the dash. In order to tamper with the switch the thief would either have to take the instrument board to pieces or cut the steel dash or armored conduit. Except under the most extraordinary circumstances, no thief would have the tools, the time or the freedom from possible interruption necessary to the completion of such a difficult and tedious task.

This new Ford lock performs two operations at once. It opens the ignition circuit and grounds the distributor at the same time. Another advantage is that, being concerned entirely with the ignition system, it provides protection against theft without in any manner interfering with the mechanical car controls, such as transmission or steering.

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS

The functions of government are specific and do not include the operation of business enterprises. Government in business tends to socialism, and socialism is contrary to all tradition of our people and the constitution of the United States. Successful business requires men of broad vision and trained minds, whose talents and ambitions should not be limited by the fortunes of politics or the meager pay of a government employee.

* CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH *

"Christian Science" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, December 30.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people (Luke 2:10).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Today the healing power of Truth is wisely demonstrated as an immanent, eternal science, instead of a phenomenal exhibition. Its appearing is the coming anew of the gospel of 'on earth peace, good-will toward men' " (p. 150).

LAMP EXPLODES AT PORTABLE CAMP

East Jordan Lumber Company and John Hosler Heavy Losers.

A gasoline lamp exploding in the East Jordan Lumber Co.'s portable car camp Sunday morning about 9:00 o'clock caused a fire which destroyed the car and contents, together with the entire household effects and clothing of Mr. and Mrs. John Hosler.

The car was a series of four, located at Camp 3, nearly Penny bridge in Jordan township, about 14 miles from East Jordan. Mrs. Hosler, who is cook at the camp, had just shut off a burning gasoline lamp and stepped into another car when an explosion was heard and the car found to be in flames. Teams of horses were hitched to the burning car and moved it from the other three.

The East Jordan Fire department was summoned and responded with the light fire truck. Chemicals were used and the platform and truck of the burning car were saved.

Owing to the holiday, only a very few of the men of the camp crew were present.

The portable car was a store van, containing camp supplies of dry goods, groceries, meats, refrigerator, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Hosler had in the car their entire belongings of furniture and household effects.

The loss is particularly heavy to Mr. and Mrs. Hosler as their entire belongings were destroyed with no fire insurance. The loss to the East Jordan Lumber Co. is estimated at upward of $1,000.—East Jordan Herald.

Farmers Interested in Farm Accounts

Great interest has been manifested in the Farm Account project that is being started for this county at the present time. The work will be supervised by the farm management department of Michigan State College, under the direction of H. A. Berg, recently appointed as a specialist and who has been working in a similar capacity in Illinois for several years.

For the first time farmers will be aided in keeping farm records and will thus be able to have records that are uniform and accurate. Mr. Berg will meet all farmers who desire.

KONJOLA QUICKLY ENDED ALL OF HER HEALTH TROUBLES

Says This Medicine Cleared Up Her Skin Better Than Any Soap or Lotion.

MISS GERTRUDE CELINSKI

"It has done for me, it is a Godsend to humanity and I strongly recommend it to those in poor health," said Miss Gertrude Celinski, 4589 Maybary Road, Detroit, Mich.

"My condition became so bad within two weeks' time that I was forced to give up my employment and seek medical aid. I was told constipation was the cause of all my health troubles. Terrible pains thru my stomach and chest kept me awake at night and in the morning I felt more dead than alive. My nerves were so upset that I often cried as though all troubles in the world were mine. Skin eruptions began to appear on my face and for three months I tried every known soap and lotion recommended to clear the skin.

"Finally, Konjola was recommended and two bottles of this medicine did me more good than all the doctoring I had done for several months. It cleared my skin better than any soap or lotion and built up my whole system.

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix, Mich., at F. J. Fessenden's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

nate a desire to carry on the work at a county meeting to be held some time in March. He will explain in detail the manner of keeping the records and will personally assist each farmer in making his inventory at the start. Again during the summer each farmer will be visited and his records inspected and all problems arising satisfactorily answered. At the end of the project a county meeting of all farmers keeping farm accounts will be held, at which time the books will be closed for the year and the inventory placed in the new book.

This project furnishes a method by which a farmer may keep a financial record of his business with the least expense of time and effort. The purpose of the record is to show the results of the year's work as well as the relative efficiency of each part of the farm business with a view to raising the level of efficiency and increasing the profits of the business.

We hope to have several farmers representing each of the major enterprises on the farms, such as potatoes, fruit, dairy, etc., enrolled, which records will show the relative efficiency of the different kinds of farming.

The only expense attached to the work will be 20¢ as the cost of the book, to be paid when the first meeting is held. All other material necessary will be furnished by the county agent's office.

If you are interested in this valuable project, drop a line to your county agent in Boyne City and he will visit you and explain the project in detail. Think about this matter for a few moments, then act at once.

A series of six meetings will be conducted in Charlevoix county on January 8, 9 and 10 which will be of great interest and benefit to the cherry and apple growers. R. A. Cardinell, extension specialist, will discuss the two most important problems pertaining to successful fruit raising, viz: spraying and pruning, at these six meetings.

For your convenience as well as comfort, the forenoon meetings are scheduled to be held inside and will be devoted to spraying and any other problems you may have on your chest. The afternoon meetings will be held outside, right out among the fruit trees, where pruning, winter care, management and other factors of successful tree management will be taken up.

Following are the meetings, all scheduled on standard time:

Tuesday, January 8—
9:30 a. m., East Jordan K. of P. hall.

1:30 p. m., Eveline Orchards, East Jordan.

Wednesday, January 9—
9:30 a. m., Court House, Charlevoix.

1:30 p. m., Geo. Meggison farm, Charlevoix.

Thursday, January 10—9:30 a. m., Boyne City library.

1:30 p. m., Chas. Healey, East Jordan.

Every individual interested in cherries and apples should be at least two of these meetings, as it will be your best opportunity to get a complete short course of the latest information. With the multitude of sprays, both liquid and dust, that are being put on the market at the present time, it is quite necessary to get all the information available, or you may not get the best results from the spraying. Remember the dates and plan on forenoon and afternoon meetings.

DRIVE FOR MEMBERS NOW ON

ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE IN AUGURATES CAMPAIGN.

Lower Membership Dues Voted at Meeting of Organization Held Last Thursday.

With 25 members present, the Charlevoix Association of Commerce met last Thursday evening in the lobby of the Hotel Charlevoix for their first meeting of 1929.

Called to order by the newly-elected president, C. J. Winder, the members heard and approved the minutes of the annual meeting held in December. Following a short discussion a motion was made and carried that the president appoint what is to be known as the advisory committee to work with other committees. Previously Dr. Winder had announced his selection of committee chairmen.

An open discussion on membership and dues to the association brought out the opinions of many of the members present and without question will result in great benefit to the body. It was generally agreed that too few of those directly or indirectly benefited by the work and accomplishments of the organization were not members of the association. In fact, it was pointed out that just a few of the business men in the business district were active or even attended meetings. With a view of adding new and additional members and at the same time creating greater and more widespread interest among the citizens of the city in the work of the association, it was voted to reduce the membership fee to $3.00 yearly and start immediately on a membership drive aimed to cover the entire population of Charlevoix, whether business men, professional men or otherwise.

The membership committee will report the results of the campaign at a meeting and banquet to be held January 17th, place to be announced at a later date.

A general discussion of winter sports was held before the close of the meeting.

BEAVERS' PHYSICIAN LOSES ALL IN FIRE

Home and Contents Destroyed Last Sunday Night.

It became known here early this week that Dr. Russell Palmer, state-employed physician at Beaver Island, narrowly escaped with his life Sunday night when fire destroyed his residence at St. James.

Dr. Palmer was asleep in a second-story room and was unaware of the blaze until awakened by Fred Seidenberg, who discovered the fire. The house, owned by Mrs. Mamie O'Donnell of Detroit, together with the household effects of the Palmers, were destroyed.

DON'T DRIVE YOUR CAR WITHOUT NEW LICENSE PLATES

Secretary of State John S. Haggerty again reiterates his statement that there is no extension of time this year when you shall have the your car, and word has been sent to all enforcement officers to enforce the law.

For the past several years there has been some confusion at Lansing and the plates have not arrived in sufficient time for all to get them before the first of the year. For that reason, an extension of time was granted.

This is not the case this year. The plates have been in the hands of branch bureaus for several weeks. Now Mr. Haggerty says we have had plenty of time to buy new ones. If we haven't, that's our fault, but that we had not better drive our ears until they are attached under penalty of arrest and fine.

No branch or enforcement officer has the right to grant an extension of time. That can only come from the state, and will not be forthcoming this year, so play safe and if you live in the country, call the license headquarters at Boyne City and find the amount you have to pay and send in that amount with your car title, letting him send them out for you.

A little fine will more than equal the cost of the plates.

POLITICAL POT HAS COMMENCED BREWING

First Slant at Aspirants for Office Now Available.

The opening gun in the political battle for nominations at the spring primary in Charlevoix sounded Tuesday.

With the filing of his petition with the city clerk, it became known that Dr. C. J. Winder would seek nomination for mayor. From other quarters comes the information that friends of the present mayor, Arthur Bergeon, are circulating his petition, and Tuesday Mr. Bergeon announced that he would seek re-election for another term.

Petitions are also in circulation for Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, who will seek re-election as circuit judge of the 18th judicial circuit, composed of Charlevoix, Antrim, Grand Traverse and Leelanau counties. It is understood that Judge Gilbert will have no opposition.

Another week will likely find other petitions filed and give voters a better view of the political horizon.

ANTHONY CLARK DIED SATURDAY

VICTIM OF WEAKENED HEART FOLLOWING INFLUENZA

Mr. Clark Was Respected Citizen of Barnard District—Prominent Church Worker

Funeral services were held at the Barnard Methodist church Tuesday for Anthony B. Clark, highly respected citizen of the Barnard district, who died at his farm home Saturday afternoon from a weakened heart condition caused by a second attack of influenza.

Anthony Brady Clark was born in Marlborough township, near Grayton, Ontario, Canada, September 21, 1862; the youngest of a family of nine children. When he was five years old the family moved to Charlevoix and settled on a farm near Barnard, where Anthony lived the rest of his life, taking care of his aged parents until their death and then carrying on alone until his marriage to Miss Mable Stevens of Phelps on October 10th, 1912.

At an early age, in 1878, he was converted and united with the Methodist church at Barnard and was a true and faithful follower of Christ until the end. When a young man he conducted Sunday schools at Norwood, Hilton school house and Barnard, being superintendent of the last named for over thirty years. He later was ordained a minister and afterwards responded to many calls to fill pulpits and officiate at funerals.

Besides his wife, deceased is survived by one brother and three sisters, Joseph Clark and Mrs. Joanna Trimble of Charlevoix; Mrs. Maria Trimble of Eaton Rapids and Mrs. Eliza McMillan of Kansas. A large circle of relatives and intimate friends will miss his cheery, friendly greeting, his close handshake and his voice in song and prayer.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. George Sanford, assisted by Rev. Manker of Ellsworth and Rev. John E. Lockyer of Charlevoix. Interment was in Barnard cemetery.

A male quartette composed of Dr. Frank Wilkinson, Rev. John E. Lockyer, Harker Kirby and George Block sang at the funeral.

ALL STORES TO CLOSE FOR WINTER SPORTS

Each Thursday Afternoon Will Be a Half Holiday.

Commencing today (Thursday) all Charlevoix business places will close at 12 o'clock and remain closed the balance of the afternoon for winter sports.

Charles Gale, chairman, and Joe Foster of the Merchants' committee, canvassed the business district last Friday and reported 100 per cent co-operation on the matter. Community participation in winter sports is generally conceded as necessary for success.

The winter sports season officially opens this afternoon with the first Polar Bear Day program. Skiing and tobogganing events will be held at the Belvedere Golf grounds south of the city commencing at 2 o'clock. In the evening at 8 o'clock Charlevoix and Petoskey hockey teams meet at the school grounds rink. From now on Thursday afternoon programs will be announced in advance.

BOYNE MAN AFOUL OF ELECTION LAW

EXAMINATION HELD AT COURT HOUSE SATURDAY

L. C. Rouse Bound Over to Circuit Court Under One Thousand Dollar Bond

Lavern C. Rouse, Boyne City oil dealer, appeared before Justice Roth. Withers at the court house Saturday morning for hearing on a complaint charging that he wrote, had published and assisted in circulation of certain letters, circulars and publications bearing date of August 30, 1928, and which was signed "Committee," which letters, circulars and publications contained false statements and charges reflecting upon the character, morality and integrity of John M. Harris, who was then a candidate for the office of representative in the state legislature for the Charlevoix-Leelanau district.

The complaint brought out that Mr. Rouse's actions were contrary to section 17 of chapter 2 of part V of act No. 351 of the public acts of Michigan for the year 1925, and against the peace and dignity of the people of the State of Michigan.

The complaint, which was dated December 31, 1928, was the last official act of A. L. Fitch, then prosecuting attorney. Rouse demanded examination, which was held. The county called in three witnesses to testify, while Rouse made no defense, being later bound over to the February term of circuit court under bond of $1,000.

While it is not believed the present court action has any bearing on the recent one-man grand jury investigation conducted here recently by Judge Joseph Barton of Big Rapids, it is a result of the strenuous campaign conducted by a group within the county against John M. Harris of Boyne City, who was seeking re-election as representative to the state legislature from the Charlevoix-Leelanau district.

LYCEUM NUMBER AT GYM NEXT THURSDAY

John L. Golden Presents the Comedy, "The First Year."

That clean shows are the plays the public wants, thereby proving that the great majority of Americans are clean-minded and do not care for dramatic material that has the tinge of suggestiveness, has been emphatically proved by John L. Golden, who has never produced a play with an unclean line or situation.

"Lightnin'", which was one of his hits, ran for three years and one day in New York and "The First Year" ran for more than two years and would have eclipsed even the record of "Lightnin'" but for the fact that previous contracts had to be fulfilled, taking the original company to Chicago.

"The First Year" will be presented here Thursday evening, January 17, under the auspices of the Charlevoix Lyceum association. You will laugh at practically every line in "The First Year." There are moments of heart-searching pathos, too, that will grip you as they have the hundreds of thousands of others who have seen this play.

IS NAMED ON SIX ACTIVE COMMITTEES

State Senator Campbell Will Be Busy Man This Term

State Senator Calvin Campbell of Indian River, who represents Charlevoix and six other Northern Michigan counties in the state senate, received important committee appointments last week, Lieut. Gov. Dickinson naming him chairman of the transportation committee, and a member of five others.

Campbell is ranking member of the public utilities committee, standing next to Chairman Atwood, who has several prior terms in the upper branch of the state's legislative activities.

Other committees to which Campbell holds membership are agriculture, elections, prohibition and state sanitariums.

Sen. Campbell was renominated in the 1928 primaries without opposition, it being generally conceded all over the district that during his first term he had handled the duties of state senator in a very satisfactory manner.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH MEETING

ANNUAL REPORTS SHOW EXCELLENT PROGRESS

Budget for 1929 Adopted and Officers Elected—Plans Made for Annual Subscription Campaign

The annual meeting of the First Congregational church was held Tuesday evening, January 8. Reports for the past year showed excellent progress and good accomplishment in all departments. The report of the treasurer showed receipts of $3,415, raised under the direction of the trustees. $250.00 of this was contributed to missionary causes and the remainder applied to current expenses. The Sunday school raised $161.69 for operating expense and $108 for benevolences.

The Woman's Missionary Society raised $123 for missionary causes. Other contributions from the Endeavor society and special gifts brought the benevolence total to $593.50 to apply on the national missionary apportionment with $69.40 for additional special causes.

The Ladies' Aid Society applied $500 to various needs of the church which included redecorating the church and repairing the stained glass window at a total cost of $465. A large part of this money was contributed through the efforts of the Circles. In addition to the above, the Brewster Circle raised $295 in the interest of the music service maintenance for the church.

The Endeavor Society raised over $100, the larger part of which was applied to the purchase of 100 new hymn books for Sunday school and young people's work. Receipts from all sources and for all purposes reached a total of approximately $5,250, an excellent showing for a church of limited size and an active membership of 172.

The following officers were elected: Board of trustees—A. F. Bridge, Archie Livingston, R. F. Sloan; board of deacons—E. E. Cross; deaconesses—Mrs. Robert MacDonnell, Mrs. N. A. Shores; auditor, Archie Livingston; treasurer, Mrs. R. F. Sloan; Sunday school superintendent, A. J. Stelter; clerk, Mrs. H. S. Harsh.

The budget for the new year was adopted on recommendation of the trustees, calling for about $3,400. Plans for the annual subscription canvass were approved to be launched in the near future under the direction of the men of the church. It was proposed this year to launch the drive by a big social gathering held at the church at which the men will sponsor all the activities, including the refreshments. Further announcements will soon be made.

A hearty and courageous spirit pervaded the meeting and all looked forward to an excellent year in 1929.

A specially appreciated feature of the meeting was the gift to Mrs. Harsha of a beautiful flowered potted plant as a recognition of her long and devoted service as clerk.

BURGESS NUTRITION CLUB WILL CONTINUE

Charlevoix Public School Notes

Athletic News

Charlevoix high school basketball team suffered severe injuries during Christmas vacation when Captain Max Novak and Crane Helms, both centers, turned their ankles while in preparation for the East Jordan game Tuesday night at East Jordan. Crane will probably be out of the game, while Captain Novak will drop back at guard. Coach Kipke will start the regular line-up.

Why Be Grouchy?

Yes, that is the question. Why be grouchy if you can't go to the basketball game or the weather doesn't suit you, or you receive a failing mark in English for the month? Does it help matters any? No, it just makes you feel unpleasant and uncomfortable. Does it help you go to the game? Not a bit! Does it make the weather clear up? Of course not. And just remember this, if there isn't any sunshine outside, create a little inside by flashing a cheery smile at everyone you meet. Don't have it said about you that you "always get up on the wrong side of the bed every morning."

Doctors tell us that about 200 muscles are used when you frown and only six are used when you smile, so don't overwork yourself by using the 200 muscles too often.

Contrast

The boys of Northern Michigan are getting smaller and lighter nearly every year, especially in Charlevoix. Many discussions have been brought up concerning the lightness of the football teams this year.

Boys City had about the only football team that was very heavy. They averaged about one hundred and fifty pounds, while Charlevoix averaged about one hundred thirty pounds.

English Department

The English classes are trying to start the New Year out with good resolutions.

Mrs. McKinley was absent from school on Tuesday, so no English classes were held.

During Christmas vacation the juniors memorized "Thanatopsis," by William Cullen Bryant, and are awaiting Mrs. McKinley's return to show their great knowledge.

Winter Sports in Charlevoix

Winter sports first began in Charlevoix in the days when the Indians roamed the forests. With bows and arrows and their faithful dogs, they hunted the fleet-footed deer, trapped the bear in rudely constructed traps, and fished thru the ice for the many varieties of fresh water fish which our lakes afford.

The early white men learned many of the shrewd ways of Indian hunting and, in addition to the pleasure of the sport, the meat and fish which they caught served as welcome food to their families.

The early pioneer children also learned the sports and games of their little Indian friends. Constanting down hill by means of pieces of birch bark was a common sight, until the white children became dissatisfied with their crude sleds and supplemented them with their mother's chopping bowls. Skating became a great source of pleasure to the young people at an early date, and the lakes and rivers afforded them a comparatively safe place on which to skate.

Nevertheless these early sports were practically nothing compared with what we are now enjoying in Charlevoix. The Bridge street hill is iced every winter, and bobs coast down until late every night. Children with small sleds, not made of birch bark, but of strong wood, fairly come in masses to coast on this wonderful slide. Mount McSaubu is a very interesting sight on carnival days as well as at other times. The long toboggan slide is crowded with people eager to get a chance to slide.

If a person once slides on these toboggans he will get such a thrill that he will never want to stop. Skiing is a very popular amusement here in the winter, and there are many really professional skiers in Charlevoix. On Mt. McSaubu there is a wonderful ski track which no amateur can go down successfully. However, the many terraces around the city provide plenty of fun for those who are not so proficient. Skiing is enjoyed by nearly everyone who is able to walk. Fancy skaters are quite numerous, especially at the time of the carnival. Charlevoix people believe in teaching the children young to skate. Little tots about four years old are often seen, sometimes more on the ground than off from it.

Visitors come from out-of-town to share in our winter sports, so that at the carnival there are several thousand people present. Although there are not as many outside visitors yet as we hope to have in the future, winter sports is a growing idea and we expect it to become more and more popular as the years go by.

Certainly we have an ideal location. The contour of the country is almost identical to that of Lake Placid in New York, and Mount McSaubu is as good or better to serve our purpose as is Mount Royal at Montreal, Canada. Lake Placid has gained an enviable reputation in the United States because of its extensive advertising, and the enthusiasm with which its home people have entered into the project. Mount Royal has a world famous slide. There is a cog-wheel railway which goes up the slope for the purpose of carrying passengers up the mountain and the toboggan carries them down. This would be an ideal device for us to employ at Mt. McSaubu. The walking up is the only unpleasant part of tobogganing, and if Mount Royal has solved this problem, why can't we? Another idea we might take from this winter resort is the icing of the racing track, which makes a large skating rink in the winter. It would be a great improvement if we had a larger skating rink, for the hockey field should be larger for the greater comfort of the players.

If our winter sports improve as much in the future as they have in the last few years, it will not be many years before Charlevoix is as noted for its winter attractions as for its summer resorts.

Domestic Science

The domestic science class has been studying chocolate and cocoa. These are prepared from cocoa beans, which grow in a pod on cocoa trees. The beans are taken from the pods, allowed to ferment, dried and roasted. Then they are ground, molded and sold as chocolate. When about half the fat is extracted from the chocolate, cocoa is made.

The Two-Bits Back

In the little town of Bay Shore lived a little Polish boy. He had been here only three months when he was taken to a football game by a friend of his. He had learned a few words within this time, one of which was quarter, or two-bits.

As the game got under way and the quarterback, finding his feet, finally made a sensational run. Pete, figuring as to the identification of the runner, learned that he was the quarterback. From then to the end of the game he continued to root for one he termed the two-bit back.

The Origin of Wedding Customs

In the days of the cave man, wives were secured by "fight and take" method. If one cave man desired the wife of another, to secure her he would engage the husband or owner of the woman in battle, and if he succeeded in killing him, the woman was his. Then some genius discovered that buying a wife was less bother, so this custom was adopted and the bride received a part of the price paid for her. This price was often paid in metal and as metal was the most valuable thing in those days, the idea of a wedding ring was developed. This became a badge which was worn by married women to distinguish them from those who were not married. Even today in some South African tribes, the husband knocks out of couple of his wife's front teeth on the wedding day. In other tribes women's faces are tattooed as soon as they are married.

The third finger of the left hand became known as the ring finger because in those days it was said the third finger had a blood vein connected with the heart.

In the early English marriage the ring was first placed by the husband on the top of the thumb of the left hand as he said: "In the name of the Father," then placing it on the first finger saying, "In the name of the son," then on the middle finger saying, "And of the Holy Ghost." Finally it was placed on the third finger with the word "Amen."

The Bible, however, contains no command to wear a wedding ring.

Wedding cakes were originated by the Romans. The most important feature of the ceremony was a cake. From this has come the wedding cake. Also the Roman bride held in her hand three ears of corn signifying plenty. From this has gradually grown the gorgeous bridal bouquet of the present day.

CHARVEVOIX TOPS EAST JORDANITES

WON 'DOUBLE-HEADER' THERE TUESDAY EVENING

Varsity Takes 19 to 12 Victory While Reserves Win by Count of 13 to 7—Boys Here Tuesday

After trailing through two quarters, Charlevoix high school basketballers stepped out from behind in the second half to defeat Coach Cohen's East Jordan five at East Jordan Tuesday evening by a 19 to 12 score.

Apparently handicapped by East Jordan's small court, the local five seemed unable to hit their stride in the early part of the game. They were nearly blanked in the first quarter, which ended 5 to 1 with East Jordan leading. Their stock went up several points in the second period, but the half found them still trailing on the small end of a 10 to 7 count.

It was not until the second half that Kipke's men stepped out. Although play in the third period was close, Charlevoix got away to a lead and held it from then on. Their advantage at the third intermission was three points, the score being 13 to 10, while in the final stanza East Jordan was allowed but one point, while Charlevoix scored 6.

Scoring honors for Charlevoix went to Bill Novak with 7, three baskets and a free throw. Max Novak followed closely with 5 and Marshall accounted for 4 points. Shepard starred for East Jordan, making 6 of his team's 12 points.

Charlevoix's second team scored a 13 to 7 victory over the East Jordan reserves in a preliminary contest, while the local junior high five dropped their contest with the East Jordan juniors. In the first game Joe Smith of the Charlevoix reserves led with 5 of his team's 13 points.

A game which promises to be one of the most interesting home contests will be played on the local court next Tuesday night when Charlevoix stacks up against the fast-traveling Boyne City five. Boyne has lost but one game so far this season, that to the Petoskey team. Charlevoix is out to win this game and want a packed gym to support them.

YOUNG WORKER

KILLED IN A MILL

Henry Miles Falls Onto Pulley at Jackson and Tindle Mill.

The first serious accident of the last seven or eight years at the Jackson & Tindle, Inc., mills at Pellston, occurred Monday morning when Henry Miles was killed when he apparently slipped and fell against a pulley. The young man lived only a few minutes and never regained consciousness. He was about 21 years of age and resided with his mother, Mrs. Wm. Miles. A younger brother, John Miles, also resides at home.

Mrs. Miles was assisting the millwright in lacing a belt and apparently slipped and fell against a pulley. The end of the belt became caught in the machinery and it was pulled around the wheel and slapped against the victim. His head was crushed it is said, and there were other hurts.

Dr. G. W. Nihart, county coroner, was called from Petoskey to handle the case. The dead man was a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller of this city.—Petoskey News.

Local Young Man Weds.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Thelma Blanche Worley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus M. Worley of Bristol, Tenn. Mr. and Mrs. Paddock will make their home at Franklin, N. C., where Mr. Paddock is stationed as a member of the U. S. Forestry service.

Mrs. Ives Entertained

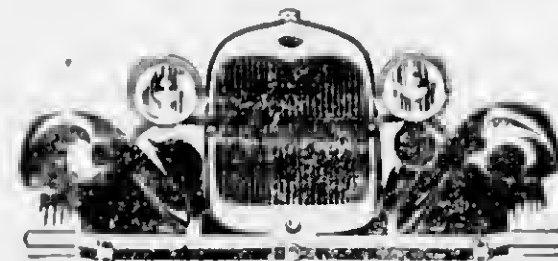

Mrs. William Ives entertained with a chop suey supper at her home on E. Simplicity of cooling system is a feature of the new Ford

A COMPLETE water plant is a part of every automobile as it is a part of every modern city.

The purpose of this water plant is to keep the engine cooled to a temperature that will make it efficient in operation. If it were not for this, the cylinder walls would become overheated and the pistons refuse to operate.

The cooling system of the new Ford is particularly interesting because it is so simple and reliable.

When the radiator is full of water, the engine of the new Ford will not overheat under the hardest driving. Yet the water is so regulated that it will not impair engine operation by running too cold in winter.

The cooling surface of the Ford radiator is large, with four rows of tubes set in staggered position so that each receives the full benefit of the incoming air. The fan is of the airplane propeller type and draws air through the radiator at the rapid rate of 350 cubic feet per minute at 1000 revolutions per minute of the motor.

The hot water around the cylinder head is drawn to the radiator to be cooled by a centrifugal water pump of new design.

The entire cooling system of the new Ford is so simple in design and so carefully made that it requires very little attention.

The radiator should be kept full, of course, and drained once each month so that sediment will not collect and retard the free passage of water. In cold weather, a reliable anti-freeze solution should be added.

As owner and manager of this important water plant you should also see that the water pump and fan shaft are properly lubricated and the packing around the pump shaft kept in adjustment.

Hose connections may also need replacement after long service. For these little adjustments, it pays to call on the Ford dealer.

He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to do a thorough, competent job at a fair price.

Waddles swung back the door and sprang outside as Morrow vaulted to the saddle. The big man lunged and tackled both horse and man as a grizzly would seek to batter down his prey.

The frightened horse struck at him, numbing one leg with the blow of an iron-shod forefoot, then reared and wheeled away from the thing which sprang at him, but Waddles released his grip in the animal's mane, his other hand clamped on Morrow's ankle.

The rider leaped and struck him on the head. The crazed horse shook Waddles off but as he fell the other man fell with him, dragged from the saddle by the jerk of one mighty hand. They rolled apart and Morrow leaped to his feet but Waddles wrenched the leg already numbed by the striking horse and it buckled under him and let him back to the ground as he put his weight on it. He reached for his gun. A form loomed above him, a heavy rock upraised in both hands. The girl barked just as a downward sweep of the arms started the rock for his head. Morrow pitched down across him and Waddles swept him aside with a single thrust.

He rose and stirred the limp shape with his toe as the sheriff reached his side.

"Dead bird!" Waddles announced and turned to limp back to the cabin.

A match flared inside as Harris lighted the lantern. Carpenter stirred and sat up, moving one hand along the cash in his scalp. The sheriff stooped and snatched a pair of handcuffs on Slade's wrists. They splashed water on his face and he opened his eyes. He regarded the steel bracelets at his wrists as he was helped to his feet and turned to Harris.

"Don't forget that I'll kill you for this," he said. It was a simple statement, made without heat or bluster, and aside from this one remark he failed to speak a syllable until the sheriff rode away with him.

The sheriff waved the lantern outside the door and before he lowered it two deputies rode up, leading his horse.

"We started at that shot," one of them announced in explanation of their prompt arrival.

Alden motioned Slade to his horse and helped him up.

"Now you can move against those men I've sworn complaints for," Harris said to Alden. "Public sentiment has turned against them to such an extent that they won't get any help—and there won't be any to fill their places, once we've cleaned them up." Deputyize the whole Three Bar crew when you're ready to start.

The sheriff nodded and led the way with the two deputies riding close behind, one riding on either side of Slade.

The freight wagons rattled away from the Three Bar as the first light showed in the east, and the grind of wheels on gravel died out in the distance as Harris and Billie finished their breakfast.

The hands had come in from the round-up the night before, prior to the return of Harris and Waddles from their mysterious two-day trip in response to the sheriff's message, and Evans had led them to Billie's for a night of play. They were due back at the ranch in the early forenoon and Harris had allowed the freighters to depart before the others arrived.

"What did Alden want?" Billie asked, referring to the trip from which he and Waddles had returned late the night before.

"We made a call on Carp," he said. "He had some good news we've been waiting for."

"Then Carp is a Three Bar plant," she said.

"He's a U. S. plant," Harris corrected. "But he's been working in with us to get something on Slade—to gather proof that he's behind these squatter raids of the last few years and the ones they've aimed at us up to date. He couldn't get a shred that would hold in court. But Slade is almost through. His claws are clipped."

The girl started to question him as to Carp's activities but after the first sentence she became aware that his attention was riveted on something other than her words. He had thrown up his head like a startled buck and was peering down the valley.

Her muscled ears caught and correctly interpreted the sound which had roused him. A distant rumble reached her and the surface of the earth seemed to vibrate faintly beneath her feet. She knew the far for the pounding of thousands of hoofs, the drone for the far-off bawling of frightened cows. A low black line filled the valley from side to side, rushing straight on up the gently-sloping bottoms for the Three Bar that.

"They're on us," Harris said. "I might have known. Get back to the house—quick!"

As they ran she noticed that his eyes were not upon the surging mass of cows in the valley but were trained on the broken slopes back of the house.

"Anyway, they don't want you," he said. "We'll do the best we can. I made that prediction about clipping Slade's claws too soon. What with Slade locked up and Morrow six feet underground, I was overconfident. I might have known it was planned ahead."

His face was lined with anxiety, an expression she had never before seen him wear even in the face of emergency. She had no time to question him about the assertions relative to Morrow and Slade.

The front rank of the stampede was heading down on the lower fence. The barrier went down as so much spider web before the drive; posts were broken short, wire was snapped and dragged, and three thousand head of cows pounded on across the meadows.

The girl had a sickening realization that the work of a year would be blotted out in a space of seconds under those churning hoofs. It seemed that she must die of sheer grief as she witnessed the complete devastation of the fields she had watched day by day with such loving care. The stampede swept the full length of the meadow and held on for the house.

The foremost cows struck the corral and they went down with a splintering crash under the pressure from behind. She looked out on a sea of tossing horns and heaving backs as the herd rushed through, the heavy log buildings shaking from the mass of animals jammed against them and squeezing past.

The force of the run was spent on the steep slope back of the house and the herd split into detachments and moved off through the hills.

The west side of the house was windowless, a blank wall built against the standing winds. Waddles was busily engaged in knocking out a patch of chinking and endeavoring to work a loophole between the logs. Harris was shakily engaged.

He pointed down the valley to the south and she turned mechanically and crossed to that window. A few riders showed on the ridges on either flank of the valley.

"If you see any more of them, please us off if you rode down to try and turn the run," he said.

She nodded without apparent interest. What might transpire now seemed a matter to be viewed with indifference.

"It's time for me to go," Harris said. "I'll hold the bank house. Good luck, Billie—we'll hold 'em off."

He turned to Waddles who still worked to make a loophole through the blank wall.

"If it gets too hot put her outside and tell her to give herself up. Even Lang would know that the whole country would be hunting them tomorrow if they touched her. They won't if they can help it. But this is their last hope—to trust in one final raid. They'll go through with it. Make her go outside if it comes to that."

He opened the door and leaped across the twenty yards of open space which separated the main building from the bunk house, barred the door and looked from the south window. The riders along the valley rim had descended to the bottoms. Smoke was already rising from one homestead cabin and they were riding toward the rest. Two men had dismounted by the head gate.

Harris cursed himself for not having anticipated this very thing. The whole plan was clear to him. Slade would have known that when the cowhands came in from the round-up there would follow the inevitable night at Billie's. Morrow had mapped out the raid long in advance, engaging Lang to gather the cows throughout the first night the round-up crew was in from the range and hold them a few miles from the ranch. Lang could not know that Slade was locked up and that Morrow was dead so the raid had gone through as planned.

Smoke was rising from two more cabins in the flats and Harris reproached himself for another oversight in allowing the wagons to pull out before the others arrived. The crop would have been ruined in any event but with the hands at home they could have prevented the destruction of the cabins.

He transferred his attention to the long line of log buildings a hundred yards to the east. The row afforded perfect cover for any who chose that route of approach. They could walk up to them in absolute safety, screened both from himself and those in the main house.

As he watched the doors and windows for sign of movement within a voice hailed him from the shop.

"You might as well come out," it called. "We're going to fire the plant."

Harris stretched prone on the floor and rested the muzzle of his rifle on a crack between the logs. It was hard shooting. He was forced to shift the butt end of the gun, moving with it himself to line the sights instead of swinging the free end of the barrel. He trained it on a crack some two feet from the door of the shop. Behind the aperture the light of a window on the far side showed faintly.

"Come out!" the voice ordered. "Or we'll cook you inside. We've no time to lose. Rush it!"

The light disappeared from the crack and Harris pressed the trigger. With the roar of his gun a shape pitched down across the door of the shop. Some unseen hands caught the man by the feet and as he was dragged back from sight Harris saw the red handkerchief which had served as a mask.

From all along the row of buildings a fire was opened on the bunk house. Harris threw himself flat against the lower log which barely shielded him. Shreds of 'dobe chinking littered the room. The balls which found an entrance splattered through the bunks and buried themselves in the logs of the far wall. One marksman worked on the lower crack. Puffs of 'dobe pulverized before Harris' eyes as the systematic fire crept toward him down the crack in six-inch steps.

The shooting suddenly ceased. Billie Warren, dazedly indifferent as to what should happen to the Three Bar since the wreck of the lower field, had roused to action the instant she saw the sparks of chinking fly from the cracks of the bunk house before the full-scale sent after Harris. She threw open the door and stepped out, holding up one hand.

"Don't kill him!" she commanded. "If you fire another shot at him I'll put up every dollar I own to hang every man that ever rode a foot with Lang! Do you hear that, Lang?"

"Lang's in Idaho," a voice growled surlily from the shop. "None of us ever rode with Lang. We're from every band on the range—and we're going to burn you squatters out."

"Draw off and let us ride away," she said. "You can have the Three Bar."

"All but Harris," the voice called back. "He stays!"

Harris knew that the men would not be deterred in their purpose—would sacrifice her along with the rest if necessary to accomplish their end.

"Get back, Billie," he called from the bunk house. "You can't do us any good out there. Take the little cabin and sit tight. We'll beat them off."

She walked to the little cabin that stood isolated and alone, the first building ever erected on the Three Bar and which had sheltered the Harris before her father had taken over the brand.

From her point of vantage she saw two masked men rise from the brush and run swiftly down toward the main house, each carrying a can. She divined their purpose instantly.

"Watch the west side!" she called. "The west side—quick!"

The muffled crash of a ride rolled steadily from the house as Waddles fired at the chinking in an effort to make a loophole through. But she had accomplished their purpose and retreated.

The row of buildings was a seething mass of flames rolling up into the black smoke. Flames lashed and licked up the blank wall of the main house, traveling along the logs on which the two masked raiders had thrown their cans of oil. The men outside had only to wait until the occupants were roasted out. She knew Waddles would come out when it grew too hot. The raiders might let him go. It was Harris they waited for.

The girl ran across and pounded on the bunk-house door.

"Hurry for it," she begged. "Make a run for the brush! I'll keep between you and them. They won't shoot me. You can get to the brush. There's a chance that way."

"All right, old girl," Harris said. "A minute now. But you go back, Billie. Get back to the little house. As soon as it gets hot I'll run for it. I've got ten minutes yet before I'm roasted out. I'll start as soon as you're inside the house."

"No. Start now!" she implored. "Hurry, hurry while you've got a chance." She leaned upon the door and beat on it with her fists.

"All right, Billie," he said. "I'll go. You stay right where you are as if you're talking to me."

She heard him cross the door. He dropped from the window on the far side from the men. When he came in sight of them he was running in long leaps for the brush, zigzagging in his flight. Half a dozen rifles sprang from two hundred yards up the slope, the balls passing him with anasty snaps. He reached the edge of the sage and plunged headlong between two rocks.

Waddles pumped a rifle and covered Harris' flight as best he could, drilling the center of every sage that shook or quivered back of the house.

Two men turned their attention to the one who handicapped their chances of locating the crawling man and poured their fire through the window. He dropped to the floor and peered from a crack. The three had suddenly ceased. He saw a hat moving up a coffee, a mere dash here and there above the sage as the owner of it ran.

The smoke hurt his eyes and the heat seemed to crack his skin. He crossed over to see if Harris was down; that would account for the sudden cessation of shooting from the hills back of the house.

The raiders in the lower field were riding swiftly for the far side of the valley. One man knelt near the head gate, then mounted and jumped his horse off after the rest. Waddles put the whole force of his lungs behind one mighty blow.

Far down along the rim of the valley, outlined against the sky, four miles were running as so many startled deer under the bite of the lash and six men swayed and clung to the wagon that lurched behind. Three men unloaded from the wagon as it came opposite the cluster of men riding far out across the flats. They opened a long-range fire at a thousand yards while the others stayed with the wagon as it rocked on toward the burning ranch.

Billie was running to the brush at the spot where Harris had disappeared. He rose to meet her.

"Cal, you're not hurt?" she asked. "Not a scratch," he said. "Thanks to you."

In her relief she grasped his arm and gave it a fierce little squeeze.

"Then it's all right," she said.

Waddles burst from the door of the burning house, his arms piled high with salvage.

"We'll save what we can," Harris said and started for the house. As he ran the valley rocked with a concussion which nearly threw him flat and a column of fragments and trash rose a hundred feet above the spot where the head gate had been but a second past.

A dozen running horses slipped over the edge of the hill and plunged down toward the ranch. The men were back from Billie's.

Harris held up his hand to halt the riders as they would have kept on past the house. He knew that the raiders stationed behind the ranch had long since reached their horses and were lost in the choppy hills. He waved all hands toward the buildings and they scurried inside, carrying out load after load of such articles as could be moved and piling them out of reach of the flames.

The raiders' fire was now directed at work. Her lethargy had returned. It seemed a small matter to rescue these trinkets when the Three Bar was a total wreck.

Harris caught two of the saddled horses that had carried the men from Billie's and crossed over to where the girl sat.

"Let's ride down to the field," he said. "An' see what's got to be done. I expect a week's work will repair that part of it all right."

She gazed at him in amazement. He spoke of repairing the damage while the Three Bar burned before his eyes. But she rose and mounted what had once been the lane, the fence flattened by the oncoming horde of cattle that had broken through.

The last of the cabins smoked but still stood.

STRANG MURDER WITNESS DEAD

PASSED AT HARBOR SPRINGS HOME LAST SUNDAY

Born in 1840, She Witnessed Early Pioneer Days of the Grand Traverse Region

One of Harbor Springs' most ancient and picturesque inhabitants, Mrs. Elizabeth Pelot Chingwa, passed away Sunday, December 30, at the age of eighty-eight, at her home near the Waquetonsing golf links.

Mrs. Chingwa was born about 1840 at Alpena, and at the age of one month moved with her parents to Mackinac Island where she lived until eight years old. Her father, Captain Pelot, a trader, was French and her mother, Indian. In the summer her father operated his fishing and trading schooner and they spent the winter in Alpena as her father said, "At the hunting grounds." At the age of eight her people moved to Harbor Springs and Elizabeth attended the Indian school. Later Catholic missionaries founded a school there and Mrs. Chingwa was one of the first ones to be taught by a Catholic missionary in Harbor Springs.

Mrs. Chingwa had often told of traveling when a girl with her parents by canoe to Chicago in the fall, camping and fishing along the beautiful, then unsettled, forested shores of Lake Michigan and returning in the same way in the spring after waiting for the ice to break up.

At the age of sixteen, Mrs. Chingwa, engaged in reeling nets on the shore of Beaver Island, with her father, witnessed the murder of "King" Strang of the Mormons. Michigan history tells of King Strang's death as follows: "The king was assassinated by two of his rebellious subjects—Thomas Bedford and Alexander Wentworth. Bedford had been whipped by order of the king for some offense; he is said to have upheld his wife in disregarding the mandate to wear bloomers. Wentworth also had a grievance. About the middle of June, 1856, the 'Michigan,' a federal boat, steamed into the harbor, and by invitation of the captain, King Strang proceeded to visit the vessel's officers. As he was about to step on the pier, two pistol shots were fired from behind, both taking effect. He turned and recognized the assassins as they fired again. As he sank to the ground they struck him over the head and face with the weapons, ran aboard the steamer and gave themselves up. They were taken to Mackinac, where the murderers were received as heroes. They were never brought to trial.

STOMACH TROUBLE COMPLETELY ENDED BY KONJOLA

Sufferer Who Could Not Eat Anything Without After-pains Is Well and Strong Again.

MR. GEORGE NELSON

Sweeping out the stored-up poisons in the system, imparting new vigor and strength to the afflicted organs, Konjola is winning through results thousands of friends, men and women who rejoice in health-restored.

Mr. G. Nelson, of Rapid, Mich., is typical of the countless ones in which Konjola has wrought wonders when all else had given no relief. Says Mr. Nelson:

"My friends, in amazement, ask what I have done to regain my health so quickly. They knew that I suffered from badly disordered stomach, and that I had tried every treatment and medicine within my means in the vain effort to regain my health. For several years, everything I ate caused intense pains, bloating, gas and heart palpitation. I lost sleep and strength. My bowels were so badly affected that even the strongest laxatives were powerless. I heard many fine things about the new Konjola, and started the treatment. It was exactly what I needed. Today I can eat anything, my bowels function naturally, I am gaining in weight and strength, and show this remarkable recovery in my face and step. I certainly wish I could tell the world about this marvelous medicine."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this section.

Flu Epidemic is Creating Record Demand For Vicks

432,000 Jars Every 24 Hours Needed to Keep the Nation Supplied with Vapor-Salve.

FLU Milder BUT WIDESPREAD

That the public has not forgotten the lesson of 1918 is indicated by its prompt response to the warning of health authorities to combat the flu by keeping free from colds.

The demand for Vicks Vaporub, the vaporizing salve which proved so valuable during the 1918 epidemic, has already shattered by a wide margin all previous records.

Although the capacity of the Vicks Laboratories has been tripled since 1918, they are once more operating night shifts to meet the national emergency.

The present output of more than 432,000 jars a day almost staggers the imagination. It means that every 60 seconds, day and night, over 3600 jars of Vicks are going out to check the nation's colds and help ward off the flu.

Mild though it is in comparison with 1918, this year's epidemic has already affected more than a million persons, and it is apparently still increasing.

the mandate to wear bloomers. Wentworth also had a grievance. About the middle of June, 1856, the 'Michigan,' a federal boat, steamed into the harbor, and by invitation of the captain, King Strang proceeded to visit the vessel's officers. As he was about to step on the pier, two pistol shots were fired from behind, both taking effect. He turned and recognized the assassins as they fired again. As he sank to the ground they struck him over the head and face with the weapons, ran aboard the steamer and gave themselves up. They were taken to Mackinac, where the murderers were received as heroes. They were never brought to trial.

"The wounds of Strang proved fatal. He called his elders to his deathbed, gave them instructions for the government of his Mormon kingdom, and as a last request asked to be taken to the city of refuge which he had founded in Wisconsin. There he died July 9, 1856, and there his bones rest in an unmarked grave."

Elizabeth was married the same year by her father's choice, as was the custom then, to Goosma Chingwa. Having only one child which died in infancy, they adopted a boy, George Clayton, who was left at their home at his birth. Mr. and Mrs. Chingwa parted some years later.

Mrs. Chingwa made many beautiful baskets and useful articles out of birch bark, selling them in the summer time. She was also a fine needle-woman and had in her possession at the time of her death several specimens of intricate patterns, indicative of her art.

She leaves two sisters, Josephine in Canada, and Marion at Mackinac Island, her husband, Goosma Chingwa at Petoskey, and adopted son, George Clayton of Harbor Springs.

Blue Sunoco gas sales in Charlevoix increased 123 per cent in 1928 over 1927. Sunoco motor oil sales increased 106 per cent. PHONE RATES TAKE A DROP

DECREASE IN LONG DISTANCE CALLS FEBRUARY 1

Will Mean an Annual Saving of $5,000,000 to Users of Lines of the Bell System.

Another reduction of interstate long distance telephone rates by the American Telephone & Telegraph company was announced today by C. L. Johnson, manager here for the Michigan Bell Telephone company. The reduction will become effective February 1 and will mean an annual saving of $5,000,000 to the telephone users in the Bell system, he stated.

This reduction, which is the third announced during the past two years and four months, will apply to interstate calls made between 4:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. and for distances between 100 and approximately 1,500 miles. Evening and night period rates will remain unchanged.

The new interstate rates will represent a reduction of from five to 25 cents each on day station-to-station calls, or calls in which the calling party does not express a desire to talk with some person in particular. Equivalent reductions will be made in the rates on person-to-person calls, or calls in which the calling party specifies that he wishes to talk with some certain person.

The speeding of long distance service has made it possible to handle long distance calls at lower cost, and the saving is being passed along to the telephone users, it is stated. Connections on more than 90 per cent of long distance calls of the country now are completed while the calling subscriber remains on the line, which is made possible by improvements in equipment and methods and the increase of facilities. During 1928, approximately 1,500 miles of long distance telephone cable was constructed by the Bell system, which set a new record for a single year.

C. L. Johnson states that the reduction is in keeping with the Bell system policy, announced by President Walter S. Gifford of the American Telephone & Telegraph company, of furnishing the "best possible service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety." The last previous reduction in rates on interstate long distance calls became effective December 1, 1927, and resulted in an annual saving to telephone users of approximately $1,500,000. A reduction effective October 1, 1926, represented an annual saving of $3,000,000.

AT THE MOVIES

Gilbert and Garbo in New Photoplay.

John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, whose disarming naturalness in the more romantic interludes of "Flesh and the Devil," and "Love" caused a deal of speculation as to whether or not they took tea together as pleasantly when not climped by a camera, are the co-stars of "A Woman of Affairs," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, which will open at the Palace Theatre Saturday and Sunday.

The story of this film is by Michael Arlen, and the direction is by Clarence Brown, who also guided the players in "Flesh and the Devil." The cast, "all-star," according to the announcement, includes Lewis Stone, Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Sebastian, John Mack Brown and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

"Miss New Zealand Has Leading Role in New McCoy Film."

Four months ago a little New Zealand schoolgirl—now playing an important role in a big picture which may launch her as a star—this is the rapid transformation of Dale Austen, who, a "Miss New Zealand," winner of a theatre and newspaper contest in her native land, came to America to be introduced to the screen.

Miss Austen is playing the second feminine lead in "The Bushranger," Tim McCoy's vivid romance of the Australian plains, which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is to present next Wednesday and Thursday at the Palace theatre. She plays an English girl who comes to Australia as companion of the heroine to participate in a thrilling series of adventures.

WINTER SPORTS WENT OVER BIG

OPENING THURSDAY MARKED WITH SUCCESS.

Large Crowd Out for Afternoon Program—Petoskey Won Hockey Game in Evening.

With the weather man co-operating 100 per cent, Charlevoix's 4th annual winter sports program opened last Thursday afternoon with the first Polar Bear Day program. A three-day snow storm provided plenty of the beautiful for skiing and tobogganing and with practically every business place and the schools closed for the event, the city's population turned out en masse for the opening day.

Until the sport enthusiasts gathered at the Belvedere Golf Club grounds south of the city, it was not known there were so many skis in Charlevoix. There was an army of them, old and young alike, and sports reigned supreme. Youth conquered in the afternoon's competition when Ronald Swanson, local high school student, led a field of 50 starters in the cross-country ski race to win the event. Second and third places also went to youthful participants, Frank Smith and Gordon Neff finishing in the order named. A large entry of more mature contestants brought up the rear.

Trick skiing and jumping furnished entertainment for onlookers, while all with skis found a hill to suit their skill. It was late in the afternoon before the party broke up.

In the evening a nice crowd turned out for the hockey game at the school grounds rink. Due to the untiring efforts to those in charge of maintenance, the rink was found to be in excellent condition in spite of adverse weather. Petoskey carried home the bacon by a score of 8 to 1. Neither team had much teamwork owing to lack of practice, but the visitors displayed better individual skill. Petoskey's score might have been considerably higher except for the clever work of Heise, who went in as goal tender for Woods after the first five minutes of play. The visitors then had four goals, but with Heise watching the cage the story was different.

Petoskey was superior throughout, seeming to have better and faster skaters. Her defense was too much for the Charlevoix offense. Charlevoix's one goal came in the second period, when Sharrow, wing, got the puck close up and shot a neat one. Later in the game Sharrow received a bad cut under one eye and was forced out of the game.

Petoskey's scores were by Hooker, who shot two goals, Upton with three, Erfurth one, Golden two.

The lineups were:
Charlevoix—Forwards, Sharrow, Wagner; center, Gill; defense, Livingston and LaBlanc; goal, Woods. Substitutes—Kirby for Sharrow at forward; Foster for LaBlanc, Heise for Woods.

Petoskey—Forwards, Upton and Golden; center, Erfurth; defense, Hooker and Rautio; goal, Schilling. Substitutes—Myers, Fay, Miller and Jespersen.

The referee was D. T. McHugh, who handled the game nicely and fairly.

The visitors were extravagant in their praises of Charlevoix's rink, commending especially on the sidewalks, lights and other features. It is probable Charlevoix will play a return game with Petoskey in the near future and that the teams will meet often during the remainder of the season. With more practice, both will make a better showing.

JANUARY MEETING OF W. C. T. U. FRIDAY

Instructive and Entertaining Program Was Given.

The monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the hospitable home of Mrs. A. J. Usher, Clinton street, last Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. In spite of the stormy weather there was a fairly good attendance, 17 being present.

The usual business was conducted by the president, Mrs. Rife. After the business, an interesting program was presented by Mrs. Saltonstall, leader. Mrs. Miller rendered a beautiful piano solo, "Meditation," in a very pleasing manner.

The paper, "The Gateway of Tomorrow," which had been prepared by Mrs. Saltonstall, was read by Mrs. Pye, Mrs. Saltonstall not being present owing to the illness of Mr. Saltonstall. It was well prepared and very timely and much enjoyed by all.

LOCAL FISHERMEN HAVE EXPERIENCE

STORM BOUND FOUR DAYS AT SOUTH FOX ISLAND.

Wage Fierce Battle With Elements, Run Out of Food, But Return Safely.

Fear over the safety of Archie Cross, Irving Nowland and Nelson Holland, Jr., who left here early last Thursday morning on the gas boat Swallow for the fishing grounds off South Fox Island, was relieved Monday morning when the men returned after having been storm bound four days.

Provisioned for a two-day trip, the party left the harbor intending to set Thursday, lift the following morning and return that day. At about midnight Thursday a 50-mile gale with accompanying snow flurries set in and from then on until late Sunday night continued with unabated fury. For practically four days the crew of the Swallow waged a desperate battle with the elements, changing the position of the boat each time the wind shifted to keep in the sheltering lee of the island. The terrific gale and sub-zero temperature added none to their comfort and many times it was necessary to chop ice from the boat hull to keep it afloat. Continual running had diminished the supply of gasoline and had the storm lasted longer another mid-winter tragedy of the lakes might have been written in history.

With the storm's abatement Monday morning, the Charlevoix coast guards under Capt. Oscar Smith left here in their power life boat in search of the missing men. Fortunately they did not have to finish what might have been a 150-mile trip in their open boat, for they met the fishermen some distance out and both boats returned.

The experience of the Swallow's crew was a harrowing one. We understand they had been without food for over a day, but except for this and a lack of rest, were unharmed by the adventure.

WRITES OF NATIVE CITY, IN ONTARIO

ISAAC MILLS IS WINTERING
THERE WITH RELATIVES.

Notes Changes Since Residing There Has Celebrated His 87th Birthday Anniversary.

From Stratford, Canada, under date of January 7th, we have a letter from our friend, Isaac Mills, who has been a Courier subscriber for a great many years. He imparts the information that he has just passed his 87th birthday, so we will take occasion to extend our congratulations and wish him many more. His letter, which no doubt will interest his many friends in Charlevoix, follows:

"This being my 87th birthday and I being in my native town, perhaps I can say something that will be of interest to some of your readers, who, like myself, will remember the Stratford of a good many years ago.

"This has grown into a beautiful city. The old clay streets are paved, most with concrete, and the beautiful homes and trees are a wonder. The Provincial highway, making a circuit of Ontario from Sarnia to Ottawa, is a thing of beauty and joy to all. My friends here tell me that in the summer one will meet five American cars to one Canadian. They must be numerous, for most everyone here has a car and use them, too.

"The hydro-electric company have a circuit of wires from one end of Ontario to the other, taking in hundreds of cities, towns, villages and farms, with branches out in every direction among the farmers, who use the power for every imaginable purpose, even for grooming their stock, getting the hens up in the morning and starting them on their day's work. The power for all this is generated at Niagara.

"This may well be called a beautiful city, although it is a manufacturing town, having a great many factories and packing houses. And, to their shame, there is a brewery and government-controlled places where liquor may be bought by the quart. But there are a great many beautiful churches with large congregations.

"I have met several old school friends of 60 years ago or more. Some are the last left of a large family. Other families I knew are entirely gone. A good many Charlevoix folks would be interested if I should mention names, but I shall only mention my own, Isaac Mills."

BOYNE CITY FIVES WIN THREE GAMES

MADE CLEAN SWEEP OF SERIES
HERE TUESDAY NIGHT

Local Juniors Fell 14 to 13; Reserves
Lost 25 to 5 and Varsity by 14 to 7 Count.

Tuesday night was Boyne City's night at the Charlevoix gym. The visitors made a clean sweep of the three-game series, winning every contest by a comfortable margin except the curtain-opener.

The evening's program opened with a game between the Charlevoix and Boyne City junior high fives. The contest was marked by a spectacular rally by the local team in the second half which carried them within a single point of tying the score. Boyne led 8 to 1 at the intermission, but the shooting of Joe Smith cut their advantage 14 to 13 as the game closed. The teams were closely matched for strength and the game an interesting one.

Boyne City's reserves found the Charlevoix reserves to be easy picking in the second game of the evening, winning by the lopsided score of 25 to 5. The visitors were superior from the start, and although Charlevoix's line-up was shifted repeatedly, nothing would check their scoring.

After holding a slight advantage throughout the first two periods, Charlevoix's varsity five dropped their game with the Boyne tossers 14 to 7.

Bill Novak gave Charlevoix a 2-point lead when he dropped in a field goal soon after the opening whistle, two more followed in rapid succession by Marshall and Max Novak, giving the Red and White the advantage of a 6 to 1 score. Boyne's lone point being a free throw by Tryon. The visitors took time out to talk the situation over, made a guard substitution and then launched an attack that netted them two field goals before the period ended with the score 6 to 5.

During the second quarter the two teams battled on even terms. The extent of their scoring was a free throw apiece, although Charlevoix missed several chances to score from the foul line. The half ended with Kipke's men still holding the advantage of a 7 to 6 score.

Whether Boyne's defense tightened in the third period or Charlevoix's offense slipped is still unaccountable, but from then on the visitors were superior. They scored three goals to a single free throw for the locals during the quarter and led 12 to 7 when the period ended. Charlevoix waged a desperate battle to overcome the lead in the final period, but were held scoreless while Boyne added another field goal to their total.

Tryon starred for the visitors, scoring 7 of their 14 points. Fox, Boyne center, made 3. Max Novak led for Charlevoix with 3, while Marshall and Bill Novak scored a field goal each.

The program "Arise and Build," will be given on that evening by the ladies of the W. C. T. U., assisted by a choir of 25 young ladies under the direction of Mrs. Herman Burns.

It is requested that all taking part in the program will meet at the home of Mrs. T. W. Miller, 300 Clinton street, Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock sharp for rehearsal. The W. C. T. U. looks into the new year with bright anticipation of great things. The next meeting which will be held in February will be announced later.

BENEFIT BASKET- BALL TILT FRIDAY

PROCEEDS TO BUY UNIFORMS FOR SCHOOL BAND.

Polars vs. Petoskey Independents,
East Side vs. West Side—City
Co-operation is Asked.

The management of the Polar Bears, Charlevoix independent basketball five, have taken upon themselves the task of raising funds for a very worthy cause and have asked the co-operation of Charlevoix citizens.

They have arranged a benefit basketball game for Friday evening of this week, the proceeds to be used to buy uniforms for the high school band. Plans are under way to have the organization compete in the district school band tournament at Traverse City in the near future and Charlevoix will surely want her boys to look their best.

The head-liner of the evening bill is a game between the Polar Bears and Petoskey Independent five. It will mark the first engagement between the two teams and will be a good contest. Troubled by a small court, the Charlevoix five dropped in close contest to Pellston Monday night, it being their first defeat by a Northern Michigan team this season. The Polar Bears came from behind twice in the last quarter to tie the score, but in the final minutes were left behind, losing 32 to 25. They are out to revenge the defeat and will give Petoskey plenty of action.

Another feature of the evening's entertainment is a game between the business men. The Bridge street business district has been divided and the line-up will be East Side vs. West Side. Rumors emanating from the two camps would indicate more than usual rivalry between the opposing fives, so when these traditional rivals take the floor Friday evening a real battle is in prospect.

Tickets for the games are now out and members of the band will canvass the city. If you cannot attend the game, buy a ticket regardless and help the cause along. One of the purposes of the evening is a general get-together and hopes are held that it will result in permanent organization of teams among the business men. Indoor baseball, volleyball, hand ball and basketball will be made for to organize teams will be made.

Along with parts necessary for quick and efficient service, a line of Duco paints and enamels will be handled, also Goodrich tires and tubes. It is also planned to stock General Motors batteries and install equipment for re-charging.

The latest type of accessory racks have been installed in the garage, lending a neat appearance.

6,388 MILES OF HIGHWAY BUILT

HAD ONLY 14.5 MILES TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

Rapid Progress is Shown by Present Mileage—Value of Roads is Now $148,233,400.

The growth of Michigan's highway system from the day 24 years ago when there were but 14.5 miles of improved road in the state—six and one-half miles of gravel and eight of macadam—to 6,388 miles on June 30, 1928, is portrayed in the biennial report of the highway department recently made public.

In the 24 year period, $155,814,162 has been spent to improve the roads of the state, $835,323.98 has been spent in Charlevoix county.

Today the value of Michigan's highways is $148,233,400. The figure was calculated by subtracting the amount spent in the early days on improvements, which have since been replaced, from the total amount which has been expended. Of the 119 million dollars $27,889,361 has been paid by counties and nearly 21 million by the federal government.

Michigan's first 14.5 miles of improved roads cost $50,493.

First Concrete

Just 20 years ago, in 1908—the first concrete paving was laid in the state. It amounted to 2.4 miles out of a program that brought the state's improved mileage to 229 miles. Gravel and macadam were then the predominant types of road improvement and they shared almost equally in the work done up to that time.

In 1913 when the state trunk line system was inaugurated with 2,166 miles there were 44.6 miles of concrete, 529.7 miles of gravel, 275.5 miles of macadam, 4.8 miles of bituminous macadam and 2.1 miles of highway improved with stamp sand.

Use of macadam as a hard surfacing means reached the peak of its popularity in 1923 when there were 757 miles of it in the state. Since that time it has been replaced with concrete until the present report shows 569 miles of it in the state's system.

It was in 1926 that the state had the most gravel surfacing with 3,340 miles and the last two years has seen that drop to 3,213. Concrete during that time has continually increased until there are now 1,751 miles of it in the system and when present contracts are completed there will be 2,154 miles.

Federal Aid.

Up until 1918 there had been spent $14,267,587 on highways, and it is worthy of note that in the last 11 years the federal government alone has contributed more than that amount to highway improvement in the state. These figures show that in the years preceding 1919 an average of about $500,000 was spent annually on roads and that in the last 10 years the average has been more than 10 million dollars per year.

Following is a tabulation of the distribution of highway work in the last 24 years in northern Michigan:

Counties	Miles	Money

The First Weeks Are the Easiest

Resolutions

UNDER THE DOME AT THE STATE CAPITOL.

There has been nothing about the opening week at the State Legislature to give indication that Michigan is to have a record short session this winter, except as urged by the governor, the lieutenant-governor and the speaker of the House of Representatives in their opening messages to the legislative branches. Both houses of the legislature took recess on Jan. 10 to Jan. 21 to make the customary rounds of state institutions to study their conditions and needs.

Among the first matters to be offered for consideration was the blanket appropriation measure introduced as an administration bill and providing for appropriations to cover all the financial requirements of the state for the biennial period. This is an innovation in state legislation in that it is the first time the legislature has had a definite, complete figure at the opening of the session, showing what all the institutional and departmental requirements will be.

A most unique feature of the bill was the exclusion of items for building at the state institutions. The measure provides for a separation of this phase of institutional requirements and operating costs, leaving the latter to be taken care of by the property tax but placing new building costs under a proposed income tax scheme which would take some 23 million dollars from the inheritance tax collected for the federal government during the ensuing four years by making it possible for Michigan to levy a 5 per cent income tax annually with this diversion in mind. The 23 million dollars indicated is shown as the total amount required under the administration's building program which takes into consideration plans for the next 10 years.

The total property tax, according to the appropriation measure, would be approximately $58,000,000 for the biennium, $33,939,992 being the first year's levy proposed and $33,853,157 the levy for the second year. This would be a property tax relief of about seven million dollars for the two years, and is the first definite attempt at reducing the property tax that has been suggested by any administration in recent years in Michigan.

Provision is made in this measure to set aside a million dollars annually for use by the administration board at its discretion in emergencies. An increase of funds for the state department of public safety is recommended to enable the state police force to increase its staff of patrolmen, for the trunkline highways.

Regarding the pay of the legislators, under the new rate of pay voted them last fall by the taxpayers, a measure introduced in both houses after careful consideration by a joint committee, would allow the lawmakers $300 a month during the session and, after the session closes, $90 a month, after the lapse of sufficient time to allow the regular pay schedule of $3.00 a day, as voted by the taxpayers to "catch up", so to speak, with the amounts paid during the session. This plan would mean the solons would draw no pay for a time after the legislature adjourns, because they would have been paid slightly in advance.

The first attempt at revising the schedule of distributing motor vehicle taxes was made by Rep. Ate Dykstra of Kent county, who proposes to split the weight tax three ways, to give the cities, villages and townships one third, based on their motor vehicle registrations, one third to the counties and one third to the state.

The first move to remove liquor law violations from the mandatory life sentence provision of the criminal code was made in the house by Rep. Vincent P. Fox of Detroit.

His plan includes the listing of the major felonies which would be punishable by mandatory life terms for fourth offenses. The felonies listed in his bill are murder, robbery, robbery armed, burglary, assault with intent to do great bodily harm, common law and statutory rape, forgery, perjury and arson or attempts to commit any of those offenses. Dacey's bill was referred to the judiciary committee of the house.

Other plans for amending the code's habitual criminal provision are being considered. Wilber M. Brucker, attorney general, is preparing an amendment under which persons convicted of four violations of the liquor law would be liable to mandatory prison terms ranging between 7 1/2 and 15 years instead of life imprisonment as the code now provides. This amendment is to be offered as the administration plan for clarifying the code.

The administration appropriation bill providing for a total of $67,793,149 for the biennium was introduced by Rep. Fred McEachron, Hudsonville, chairman of the ways and

GLORIOUS HEALTH AND LIFE ENERGY GIVEN THIS LADY

Konjola Relieved Her of Terrible Stomach Suffering

MRS. LENA J. MARTIN

"Konjola has given me better health than I have known for more than ten years and that is why I am anxious to have others know of this remarkable medicine," said Mrs. Lena J. Martin, Route 3, Sereco, Michigan, (near Battle Creek).

"Stomach trouble was the cause of all my misery and in spite of everything I did for relief, my condition only grew worse. Terrible pains in the pit of my stomach were getting to be more than I could stand. Sometimes my heart would palpitate so fast from the pressure of gas that I thought it would stop at any time. My whole system became weak and run down and I was getting more discouraged all the time.

"All these symptoms began to leave after I had been taking Konjola for a few days, and from day to day, I could notice an improvement all over my system. Now I enjoy good health and new life energy and never suffer the slightest misery from my stomach pains."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store and by all the best druggists in every town throughout this section.

means committee, and referred to that committee.

Armistice Day would be made a legal holiday in Michigan according to a measure offered by Rep. Frank Wade, Flint.

Rep. Joseph E. Warner, Ypsilanti, submitted a bill which would relieve owners of motor vehicles from liability for injury or damage sustained by gratuitous passengers.

Senator Herbert J. Rushton of Escanaba, introduced a bill of considerable importance to insurance policy holders. This has to do with permitting legal process out of any justice court so that a policy-holder seeking suit against a domestic insurance concern could go into court in the county where he resides rather than have to start suit against the county where the concern is located, as is the case under the present law, regulating domestic insurance concerns only.

A bill brought into the senate by Senator Charles Richardson of Marquette, provides for an amendment to the state law requiring a uniform system of accounting, enabling the state's attorney general to request an audit of the books of any state or county department or institution when conditions warranted such request and extending the system and provision for such requested audit down to certain townships and school districts. Another bill by Senator Richardson would enable a taxpayer to request a similar audit at his own expense, when conditions warrant it, with provision for recompense in case discrepancies were found as charged by the taxpayer.

Other bills introduced just before the legislature recessed provide for: Making it impossible for either one of a couple securing a divorce to remarry within one year and making it optional with the court to extend this period to a maximum of two years where conditions warrant it; paying compensation to state supreme justices at one-half their regular pay after retirement when they have served on the supreme bench 16 years or attained the age of 70 years while in service; prohibiting the making of any charge for accepting motor vehicle license applications; authorizing township boards to make improvements in certain platted lands and assess taxes and making a legal holiday of Armistice Day.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS By B. C. Mellenkamp

Are You Making Money From Your Poultry?

The winter feeding of poultry presents a difficult problem owing to the necessity of supplying spring conditions to the birds. These conditions can be approximated to a marked degree by the use of green feed, cod-liver oil, and proper housing conditions.

The usual ration for layers consists of a poultry mash and a scratch feed. The mash may either be purchased ready mixed or made up at home. The scratch feed may consist of equal parts of cracked yellow corn and whole wheat, or may be purchased ready mixed, but in any case no feed purchased or mixed is superior to corn and wheat.

In addition there should be a liberal supply of limestone grit and oyster shells, also an abundance of clean, fresh water, not too cold. Green food, which is very essential, should be given in the form of cabbage, sprouted oats, carrots and other roots. Alfalfa leaves are excellent and whether available will be as valuable as any of the above. Milk or buttermilk should be given in some form, liquid, semi-solid or powder.

Several vitamins must be present in the laying rations if the eggs are of proper quality and the birds in a healthy and vigorous condition. Of the vitamins, A and D are most essential. A is the "growth vitamin" and aids the life process. It occurs in yellow corn and yellow carrots, also in alfalfa leaves, and is abundantly present in cod-liver oil. This is the most reliable source. Vitamin D is called the "sunshine vitamin" since it replaces the direct benefits of sunshine. It enables the birds to convert the calcium and phosphorus, taking into the system into strong, bony structures. It also produces stronger shelled eggs. Vitamin D is the scarcest of all the important vitamins. It is found only in fats and by far the richest known source is cod-liver oil of good quality. If you feed a purchased mash, be sure that it is guaranteed to contain cod-liver oil potent in its vitamin content. If you mix your own ration, use about one quart of oil to 100 birds per week. This may be fed in a wet mash, mixed with the scratch feed, or in milk.

The benefits of feeding oil are many. The hens will lay more eggs. The eggs will be heavier and have stronger shells. It also increases the fertility of the eggs to a marked degree for hatching purposes.

Do you know how much your hens make for you? Are you keeping them or do they keep you?

Some good practical farm records were kept recently in Marquette county in 15 farm flocks. A total of 1560 birds were reported on. They average 163.7 eggs per hen for the year. The feed averaged $2.45 per hen and the profit above the feed cost was $2.53.

The 1560 hens made a net profit of $3,950, which would make a nice profit for one man. The high flock made 221 eggs per hen and $3.56 profit. The next with 220 eggs and $4.25 profit due to different prices of feeds. The low flock made 90.4 eggs and 56 cents profit. The average price received per dozen eggs was 36.5 cents, thus it took about 7 dozen eggs to pay the cost of feed.

In other words your hen must lay at least 85 eggs to break even. The added production means profit. Do you know how much your hens lay? How much does it cost you to feed them? If not, why not?

BLAME SMOKER FOR MANY FIRES

Take First Place in List Compiled by State—Railroads Are Next.

The smoker is condemned again. Figures just arrived at by the forest fire protection division of the conservation department, reveal that the user of tobacco was blamed for causing 506 fires during the past year. At least Michigan's fire fighters were called out to handle that many blazes and their investigation convinced them that some careless smoker had been responsible originally.

Railroads were the worst offenders outside of the smokers. They caused 258 blazes. Brush burning was third in line with 189 fires laid up against this practice. So far as the dollar and cents damage was concerned, however, the smoker stood head and shoulders above all others. The 506 blazes cost an estimated total of $34,319.76. The blazes originating from sources attributed to the railroads, cost but a fraction of this, the total being $3,988.46.

The classification of forest fires causes and the number of blazes in each division follows: Smokers, 506; railroads, 258; brush burning, 189; unknown, 113; miscellaneous, 86; incendiary, 58; campfires, 54; lumbering, 17; lightning, 13.

A study of these and other figures contained in the annual report reveal some interesting information. For instance, it required 5.5 men to control the average fire. The average blaze was under control in three hours and 16.3 minutes after it was discovered. It covered something like 50.78 acres. The upper peninsula escaped with only 13,705 acres burned over while the lower peninsula total was 52,532. There were nearly twice as many fires below the straits as above, those originating in the southern half totalling 875 while in the northern section there were only 429.

CORRESPONDENCE NORWOOD

The Kerr children, who were confined to their home on account of severe colds, are in school again.

For the past ten days a wave of real winter weather seems to have settled over the country generally.

Jos. Holecheck opened the road to Norwood Monday so our R. F. D. carrier could go his rounds with the mail.

Antone Holecheck, now occupying the Stanford farm, is getting his home near Charlevoix ready to move into soon.

Frank Brown has erected a new modern well house, which he finds very convenient to furnish water both for his house and barns.

Mrs. E. R. Jones, who has spent the past month visiting her sons, Robt. Jones and family and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Jones of Port Huron, also another son, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Jones of Detroit, returned to her home on Monday.

Mrs. Frank Richardson received word a few days ago of the death of her cousin, George Wagner of Hudson, Mich., who died from pneumonia. Mrs. Richardson enjoyed a visit with Mr. Wagner last fall at his farm home near Hudson.

FLU is now Epidemic!

Compared with 1918, this epidemic, so far, is mild; and yet, in spite of vastly increased capacity, the Vicks laboratories are once more operating night and day to meet the emergency demand for more and more Vicks VapoRub. Over 375,000 jars are now being produced daily.

How best to use Vicks VapoRub

1. AS A PREVENTIVE

Several times a day, insert Vicks up the nostrils. Also melt a little night and morning in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming medicated vapors. This helps to ward off germ-infection.

2. IF A COLD STARTS

If possible, go home and go to bed. Take a laxative and a hot lemonade. Apply hot, wet towels over throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. Then rub vigorously with Vicks. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-covering loose, so that the vapors, released by the body-warmth, may be freely inhaled. At the same time, Vicks also acts through the skin like a poultice.

Repeat this treatment every four hours, eat lightly, and stay in bed until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body throw off the cold more quickly.

3. AFTER A FLU ATTACK

Physicians advise that the chief danger in this epidemic is after influenza. Then, more than ever, colds, attacking the weakened system, may lead to bronchitis, sinus-trouble or pneumonia. This is especially true of children or old folks.

Heed even the slightest cold as a danger signal. Vicks is especially valuable here, because it is applied externally, and so can be used freely, as often as needed, without upsetting delicate digestions, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

Telephone Progress

The year 1928 has been one of outstanding telephone development and progress. During the past year expansion of telephone facilities of Michigan commanded the expenditure of more than $25,000,000. During 1929 it is planned to expend upwards of $26,500,000.

The expansion program for the five years ending December 31, 1933, contemplates the expenditure of approximately $136,000,000.

This program is in line with our policy which is:

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

"Look," he urged cheerfully. "Those boys were too green to burn. We won't have to rebuild. They'll make a fire. A fire round the edges maybe, but it'll be as good as new. We're not in a hurry. They can't hurt our land. I'll have this that right now. It stands—there's three times as much as the range and it's all our own. We can rebuild the place in winter while work is slack. It's better than before."

His enthusiasm failed to touch her. For her the Three Bar was wrecked, the old home gone, and her gaze kept straying back to the creaking black smokestack at the foot of the hills.

They rode from the devastated fields and mugged southwest across the range. When some ten miles from the Three Bar Harris dismounted on a ridge and she joined him, listening with entire indifference to his optimistic plans.

"We're only scratched," he said. "It won't matter in the end."

"This is the end," she dissented. "The Three Bar is done."

"It's just the start," he returned. "It's the end for them? Don't you see? They staked everything on one big raid that would smash the Three Bar and discontinue the rest from duplicating our move. That would give Slade a new lease of life—delay the inevitable for a few more years. They made one last attempt and lost. They're through," he asserted positively. "That's their last shot. We're only delayed—that's all. The housestead cul-de-sac is only cleared. The old buildings at the ranch are gone. I'll put a crew in the hills getting out new logs and there'll be enough out-of-job peckers riding grub-line to rebuild the whole place. We've got our land. The hay is tramped that right now but the roots aren't hurt. Next spring will show the whole that coming up with a heavy stand of hay."

"You're a good partner, Cal," she said. "You've done your best. But the whole thing would only happen over again. Slade's too strong for us."

"Slade's through," he asserted. "He's locked up and when he gets out his hands will be tied. Inside of a month the law will be in the saddle for the first time in years. Once Al den gets a grip on things, with folks behind him, he'll never lose it again."

He painted the future of the Three Bar as the foremost outfit within a hundred miles, but her mind was busy with a future so entirely different from the one he portrayed that she scarcely grasped his words. Always she had heard her parents speak of the day when they should go back home; and she had always felt that the day would come when she, too, would live in the place from which they had come—with frequent trips back to the range. The love for the ranch had delayed her departure from year to year. But now the old familiar buildings were gone and there were no ties to hold her here, or even to call her back once she was gone.

Harris rose and pointed, rousing her from her abstraction. Down in the valley below them flled a long line of dusty horsemen.

"There is the law!" he said. "That's what I brought you here to see. It's what we've been waiting for. That little procession stands for organized law."

She turned and looked behind her as her ear caught the thud of hoofs and clatter of equipment. The Three Bar men were just tamping the ridge.

Harris knew that action, not inaction was the best outlet for her energies, temporarily smothered by the shock of the raid.

"I thought maybe you'd like to go," he said. "The hand will do you good." She showed the first sign of interest she had evidenced.

"And we're going to the Breaks," she stated.

"That's where," he said. "We'll order them to give up and stand trial. They won't. Then we'll clean them out. Hunt them down like rats!"

The little band in the valley was drawing near. She recognized Carp, Hentley and another Slade man riding with the sheriff at their head.

"What's Hentley doing there?" she asked.

"One of Carp's men," Harris said. "If any of them get away from us Carp will hunt them down. He wears the U. S. badge and won't be stopped by my feeling about crossing the Utah or Idaho lines. Instilling in of no interest to him. That's the sheriff's job. But Carp will round them up for obstructing the home-stand law."

The Three Bar men came up and halted. Harris and the girl changed mounts and led their men down to join the file of riders below.

It was well after sundown when they halted in a sheltered valley. Waddies cooked a meal over an open fire. Bed rolls were spread and the men were instantly asleep. Three hours before snip the code was once more busy round a fire.

The meal was bolted and each man lashed a generous lunch on his saddle before riding off.

Daylight found them twenty miles from camp and the horses were breathing hard. They turned into a coulee threaded by a well-worn trail. Three miles along this Hentley turned to the right up a lurching gulch with eight men. Another mile and Carp led a similar detachment off to the left. Little rode with the sheriff and Harris at the head of the rest, holding to the beaten trail.

Harris motioned to Billie. "You fall back," he said. "The men had drawn their rifles from the scabbards. They never did post a guard, but there's just a chance. So for a little piece you'd better bring up the rear."

Harris turned up a side pocket and the men waited while he and the sheriff climbed a ridge on foot to investigate. Harris motioned to the girl.

"Come along up where you can see," he said and she followed them up the ridge.

"From behind a sage-clump Harris raised his glasses on the group a mile out across the shallow basin. Two men stood before a torped near the stockade. There were two other tents inside the structure, with a number of men moving about them."

He handed his glasses to the girl. "We'll be starting," he said. "By the time we get fixed the rest will be riding in. You stay here and watch the whole thing."

"I'm going along," she said. "I'm as good a shot as there is in the hills. And it was my ranch they burned."

The sheriff shoved back his hat and pushed his fingers through his mop of gray hair.

"Fact," he confessed. "Every word But there's savans of men in this country—and such a lot in scattering few of girls that we just can't take the risk. That's how it is. If you don't promise to stay out if it will have to detail a couple of the boys to ride guard on you till it's over with."

She knew that the other men would back Harris and Alden in their verdict. She nodded and watched them turn back toward the horses.

There was nothing spectacular in the attack of Harris and the sheriff. They went about it as if hunting vermin, cautiously and systematically, taking every possible advantage of the enemy with the least possible risk to their men. The advance was slow as they closed in on the stockade. There was a sudden commotion among the men at the building. They were moving swiftly under cover. Some of the attacking force had been seen. The majority of the rustlers took to the stockade. Four ran into the main cabin.

It was as if she gazed upon the activities of battling ants, the whole game spread out in the field of her glasses. There came a lull in the action and she knew that the sheriff had raised his voice to summon them to come out without their guns and go back as prisoners to stand trial for every crime under the sun.

Not a shot had been fired. Inside the stockade she could see Lang's men kneeling or flattened on the ground as they gazed through cracks in the walls.

She made out Harris, crouching in a draw. A thin haze of smoke spurted from his position. Three smaller puffs showed along the face of the stockade. Then the sounds of the shots drifted in—faint, snappy reports. Throughout the next half-hour there was no more firing in the flat, no general bombardment, no wild shooting, but guerrilla warfare where every man told his fire for a definite human target. A man stiffened his position in the stockade, raised to peer from a hole breast high, and she saw him pitch down on the ground before the sound of the shot reached her. One of her men had noted the darkening of the crack and had searched him out with a rifle shot. Three shots answered it from the main cabin.

She presently noted one of her men sitting under a sheltering bank and eating his lunch. She looked at her watch; it was after three—the day more than half gone and less than a hundred shots had been fired. Five men were down in the stockade.

The shadows lengthened rapidly and her view through the glasses was beginning to blur when the gates of the stockade swung back and five horses dashed out, running at top speed under the urge of the spurs, a wild stampede for safety, every man for himself.

She saw one man lurch sideways and slip to the ground; another straightened in the saddle, swung for two jumps, and slid off backward across the rump of his mount. The shooting ceased when six shots had fired. Four riderless horses were crawling round the basin.

The stockade was empty, leaving only four in the house to be accounted for. A thin point of light attracted her eye. It grew and spread. She knew that one of her men had crawled up under cover of night and fired the house. She thought of the burning buildings on the Three Bar and rose to make her way back to the pocket where the horses had been, left in the care of a deputy.

All three in the day she had scarcely moved and she was tired. The hours of inactivity had proved more wearing than a day in the saddle. Harris and the sheriff came in with their detail. There were no prisoners.

A little later Hentley's men rode up and five minutes behind them came Carp with the rest, and at last Hentley turned in. At daylight the long return journey to the Three Bar was commenced. Twenty miles out from the ranch and before noon of the next day the sheriff and the marshals had split off with their men, leaving the Three Bar crew to ride the short intervening space to the ranch alone.

As she neared the edge of the Crazy loop valley the girl descended the first glimpse of the pillared ranch.

They had reached the edge of the valley and she looked down upon the ruins.

"Now I'm ready to go," she said. "I'll go and see what Judge Eldon wants."

"He wanted you to get away before anything like this occurred," Harris said. "I knew that maybe you'd have tough going for a while at some critical time and wanted you to miss all of that to come back and find the Three Bar burning along without having been through all the grief. So I wrote him to urge you to come."

"Well, I'm going now," she said. "I don't need to be urged."

Harris pointed as they rode down the slope. The little cabin that old Bill Harris had first erected on the Three Bar, and which had later sheltered the Warrens when they came into possession of the brand, stood solid and unharmed among the blackened ruins which hemmed it in on all sides.

"Look, girl," he exclaimed triumphantly. "Look at that little house. The Three Bar was started with that! We have as much as our folks started with—and more. They even had to build that. We'll start where our folks did, and grow."

"Sacrament" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, January 13.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." (John 13:34.)

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "It is possible—yes, it is the duty and privilege of every child, man, and woman—to follow in some degree the example of the Master by the demonstration of Truth and Life, of health and holiness." (p. 37.)

IDEALS OF GOVERNMENT
If we examine democracy in its larger aspects, we will find that government by the people is fundamentally a spiritual ideal—that it cannot succeed unless that ideal is rooted in the hearts of the people, unless it is supported by an understanding of its great purpose; and this understanding cannot exist in a people without widespread education, not only in education in the ways and means and purposes of democracy itself. Furthermore, it cannot survive without a large supply of capable leadership and a willingness of the citizen to exercise its franchise as a citizen. But beyond all these fundamentals, democracy must be expressed in practical machinery which not only maintains and fertilizes this idea, but gives it effective expression in practical government.—Herbert Hoover.

JUDGES FOR LIFE

The 1929 Michigan legislature will be asked to submit an amendment to the state constitution requiring appointment for life for judges of the supreme and circuit courts. This proposal will come from a Wayne county member of the state senate. Proponents of this idea believe it will result in removing judges from politics.

Here is a bit of legislative departmenture that should be approached very carefully. Political influence very rarely touches the lives of circuit court judges in the rural sections of the state, and there is no particular burden imposed in compelling them to seek re-election every six years.

We know of no circuit judge in Michigan who will experience any real difficulty in being re-elected to additional terms as long as he remains sufficiently qualified as to health and mental ability. Even with restricted tenure of office there have been many instances where circuit court judges have sought and obtained an additional six years on the bench after they had reached a physical and mental condition that precluded their giving intelligent and satisfactory attention to their exacting duties.

Human nature is pretty near everywhere the same, and it is only natural to believe that with life tenure many of the occupants of this most important office in our civic life would be tempted, because of salary and position, to continue on the job long after their usefulness to society had come to an end. This is a question that will bear most searching reflection.

PETTY OFFENSES

Did the legislature make a mistake two years ago when it made simple assault and petty larceny circuit court offenses, classed as felonies and as such placed in the same class as major crimes? Many law enforcement officials believe this to be the case.

Previous to the adoption of the present crime code these petty offenses were handled in justice courts and it never occurred to anybody that this means of disposing of them was in any way ineffective.

Today, the man who, in the heat of passion, slaps his neighbor, or the poor unfortunate who steals fifteen cent's worth of coal, must undergo the hardship of having his case go through two courts instead of one, with extra attorney expense to himself and an additional expense to the taxpayers.

And that is not all. It is the purpose of the framers of the new crime code to relieve the congested condition of the courts by providing more direct means of bringing offenders to justice, yet at the same time they add these petty offenses to their dockets which, in many instances, make a shambles of our higher courts. A change in this part of the code might be worthy of consideration.

CRIMINAL CODE CHANGES

The 1929 session of the Michigan legislature will undoubtedly witness many attempts to revamp the criminal code laws passed during the legislative session two years ago.

Efforts will be made to make violations of the prohibition laws misdemeanors instead of felonies, fourth conviction of which makes mandatory a life sentence. Many clear-thinking people believe this inflicts too severe a penalty in proportion to the crime.

The legislature should proceed carefully in this direction. If the law making body of the state is in earnest regarding enforcement of the prohibition laws they will hesitate to weaken them by reducing the penalties for violation.

Perhaps making first offenses a misdemeanor, with subsequent violations felonies, might prove some sort of a solution that would not work an injustice. Certainly the persistent violator of the prohibition laws is entitled to no more sympathy than any other violator. It is a situation that calls for the best efforts of those who make the laws.

SUCKER BAIT

Beware of the stock promotion newspapers that are being mailed out by the millions from Eastern industrial centers, they are baited for suckers and it is the wise man who foregoes their liberal advice and predictions in financial matters.

While apparently giving correct news of the markets these papers are loaded with hidden propaganda regarding unlisted stocks, which are boomed to the skies as money-making possibilities, but which are their own promotion schemes brought out to trap the unwary.

The United States Chamber of Commerce says that over a billion dollars is taken from the pockets of the American people every year through these fake promotion schemes. These white collar handits never declare a dividend, not a single dollar sent to them for investment is ever returned to their dupes, they work on a one hundred per cent margin and every attempt to make them disgorge has proven fruitless. If you have money for investment purposes—consult your banker first.

WHO MAKES THE BOOTLEGGER.

The nation is excited about the woman in Michigan who may go to jail for life for bootlegging. It is her fourth conviction and under laws of Michigan, recently enacted, the fourth conviction of a crime means life in the penitentiary.

We have sympathy for the woman.

But we shall not talk about her. We talk too much about those who manufacture liquor and not enough about those who make bootleggers.

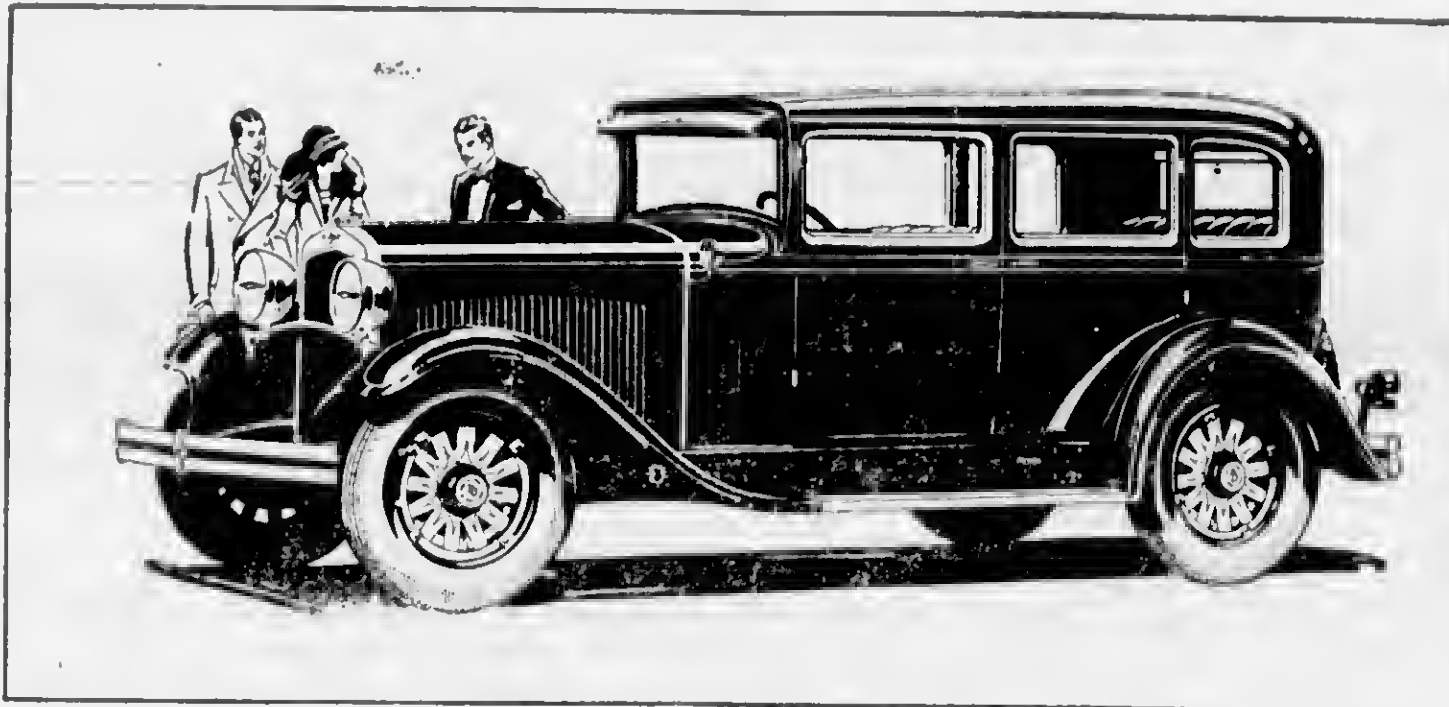

People violate the prohibition laws because someone will patronize them. As a matter of fact there is not much difference between the bootlegger and his customers. Both violate the laws. Neither cares for the laws.

The bootlegger is worse in one respect because he violates the laws to make money.

The purchaser is worse in another way because he is a hypocrite who moves in good society, talks about the sanctity of the law, cries for enforcement of laws made to protect

THE NEW

DODGE BROTHERS SIX PRESENTED BY WALTER P. CHRYSLER

—[FROM THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, JANUARY 5, 1929]—

THE NEW Dodge Brothers Six furnishes unsalable evidence of the unlimited capabilities of the great forces of the Chrysler Corporation when marshalled to full strength in any enterprise.

From an engineering standpoint, it is a supreme achievement of a group of engineers whose scientific accomplishments have revolutionized contemporary automobile design.

We believe that in performance, in new measures of comfort, in long-lived excellence, and in persistent and inherent value, it surpasses every previous conception of what a car at this price could possibly be.

The utmost we would ask is that you actually see, examine and test the car itself—demanding of it more than you ever before have asked of any motor car at or near its price.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT ANNUAL MEETING

Report Indicate Temple Indebtedness Will Be Cleared in Two Years

Some hundred and thirty members of the Masonic and Eastern Star orders, together with their families, were present Tuesday evening at the annual meeting of the Charlevoix Masonic Building and Loan association held at the temple.

Supper was served by the Eastern Stars at 6:30, after which the regular business meeting was held in the lodge rooms. Three directors whose terms had expired were re-elected for three years, viz: Robert Bridge, L. E. Benton and Dr. Frank Wilkinson, while Olaf Nordrum was re-elected chairman for a one-year period. M. A. Levinson was chosen as a member of the auditing committee for 3 years to serve with A. J. Usher and Archie Livingston.

Twenty-eight shares of stock were sold and the records showed that $2,000.00 had been paid off during the past year, which seems to warrant the assumption that another two years will see the temple entirely free from debt.

A meeting of the trustees will be held in the near future, at which time the nine members will choose one of their number as treasurer. D. S. Payton has served in this capacity for several years and it is expected he will be re-appointed.

FAIR PREMIUMS ARE TO BE PAID

Charlevoix County Supervisors Appropriate $2,000.

At the October meeting of the Charlevoix County Board of Supervisors the request of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society for an appropriation of $2,000 to help defray expenses was, through a misunderstanding, reduced to $1,000.

Last Monday, President P. R. Bulow and Secretary Kit Carson of the fair association, together with Howard Porter and Roscoe Mackey of this city, met with the supervisor board and after discussion, the board voted the additional $1,000 requested.

Owing to this delay, premiums for the 1928 fair have been held up for lack of funds to pay the entire amount. Checks for these will be mailed in the near future.

While the 1928 exhibit was a financial success, the association was put to considerable extra expense in building the new grand stand and other improvements.

Officers and directors of the association are already planning on the biggest and best fair this coming fall that was ever held in the history of the organization. The dates are the last Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of August—27-28-29-30.—East Jordan Herald.

APPOINT CIRCUIT JUDGES FOR A LIFE TERM

Legislature May Submit Such an Amendment This Year.

The 1929 Michigan legislature will be asked to submit an amendment to the state constitution requiring appointment of life for judges of the supreme and circuit courts. This proposal will come from a Wayne county member of the state senate. Proponents of this idea believe it will result in removing judges from politics.

Here is a bit of legislative department that should be approached very carefully. Political influence very rarely touches the lives of circuit court judges in the rural sections of the state, and there is no particular burden imposed in compelling them to seek re-election every six years.

We know of no circuit judge in Michigan who will experience any real difficulty in being re-elected to additional terms as long as he remains sufficiently qualified both as to health and mental ability. Even with restricted tenure of office there have been many instances where circuit court judges have sought and obtained an additional six years on the bench after they had reached a physical and mental condition that precluded their giving intelligent and satisfactory attention to their exacting duties.

Human nature is pretty near everywhere the same, and it is only natural to believe that with life tenure many of the occupants of this most important office in our civic life would be tempted, because of salary and position, to continue on the job long after their usefulness to society had come to an end. This is a question that will bear most searching reflection.—Ionia News.

General News

Exams for the month are over at last but now the students of Charlevoix high school face a more vitally important question—that of semester exams which come in a week or two. It's about time each student was getting out the brain polish to clean and restore his brain so he may recall all of his back work. Bring on the exams!

There have been many cases of flu and a number of the students have been absent for several days. However, peace is again restored and about everyone is back in their place. The students of Charlevoix high school resolved to start the New Year out right by not talking or chewing gum, by paying attention in classes, and resolved to study their lessons more thoroughly. We wonder just how long they can keep it up.

The high school girls' sextet sang for the Lady Macabees at their installation meeting Tuesday evening, January 8.

The girls have begun to practice basketball. The freshmen and juniors practice together and the sophomores and seniors. They played the preliminary at the independent game last Wednesday. They appreciate very much the showers and hair dryers in the gym.

The high school students and others are glad to know that on Thursday of this week "The First Year" will be presented at the gym as the next number of the lyceum course. Everyone likes a good comedy and "The First Year" promises to afford a hearty laugh.

Mr. North returned last Thursday from Bay City, where he was called by the serious illness and subsequent death of his mother.

School was dismissed Thursday afternoon in honor of Polar Bear Day. Students turned out in great numbers and skiing and tobogganing was enjoyed by all.

Wilma Wells received a silver medal from the Underwood Typewriter company for typing 50 words a minute, while Nellie Smith received a bronze medal for typing 42 words a minute.

English Department

The English classes were not held on Tuesday, with the exception of Senior English, under Mr. Coleman, on account of the absence of Mrs. McKinley.

The first and second year English classes have declamations in store for them. We shall see in time who will be the orators of Charlevoix. Some of the students have begun the work on them already. These declamations have to be memorized word for word and it will be no easy task.

The Juniors are taking up the life of James Fenimore Cooper and his works.

Athletic News

Charlevoix basketball team won its second consecutive game from East Jordan Tuesday night at East Jordan. The game was hard fought and clean all the way through.

East Jordan got an early lead and held it to the half. With alterations in Charlevoix's defense, East Jordan scored but one basket in the last half, while Charlevoix scored consistently. The game ended 20 to 12.

The team is traveling in championship form which was shown in the last two games. Vic Smith proved to be the fifth man on the team when he played a stellar game at both Pellston and East Jordan.

Get the basketball habit now and come out and see the biggest game of the season this Tuesday, January 15th, with Boyne City's all-veteran team at Charlevoix gym.

The basketball team did not lose practice during Christmas vacation. Although two members of the regular team turned their ankles while they were practicing for the East Jordan game, it did not interfere with our winning the game. Both the varsity and reserve teams won, the varsity by a score of 19 to 12 and the reserves 13 to 7. The girls played the preliminary to the Polar Bear game with Gaylord on Wednesday, January 9th. This was also a close game.

Domestic Science

The domestic science class has agreed to a proposition by which the writers of the best test papers may be rewarded. The class was divided equally, and when the papers are averaged, the side that averages the highest will be treated by the others. You would think that everyone would study hard and do her best on the examinations.

History Department

The Ancient History classes have been very much excited lately over the question, "Who gave more to the world, the Dorians or the Ionians?" Each person had something to say for his side. Leaders were chosen and then, after everyone had said something, the four persons having the highest points on both sides could sum up the statements for their side. The conclusion in the fifth hour class was a victory for the Dorians, while the Ionians were victorious in the eighth hour class.

The American History class has completed its study of the Literary Digest and are now studying the department of the national government.

County Normal Notes

Influenza has caused an unusual number of absences in the normal room.

Miss Straw and Miss Mosley have returned to their school duties. Our second term of teaching begins next Monday.

There was no school last Thursday afternoon, it being Polar Bear day. For our work in geography, we have a Beacon regional map of South America, a Nystrom physical map of the United States, and a 12-inch desk globe.

A musical treat has been promised the normal class for some day in the near future.

School Spirit

Come on, students, let's have a little school spirit!

What does school spirit mean? It doesn't mean only cheering at the games, nor just good behavior, or even good grades. Then you may say, just what does it mean?

School spirit is a combination of all of these things, put together in a way that they may all harmonize. Let's buckle down and show our school spirit by becoming cheerful, courteous and reverent toward our teachers. Do not forget that it isn't only in the class-room, but everywhere. Even when we leave school we take on in every-day life a system that resembles it.

There is another thing right now that should interest every boy and girl, and that is athletics. Do not go to the basketball games just to have some place to go, go because you want to go. Take more interest in the teams. Buy yourself a season ticket and plan to not miss one basketball game. Wake up. Our team is not asleep. Its members are doing their part and you should do yours. Don't forget that U. S. means a lot to us and, athletics as well as studies are important.

Let's see the Charlevoix basketball fans, the students body, in fact everyone that can possibly go, to the basketball game January 22—Pellston vs. Charlevoix—at local gym. Bring along a good stout pair of lungs.

Jokes

A modern version of an old saying: "God help those who get caught helping themselves."

Have you ever heard about the Scotelman who was invited to his neighbor's house for a drink of ale? Before he went, he went down town and bought a rickie's worth of salted peanuts.

Sportsmanship

A very good lesson was taught to the students of Charlevoix high school Tuesday morning. This was sportsmanship.

Thirty minutes was devoted to this, and in the short half hour every student should have learned a lesson that he should never forget. Everyone knows or should know that Charlevoix is to have the tournament this year. It is up to the students of Charlevoix high school to see that our school has a clean record in regard to sportsmanship.

Speeches and opinions were delivered by five members of the basketball squad. The students found out just what were the ideas of the basketball boys in regard to when they are playing on the floor.

We first heard from Max Novak, who gave many good points that were certainly well worth remembering. "Actions speak louder than words," this was how he started. Think then over. How true they sound after you have thought awhile.

Yelling vulgar names at the boys, calling them dumbbells. How foolish they would be if they paid attention to it. Like good sports they let it pass over their heads. Have respect for the referee, he hasn't such an easy job. If you do not like the way he is bossing his job, be still at least, and later complain to the captain or coach. It is up to the students to set an example. Think it over and it can be done.

Bill Supernaw gave us a very short but very good talk. The student must remember that he represents the school as much as the athlete. Remember that the name of your school is worth more than unfair play. When your team is losing, don't begin to sulk. Then is when you need a stout pair of lungs. The students have them, so make sure that you use them.

The next speaker was Bill Novak, who advised the students get a rule book and learn the rules of the game. Then is your time to protest. If you have any protests, tell them to the captain.

We then heard from Bill Foster, who gave us points on being considerate to the opponents. Recognize and applaud an exhibition of fine play or good sportsmanship on the part of the visiting team. One very important thing is, be considerate of the opponents.

Our last speaker was Dick Marshall, who says, "Make no sarcastic remarks to the opposite team. It is the lowest form of sportsmanship. Do your best to impress the community on the necessity of fair, clean play. Anyone who is a poor sportsman should be kept from the games. He certainly does not deserve being there. It is a duty of the students to acquaint the adults with the laws and points of the game. Explain to them which each detail means. If they are wrong in their cheering, do not hesitate to tell them so."

The meeting ended with a short talk by Supt. Otterbein, who told us that he had all the confidence in the world that the students of Charlevoix high school will practice sportsmanship in regard to clean playing and clean living on the part of everyone.

The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History

-a Six in the price range of the four!

represents 4 years of Development and over a Million miles of Testing

Years ago, the Chevrolet Motor Company designed and built its first experimental six-cylinder motor. This far-sighted step was taken because Chevrolet engineers knew that the six-cylinder motor is inherently the most perfectly balanced motor—the ideal power plant to meet the growing public demand for greater reserve power, faster get-away and, above all—smooth, quiet performance.

During the last four years, over a hundred six-cylinder motors were built by Chevrolet engineers and tested on the General Motors Proving Ground.

Day and night, through winter's cold and summer's heat, the incessant testing went on—until the present motor was developed and finally pronounced correct.

At the same time other Chevrolet engineers were perfecting other parts of the chassis. And another great automotive organization—the Fisher Body Corporation—was devoting its gigantic resources to the creation of the finest, sturdiest and most beautiful bodies ever offered on a low-priced automobile.

As a result, the Outstanding Chevrolet offers an order of well-balanced excellence—a combination of performance, comfort, beauty and handling ease that is truly remarkable—with a fuel-economy of better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

You owe it to yourself to see and inspect this remarkable car. Come in today!

GREEN AND WOOD MAKE A RECORD

Few Paroles and No Complaints in Handling.

Governor Fred W. Green and Arthur D. Wood, commissioner of pardons and paroles are making a record that looks like an all time mark.

Since they took hold of the ticklish job of handling paroles there has not been one single complaint from the public; not a man released by them has committed a major crime; pardons have been so scarce it is an item for the paper when one is granted.

This Green gentleman knows how to pick 'em. Maybe he learned it building up a big and ultra successful business of his own. Anyway when he dragged Wood out of the upper peninsula he drew a prize and did a large sized favor for the people of Michigan. The Green and Woods minds run so parallel on parole cases there seldom is disagreement. With that pair scanning every case the chances for going wrong are about one in a thousand. The old batting average was about 50 to 100.

A few days ago the governor and Wood let three youths out of Ionia. They had served four years for killing a man. Then on and is, some doubt as to their guilt. But the thing that irked the governor and Wood was that the boys were put through the third degree to get a confession. Who knows whether the confession had a grain of truth? Scarcely 13 or 14 year old boys to death and they will admit that they sunk the Lusitania.

The governor and Wood deserve the highest commendation for their act. It is good to keep men in prison who belong there; but to know whom to let out, and why and when—there is an achievement.

It has been demonstrated the governor and Wood have this precious faculty.—Ed. Nowack's Michigan State Digest.

JUDGE PROBATE ANNUAL REPORT

REVIEW OF WORK DONE DURING FISCAL YEAR.

Probate Judge S. A. Correll Believes Public Should Know of Work Handled.

In the probate court proper there were 101 proceedings begun and they classify as follows:

Forty intestate estates, 16 testate estates.

Committed to the University Hospital at Ann Arbor, seven afflicted children at the expense of the state; five adult afflicted persons at the expense of the county. Guardians were appointed in nine estates for the care of their property.

Nine persons were committed to the insane asylum for treatment and hospitalization as insane.

Four proceedings in intestate estate for the determination of heirs. This branch of procedure fell off very much the past year as compared with former years.

Eight guardians were appointed to care for the person and estates of mentally incompetent persons. That is a larger number than in any of the preceding 16 years.

Petitions filed in three cases for adoption; adoption granted in two cases and denied in one.

Two persons sent to the Michigan Home and Training School at LaPeer. Neither have been admitted as yet on account of the crowded condition of the institution.

In two estates proceedings for to reopen the matter.

One of the estates reopened dated back to 1883, and was the 24th case probated in this county.

Thirty-three estates closed during the year.

The Juvenile division of this court reports as follows:

Delinquent girls before the court, one, and she was committed to Adrian to the girls home and training school.

Delinquent boys, seven, of which four were sent to Lansing to the Boy's Vocational School.

Dependent children, 31. They were cared for in different ways according to the circumstances and conditions as the court thought best.

One neglected child brought before the court. On the filing of the petition the mother came to the rescue and took the child from the persons in whose care she had placed it and where it was being neglected.

Inheritance tax determined in three estates only.

On account of the amendments in the inheritance tax law by which the exemptions have been greatly increased to the lineal heirs, there is not as much work in this line as before, and the taxes lessened. No change in the law as to collateral heirs.

MENS' CLUB HEARD INTERESTING TALK

Dr. C. J. Winder Told His Experiences as Dentist at Jackson Prison

Members of the Community Mens' Club enjoyed a fine meeting in the basement of the Methodist church Monday evening.

During the course of the supper, Rev. B. G. Mattson, president of the club, called on various ones present to tell of the boyhood punishments or commendations most prominent in their memories. The answers resulted in no little amusement, as several told of trouncings they received for offenses during their youth.

Following the supper, Dr. C. J. Winder spoke for an hour on his experiences as dentist in the state prison at Jackson, Michigan. He knew his subject and held the undivided attention of the gathering throughout. We regret not being able to publish his talk this week on account of lack of space, but will carry it in next week's issue. It was interesting, full of thrilling and amusing personal experiences.

Next Monday evening the club will have an oyster supper, followed by a program.

CANCEL GAYLORD GAME TUESDAY

BLOCKED HIGHWAYS PREVENT VISITORS REACHING HERE

Trunk Line Plugged Wednesday Noon to Traverse City and Petoskey—Island Boat Had Stormy Trip

Tuesday afternoon's severe storm caused the postponement of the Gaylord-Charlevoix high school basketball game scheduled for that evening. Starting out by motor, the Gaylord team got as far as Elmira and had to turn back on account of road conditions.

Three games were played on a substitute program. A team from St. Mary's school took the measure of the junior high school five in the opening contest by a score of 1 to 0. The game was a close one.

The seniors girls' team handed the junior girl a 20 to 15 defeat in the semi-final game of the evening and the high school five drubbed a pick-up team 30 to 15 in the final contest. The pick-ups, composed of Stewart Coleman, Vernon Gimble, Ted Cooper, Coach Kipke and Bingham, were no match for the high school tossers.

As we go to press Wednesday noon trunk line highways to Traverse City and Petoskey are blocked with snow piled in solid by the severe southeaster Tuesday afternoon and evening. The rotary plow is working towards Charlevoix from the vicinity of Hilton school and little can be done towards opening the trunk line to Eastport until the plow reaches here and is started back again. We understand the Charlevoix-Traverse City bus is snow-bound somewhere near Atwood. Fowler's bus reached Petoskey this morning after considerable difficulty, but has so far been unable to return. Marquette Hill is impassable and Petoskey's plow broke down and waiting for repairs. Charlevoix and Petoskey are unable to cover their routes today.

Capt. John McCann with the tug Venus took a severe tumbling Tuesday afternoon when the storm caught the boat returning from the Beavers. Capt. McCann made the trip over for Capt. Vandenberg of the Beaver Island coast guards, who had been called to Grand Haven by the death of his daughter. The voyage was futile, however, for all attempts to land were frustrated by ice. The return trip was an experience and the boat was lucky to reach port. Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Allers were also passengers.

20 MASONS AND STARS WERE IN ATTENDANCE

Twenty Masons and Stars were in attendance at the entertainment for members held in the temple Tuesday evening. Four tables of bridge were in play, Warren Kibbe winning highest score. Cards were followed by refreshments consisting of chop suey, coffee and wafers. The chapters plan to hold a similar affair in about two weeks, date to be announced later.

BILLED AS LEADING ATTRACTION OF POLAR BEAR DAY PROGRAM ON BRIDGE STREET THURSDAY.

TO PREPARE HILL FOR EVENING COASTING

Ski-joring Races Another Big Feature of Weekly Winter Sports Offerings, With Coasting in Evening—Funds and Instructor for High School Hockey.

Plans for Thursday afternoon's Polar Bear Day program, now practically completed by the committee and chairman, D. T. McHugh, have promise of being the most interesting of the season. The committee met Sunday afternoon with President C. J. Winder of the Association of Commerce, ironed out difficulties over finances which held up last week's program, and are now ready to put over winter sports with a "Bang."

Headlining the attractions for Thursday afternoon are horse races on Bridge street. The event will be run off in three heats with five entries starting, all locally owned horses. To many, this feature will recall the old days when horse racing on the ice of Pine Lake (now Lake Charlevoix) was very much in vogue. The old-time contests were for good purses and drew crowds from the entire region. Horses entered for Thursday's program are by Floyd Black, Dr. Newman, Ralph Baeol and two owned by Jesse Smith.

Another interesting feature of the afternoon will be ski-joring races. Four horses from Hooker's livery stable have been procured and local ski experts will drive two heats for honors. Perhaps one of the most popular features of last year's winter sports were the ski-joring races and this part of the program alone will be a big drawing card.

Preparation of Bridge street hill will be started previous to Thursday's events and will be completed in time for coasting in the evening. It is understood no attempt will be made to ice the course beyond Antrim street until after the horse races that afternoon, but the track will be ready at night.

Competitive hockey was virtually added to the curriculum of school athletics by the action of the Board of Education at their Monday night meeting. Funds were voted for the purchase of hockey equipment for a high school team and, working hand in hand with the school board, the winter sports committee have engaged the services of Harold Crockett of Traverse City, professional hockey player, as coach. Monday night saw the boys out for their first practice at the school grounds and tonight (Wednesday) they will get into action against the Petoskey high school team at Petoskey in a game featured as part of that city's regular Wednesday evening program. The action of both the school board and the winter sports committee is very commendable.

What is most needed now is public co-operation. Get out your sport tags and be on hand for the events Thursday.

POLAR BEARS BEATEN AT GAYLORD MONDAY

Take Short End of 30 to 28 Score in Close Contest.

Handicapped by a court with supporting posts, the Charlevoix Polar Bears dropped a nip-and-tuck contest to the Gaylord independent basketball five at Gaylord Monday night.

Although Gaylord led from early in the game, the margin of advantage was small at times. Team work was almost impossible on account of posts in the floor and it was each man for himself. The final count of Gaylord 30, Charlevoix 28, is a good indication of the closeness of the contest.

Ikens led in scoring for Charlevoix with a total of 10 points. Cooper and Kipke played excellent defensive games for the locals. Gaylord's victory evened the count between the two fives, the Polar Bears having won a game at Charlevoix earlier in the season.

PTA HELD REGULAR MEETING WEDNESDAY

Plan Program for Next Session—Urge Greater Attendance.

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher association was held Wednesday evening, January 17th, with Miss Pearl Briggs in charge. In the absence of Dr. F. F. McMillan.

The subject of the evening, "Case Method," was postponed until some future date. M. Otterbein, superintendent of Charlevoix schools, addressed the PTA, his subject being "The Child Scientific Movement."

The gathering was very much interested in what he had to say about the child, its interests, desires and instincts. He brought out that as we look into the past we are encouraged when we see it has been enlightened, but we must not stop working and studying. There is a great deal for the PTA to do in studying the background of the child in order to understand and help it. Psychology is relatively new. It shows the value of the knowledge of human nature to both parents and teachers.

Miss Wilson's room received the picture for having the largest percentage at the meeting. A new picture is to be selected and presented to the school at the next meeting.

Watch the papers for the next PTA program. It is hoped that parents of the high school and graded school pupils will attend the next meeting. Let's make the PTA a real live and worthwhile organization.

DEATH SUMMONS WELL KNOWN LOCAL WOMAN

Mrs. Lewellyn S. See Died Sunday After Long Illness

An illness of long duration came to an end at 3:15 Sunday, January 20th, with the death of Edie E. Pierce See, wife of Lewellyn S. See, well known local merchant. Although not unexpected, her passing brings sorrow to a large number of Charlevoix citizens.

Deceased was born on a farm in Hayes township, June 29, 1868, the daughter of Dan H. and Adelia Pierce. She resided there 14 years and then moved with her parents to Horton Bay, later coming to Charlevoix in 1886. She was married to Lewellyn S. See January 24, 1895.

Besides her husband, Mrs. See is survived by a daughter, Wilma, one sister, Mrs. Albert Holmes of Charlevoix, and a brother, Harris Pierce of Norwood township.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the residence on Dixon avenue, with Rev. B. G. Mattson of the Congregational church officiating.

ICE CUTTING TO START THIS WEEK

LOCAL HARVESTERS HAVE MODERNIZED CUTTING EQUIPMENT

All Ice Houses Practically Empty and Record Cut is Expected This Season.

Weather conditions permitting, the annual ice harvest by the Charlevoix Coal & Ice Co. will get under way this week. Operations this season will be earlier than last and about the same time as two years ago.

On account of the unusually heavy demand during the past season, practically all ice houses in the city are nearly empty and the cut will probably be a record one. Ice has attained a thickness of about 10 inches and although an over-abundance of snow has not helped the quality any, the ice is in fairly good condition.

The work will be greatly facilitated this winter by the addition of a motor driven saw capable of cutting 200 tons per hour, thus dispensing with the horse-drawn plow formerly used. It is expected 25 men and around 15 teams will be employed in the work and the harvest last four weeks.

The total cut will be around 15,000 tons, divided as follows: Charlevoix Coal & Ice Co., 4,000 tons; H. Widdifield, two houses, 4,000 tons; Booth Fisheries, 1,200 tons; The Inn, 500 tons; Belvedere Hotel, 200 tons; Chicago Club, 400 tons; Hallett Hotel, 250 tons; eight car loads or 400 tons for the Pere Marquette railway at Petoskey.

Figured in dollars and cents, the annual ice harvest amounts to a tidy sum. During the slack winter months it means much to laborers and team owners in and near Charlevoix, and the value of the ice alone runs up to the neat total of approximately $80,000.

The water in Lake Charlevoix ranks A-1 in purity and it makes a good, clear ice that is much in demand.

YEMMANS HOME BURN- ED MONDAY MORNING

Fire Starting in the Kitchen Results in Total Loss.

Fire thought to have started in the kitchen of the Walter Yemmans home, north of Godbold's corners, completely destroyed the residence and a considerable portion of the furnishings early Monday morning.

Although the Yemmans home is outside the city limits and zone calling for fire protection, the truck answered the alarm, but owing to lateness of the call and road conditions off the state trunk line, was unable to reach the scene in time to extinguish the blaze.

LARGE CROWD AT BENEFIT GAME

POLAR BEARS WIN VICTORY OVER PETOSKEY INDIANS.

West Siders Out-run East Siders to Win Victory by Score of 10 to 4.

Charlevoix citizens certainly responded splendidly to requests for whole-hearted co-operation by attending the benefit basketball game given last Friday evening to raise funds to purchase uniforms for high school band members.

The largest crowd of fans to pack the gymnasium at a basketball game this year saw the Polar Bears defeat the Petoskey Indians by a score of 26 to 12.

Petoskey scored first on a field goal by Bailey, center, but after that early lead were never again in the running. The first quarter ended with the Polar Bears leading 9 to 3. The scrappiest period of the game was the second quarter which found the two teams battling on equal terms, each side scoring seven points apiece. The visitors displayed their best brand of floor work during this period, but were trailing 16 to 10 at the half.

During the remainder of the game Charlevoix's superiority was never threatened. Petoskey showed occasional spurts of speed and added two points to their total, while the Polar Bears annexed 10. The final count was Charlevoix 26, Petoskey 12.

Davenport, forward, scored nine points for the Polar Bears and Todd Bailey was Petoskey's high man with four.

Something of a novelty in the line of basketball was the preliminary game between local business men. Terms of volley ball, hand ball or even football would better apply, for the tactics employed did not represent the former. However, the fact remains that the crowd enjoyed every minute of the melee and were in a continuous uproar of laughter. Henry and Charlie Marshall won undisputed possession of first prize for the best costumes, whether there were any or not. "Bill" Wallace and Dave Eckinger revealed their staying qualities and Fred Cartier and Dr. Winder might, with plenty of preparation and training, get themselves into condition to make a creditable showing despite age and ballast. The West Siders won the contest 10 to 4 after much wild shooting. They were not superior, but were the best runners.

FOUR CONVENTIONS FOR COMING SEASON

Michigan State Bankers' Association Here First in June.

Charlevoix will entertain four conventions during the 1929 summer season according to a recent report by Fred E. Cartier, chairman of the Association of Commerce conventions committee.

The first gathering, we understand, will be the Michigan State Bankers' association, who will convene at The Inn the latter part of June. At a recent meeting in Detroit the association decided to change from the usual first of July and hold its next convention on land. It is expected around 350 will attend.

It is understood The Inn management has two sorority meetings booked and the Belvedere Hotel will again entertain the Detroit Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus during their week's summer outing. The Knights convened at the Belvedere last summer and before leaving began plans to hold their 1929 gathering here again. They enjoyed every minute of their stay in Charlevoix and were extravagant in their praises of the city's beauties and entertainment facilities.

Each of the four conventions is the direct result of efforts on the part of Association of Commerce committee chairmen and officers, in connection with able assistance from the hotel management. And regardless of this commendable work, there are men, both in official and private life, who have belittled the work of the association and its members.

What a spirit of co-operation.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

WALKER SCHOOL DISTRICT.

There was nearly a full attendance at school again last week.

Lyle Walker is recovering from a three week's attack of the flu and Mr. Walker is convalescing.

Edna Knudsen spent the week end at home, being unable to get home last week on account of the storm.

Gabriel Thomas' car went wrong just before the great storm and had to be brought back with Mr. Spidle's team.

Merion Best took Miss Agnes Sitzema back to her home at Ellsworth Saturday. Miss Best has been ill with the flu.

Everett Spidle has been quite seriously ill with the flu for the past week or two and a doctor had to be called to give medical aid.

George Miller has his fox houses, 26 in number, about ready for the winter and work will not be quite so strenuous from now until spring.

Wilbur Spidle has been harrowing and rolling the roads, and it is now planned not to use the snow plow any more. If not kept up, it is better without them.

There was no mail for three days last week. In two weeks time roads were made impassible. Northern Michigan never does things by halves when it comes to storms.

Franklin Sears and wife are preparing to leave for Florida, as they have about recovered from the flu. Their car is being put into shape at the East Jordan garage this week.

The new lake shore road has been snow plowed to Charlevoix and autos have been running again. It, however, needs some "back fire" snow plowing or it will soon be filled again.

The "Merry Seven Sewing Club" met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Arlo Wickersham to take lessons on the uses of the sewing machine, also a very interesting discussion was given on "darning" by their leader.

MR. RALPH SMITH.

"My system was so filled with aches and pains before I started to take Konjola that I didn't think a single medicine would ever be of any help to me," said Mr. Ralph Smith, 1405 Howard street, Detroit, Michigan.

"The pains centered in my arms and shoulders and sometimes there was a feeling of numbness from my fingers to my elbow. My shoulders were a solid mass of aches and pains and often I couldn't raise my arms above my head. I would lie awake nearly half the night from pain and nervousness. I couldn't find a medicine to help me and even my doctor was unable to give me relief.

"Four bottles of Konjola banished all my sufferings and I have not taken any other medicine since. That was two years ago. It also strengthened my nerves and filled my system with new life energy. I strongly endorse this Konjola to anyone who suffers as I did."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fossenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

School Days.

Three little girls one winter day

Went off to school together.

Great was the fun those three had

In the crisp and frosty weather.

They slipped and slid on the icy track

And snow-balled one another.

They tumbled down upon their backs

And rolled in the snow together.

When to the schoolhouse they finally came,

Their cheeks were red as roses;

Oh, going to school is a jolly good game,

For Jack Frost had nipped their noses.

CHAPTER XII

Harris sat on a baggage truck and regarded the heap of luggage somberly. Why off in the distance a dark blot of smoke marked the location of the burning train which would take the Three Bar girl away.

"Some day you'll be wanting to come back, old partner," he predicted hopefully. The Three Bar girl hurt.

"We're in Better Shape Than Ever Before."

We're in better shape than ever before and a clear field out in front; for the country is cleaned up and the law is clamped on top."

She honestly tried to rouse a spark of interest deep within her, some ray of enthusiasm for the future of the Three Bar. But there was no response. She assured herself again that the old brand which had meant so much to her meant less than nothing now. That part of her was dead.

The trail of smoke was drawing near. Harris looked and kissed her. "Just once for luck," he said, and slipped from his seat on the truck as the train roared in. Good-by, little fellow, I'll see you next round-up time."

As the train slid away from the station she looked from her window and saw him riding up the single street on the big paint-horse. The train cleared the edge of the little town and passed the cattle chute. Three wagons, each drawn by four big mules, moved toward the cluster of buildings which comprised the town, the freighters on their way to haul out materials for the rebuilding of the ranch.

The work was going on but she no longer had a share in it. She was looking ahead and planning a future in which the Three Bar played no part.

Denne was with Judge Colton, her father's old friend, to meet her at the station. As they rode toward the Colton home she told the judge she had come to stay and Denne was content. After the strenuous days she had just passed through she needed a long period of rest, he reflected; but the older man smiled when he suggested this.

"What she needs now is action," he said. "And no rest at all. Cal Warren's girl isn't the sit-around type."

Denne agreed on this and no day passed without it.

part of it to help him time. And in the late winter, after having visited school friends who lived farther east, she found herself anticipating the return to the Colton home as eagerly as always in the past she had looked forward to seeing the Three Bar after a long period away from it.

For the first time in her life she was glad to be sheltered and pampered as were other girls. But there was a growing restlessness within her—a vague dissatisfaction for which she could not account. She groped for an answer but the analysis could not be expressed or definitely cleared in her mind.

Denne planned with her of evenings but the planning was all of play. No word of work crept into it. If only he would accept her as wholly into that part of his life as he did into the rest.

And suddenly she longed to sit for just one evening before the fire and plan real work with Cal Harris. He had been the one man she had known, who had asked that she work with him—or that he should work for her. She had drifted along, expecting that that same state of affairs would go on indefinitely, believing that he filled the void left by old Cal Warren. But now she knew he held that place he had created for himself. They had worked together and she had shared the sinking ship to play the part of the third queen.

She was conscious of a flare—half of resentment, half of apprehension—toward Harris for not having sent a word of tidings at the ranch.

Judge Colton entered the room and interrupted her reverie by handing her a paper. In the first black head she saw Slade's name and Harris'; an announcement of the last chapter of the Three Bar war.

The first line of the article stated that Slade, the cattle king, had been released. There was insufficient proof to convict on any count. She felt a curious little shiver of fear for Harris with Slade once more at large. The article retold the old tale of the light and portrayed Slade, on his release, leaving the range which he had once controlled and finding a squatter family on every available ranch site.

She had a flash of sympathy for Slade as she thought his sensibilities must have been similar to her own when she had looked upon the ruins of the Three Bar. But this was not told out by the knowledge that he had only met the same treatment he had handed to so many others; that he had dropped into the trap he had built for her. She found no rest sympathy for Slade—only fear for Harris since Slade was freed. The old sense of responsibility for the brand had been worn too long to be shed at will. She knew that now.

"I suppose you'll be surprised to hear that I'm going back," she said. Her father's old friend smiled across at her and puffed his pipe.

"Surprised?" he said. "Why, I've known all along you'd be going back before long. I could have told you that when you stepped off the train. He left her alone with Denne when the younger man arrived. She plunged into her subject at once.

"I'm sorry," she said. "But I'm going home. I'm not out for this—not for long at one time. I want to smell the round-up fire and slip my twine on a Three Bar calf; to throw my leg across a horse and ride, and feel the wind tearing past. It will always be like that with me. So this is good-by."

Four days later, in the early evening, the stage pulled into Coldriver with a single passenger. The boys were in from a hundred miles around for one last spree before round-up time. As the stage rolled down the single street the festivities were in full swing. From one lighted doorway came the glare of a mechanical piano accompanied by the scrape of feet; the sound of drunken voices raised in song issued from the next; the shrill laughter of a dance-hall girl, the purr of the ivory ball and the soft clatter of chips, the ponies drowsing at the little rills the full length of the street, the peeling yelp of some overenthusiastic citizen whose sight it was to howl; all these were evidences of the wide difference between the last eight months. She gazed eagerly out of the stage window. It was good to get back.

As the stage cleared the rambling log hotel where she would put up for the night a compact group of riders swung down the street. Her heart seemed to stop as she recognized the big paint-horse at their head. She had not fully realized how much she longed to see Cal Harris.

Instead of dismounting in a group they suddenly split up, as if at a given signal, scattering the length of the block and dismounting singly.

suppressed the rush of gladness she had experienced with the first unexpected view of the Three Bar crew. Men who stood on the board sidewalks turned hastily inside the open doors as they glimpsed the riders, spreading the news that the Three Bar had come to town. The driver pulled up in front of the one hotel.

"It'll come off right now," he said. "Slade's in town."

"Sure," the guard replied. "Why else would Harris ride in at night like this unless in answer to Slade's threat to shoot him down on sight? Get the girl inside."

The reason for the scattering was now clear to her. Slade, on his release, had announced that he would kill Harris on sight whenever he appeared in town. Slade had many friends. The Three Bar men were scattered the length of the street to enforce full play.

The guard opened the door and motioned her out but she shook her head.

"I'm going to stay here," she asserted.

Her answer informed him of the fact that she was no casual visitor but one who knew the signs and would insist on seeing it through. He nodded and shut the door.

Harris had dismounted at the far end of the block and was strolling slowly down the board sidewalk on the opposite side. Groups of men picked the doorways, each one striving to appear unconcerned, as if his presence there was an accident instead of being occasioned by knowledge that something of interest would soon transpire. A man she knew for a slide rider moved out to the edge of the sidewalk across the street from Harris. She saw the lumbering form of Waddles riding up beside him. Other Three Bar boys were watching every man who showed a disposition to touch himself from the groups in the doors. The glare of the piano and all sounds of revelry had hushed.

AT THE MOVIES

Thelma Todd Teaches Star to Toss a Flapjack.

Thelma Todd, newest of cinema leading ladies, is an ex-school teacher, yet one would hardly expect her to be teaching Milton Sills to turn a flapjack by throwing it into the air from a frying pan.

Nevertheless, it happened. Miss Todd is Sills' leading lady in his latest First National starring picture, "The Crash," which comes to the Palace Theatre on Saturday and Sunday. While the picture was being filmed in the High Sierras, the star was initiated in the art of flap-jack turning by Miss Todd.

"The Crash" is a story of railroad-ing in the High Sierras and was adapted from the story of the same name by Frank L. Packard.

Popular Novel Selected for First Laurel Movie.

"Huntingtower," a magnificent adaptation of Col. John Buchan's best-selling novel, provides the vehicle for Sir Harry Lauder's introduction to moving pictures. The picture, which will show here for the first time at the Palace Theatre, next Wednesday and Thursday, was hailed as a triumph for the popular comedian and songster at the London opening of the picture.

The part of the little Scotch grocer, who becomes mixed up in an international tangle involving a Russian prince and the Russian crown jewels, is reported to be especially adapted to the powers of the world-famous comedian.

In the matter of the petition of Oramel B. Fuller, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for taxes assessed thereon.
On reading and filing the petition of the Auditor General of the State of Michigan praying for a decree in favor of the State of Michigan, against each parcel of land therein described, for the amounts therein specified, claimed to be due for taxes, interest and charges on each such parcel of land, and that said lands be sold for the amounts so claimed by the State of Michigan.

It is ordered that said petition will be brought on for hearing and decree at the February term of this Court, to be held at Charlevoix in the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, on the 18th day of February, A. GEORGE A. RODERICK, Clerk.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

To the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery:
The petition of Oramel B. Fuller, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, respectfully shows that the list of lands hereinafter set forth and marked "Schedule A," contains a description of all lands in said County of Charlevoix upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein, and which were returned as delinquent for non-payment of taxes, and which taxes have not been paid; together with the total amount of such taxes, with interest computed thereon to the time fixed for sale, and collection fee and expenses, as provided by law, extended against each of said parcels of land.
Your petitioner further shows to the Court that said lands were returned to the Auditor General under the provisions of Act 206 of the Public Acts of 1893, as delinquent for non-payment of said taxes for said years respectively, and that said taxes remain unpaid; except that lands included in said "Schedule A" for taxes of 1890 or prior years were returned to the Auditor General as delinquent for said taxes under the provisions of the general tax laws in force prior to the passage of Act 200 of the Public Acts of 1891, and which taxes remain unpaid.

Your petitioner further shows that in all cases where lands are included in "Schedule A" as aforesaid for taxes of 1890 or of any prior year, said lands have not been sold for said taxes or have been heretofore sold for said delinquent taxes and the sale or sales so made have been set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction, or have been cancelled as provided by law. Your petitioner further shows and avers that the taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses as set forth in said "Schedule A," are a valid lien on the several parcels of lands described in said schedule.

Your petitioner further shows that the said taxes on the said described lands have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned as delinquent; and the said taxes not having been paid, and the same being now due and remaining unpaid as above set forth, your petitioner prays a decree in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of said lands, for the payment of the several amounts of taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses, as computed and extended in said schedule against the several parcels of land contained therein, and in default of payment of the said several sums computed and extended against said lands, that each of said parcels of land may be sold for the amounts due thereon, as provided by law, to pay the lien aforesaid.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

Dated December 10, 1928.

FORTY-FOURTH YEAR IN BUSINESS
THE OLDEST BANK IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

1884

How About Yours?

Often a person will open a Savings Account, make a few deposits—and then neglect it. Sometimes he will make neither deposits nor withdrawals for years. True, compound interest keeps the account growing, but such growth is naturally slow unless stimulated by additional deposits.

And so, if you have an inactive Savings account, why not make it show a steady growth this year by making regular weekly or monthly deposits? And why not come in and make a deposit today?

A Word to the Wise

Wise is the man who saves as he earns—who has laid by a snug little sum of money with some laudable purpose in view. It marks him as a man of ambition—fore-sighted—thrifty—an asset to the community.

And wiser still is he if he seeks financial counsel with those best qualified to give it to him. How and in what he can best afford to INVEST his savings without the risk of losing a single dollar—how he can make his money earn as much as 6 per cent interest WITH SAFETY—is ADVICE he should seek at this reliable bank. Our officers will be glad to render you that service WITHOUT CHARGE.

Charlevoix Public School Notes

"Knowledge is the key to success."
—Benjamin Franklin.

Junior High School

January 15 the junior high school boys played the Boyne City boys and lost the game by one point. The score was 13 to 14. Whether we lose or win we think the boys should be complimented on their playing. The players who made the points were Wayne Belding 2, Carleton Ikens 4 and Joe Smith 7.

The boy's basketball coach, Mr. Bingham, deserves congratulations in the success of making such a good team in such a short time.

Tuesday morning we had a pep meeting. The cheer leaders were Junior Supernaw, Tinker Kirby, Drew Young, Marge Partridge and Jermaine Atchison. They were dressed in a different type of clothing which was red and white. A yell for the high school was given whether they heard it or not. The costumes were designed by Jermaine.

Exams start Tuesday morning and we are hoping they are not too hard. Wednesday morning the junior high school orchestra played and we enjoyed it very much.

There have been but few tardies and absents recently. We hope to keep that record.

We wonder whether the ironclads were used or the wooden boats after the battle of the Merrimack and the Monitor in 1862. Ask Gertrude Clark.

The junior high school girls have started basketball with Miss Mellin as coach.

We think a bone should be picked with our class president, Lila Tillotson, because she was on the side of Boyne City. Why, she even bet with Dorothy Staley that Boyne City would win. What do you think about it?

NEWS OF THE GRADES

Kindergarten

The children in the kindergarten have started a doll house project. The house is made from two orange crates. Our painters and paper-hangers have finished their work. Now we are making the furniture for the kitchen.

Fourth Grade

The fourth grade children have written letters to the fourth grade at Blissfield, Michigan. The work was a part of their language.

Fifth Grade

The children in the fifth grade have been writing poems for the past three months. They are gaining a deeper appreciation of such qualities as beauty of expression, thought, feeling and rhythm which are necessary to a good poem. The following poems are taken from our collection:

"The Beeches"

The beeches are dressed in silver.
Their overcoats are brown.
But when the wind comes blowing
Their coats will all come down.

—Mary McSawby.

O Christmas tree, O Christmas tree,
How straight you stand,
Like a soldier on guard duty,
All decked in silver armor.

—Bernice Edwards.

"Jack Frost"

Jack Frost painted my windows one night,
And he thought he was playing a trick.
I heard him saying in a great, deep voice,
"I will paint them good and thick."

But just as he was ready to paint,
Along came the merry old wind,
And they got to talking of what they would paint,
And they talked 'till dawn began to come.

And it frightened them away.

Pep Meeting for Girls

Big pep meeting to entertain basketball fellows. Some of the girls sang and others gave speeches and also a few yells given for the game Tuesday night.

Clarence Smith, a little free man, went skipping home from school one day. "Oh, Mema," he cried, "I've learned to say 'thank you' and 'if you please' in French."

"At last," breathed his mother, "That's something your teacher never taught you to say in English."

ATHLETIC NEWS

Boyne City 2nd Team Defeats Charlevoix 2nd Team

The Charlevoix 2nd team, which is composed of Joe Smith, Norman Anee, Ilo Helms, Roy Kelderhouse and Bill Foster lost to Boyne City 2nd team last Tuesday night.

The game began in Charlevoix's favor when Bill Foster made a free throw. Good luck could not last, as Boyne soon followed with the same. Boyne repeated with a basket. Arnold substituted for Foster. Another basket for Boyne. Final score at the end of the first quarter 5 to 1 in favor of B. C. H. S.

Nothing important happened during the 2nd quarter. Charlevoix was slowly climbing. The final score was 6 to 3 in favor of Boyne City. The third quarter was a stroke of good luck for Boyne. Eight baskets were made for their team. Charlevoix did not score during this quarter. The score continued to climb and the period ended with Boyne leading 23 to 3.

The last quarter was evenly scored. Charlevoix made one basket and also did Boyne. The final score of this game was 5 to 25 in favor of Boyne.

Boyne Defeats Red and White After Hard Fought Game

The boys that constituted the Red and White team were Bill Supernaw, Dick Marshall, Bill Novak, Max Novak and the honorable Vic Smith.

The first quarter was almost entirely in Charlevoix's favor. Bill Supernaw started the score off by making a field basket. Bill Novak followed with another. Then Boyne took a turn at the basket and made one point by a free throw. Dick Marshall just couldn't let the quarter finish without making a basket, so he scored another for C. H. S., making the final score 6 to 1 in favor of Charlevoix.

The end of the second quarter Charlevoix was leading by one point. Boyne made a basket the first crack, and Max Novak followed with a free throw. Then Boyne scored again. We were still ahead by a 7 to 6 score. So far so good.

Boyne gained by making three baskets during the third quarter. The final score ended 7 to 12. During the fourth quarter Cornie McCall was substituted for Vic Smith. Bad luck was with us and the final score ended 14 to 7 in favor of Boyne.

Note Books, Student's Worries, Must Be in or Fail

Bulletin board Monday morning. All note books in for the third month due Friday. Few remarks were murmured Monday in response to the sign, but when Thursday night came the town nearly passed out of existence so far as bridge parties, sports, and all social activities were concerned. Every home kept the fires burning until early morning. The electric light plant toiled long and hard, but reaped the benefit when the

The operator of the Bell Telephone realize also the note books were having a rally from a month's vacation. When at midnight a dictation of the Articles of Confederation was recited very slowly so that the listener might jot it down. Put little do people realize the great blessing and benefit which they receive from the little sign on the board for note books due Friday. Even the drug stores benefit from the great demand for note book paper and ink to replace the many bottles spilled on mother's center table on that memorable Thursday night when note books had their rally.

Engines Prove to be an Interesting Topic to Boys and Girls in General Science Class.

The class in general science for the past week has been studying engines. An interesting fact connected with the development of steam engines, not generally found in text books, deals with the invention of the eccentric wheel. The original steam engine required somebody to work the valves, letting in the steam and controlling the exhaust. Usually this was the task of some boy. A Scottish owner of an engine having set a boy thus to work was surprised to see the engine working with unusual smoothness and regularity. Upon investigation he found that the boy had rigged a contraption from the shaft of the engine to the levers controlling the valves. This was the beginning of the development of the eccentric wheel.

Safety, silence and simplicity are features of the new Ford six-brake system

ONE of the first things you will notice when you drive the new Ford is the quick, effective, silent action of its six-brake system.

This system gives you the highest degree of safety and reliability because the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are all of the mechanical, internal expanding type, with braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against mud, water, sand, etc.

The many advantages of this type of braking system have long been recognized. They are brought to you in the new Ford through a series of mechanical improvements embodying much that is new in design and manufacture. A particularly unique feature is the simple way by which a special drum has been constructed to permit the use of two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

A further improvement in braking performance is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in steady, uniform contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent in operation.

Another feature of the Ford brakes is the ease of adjustment.

The four-wheel brakes are adjusted by turning a screw conveniently located on the outside of each brake plate. This screw is so notched that all four brakes can be set alike simply by listening to the "clicks."

The emergency or parking brakes on the new Ford require little attention. However, should they need adjustment at any time, consult your Ford dealer for prompt, courteous, and economical service. He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to help you get the greatest possible use from your car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

CITY AND CHARLEVOIX TOWNSHIP FAIL TO AGREE

Township Representatives Say They Were Insulted by Mayor—More Charges Flying Thick

The peaceful and tranquil relationship which has existed for years between the township of Charlevoix and City of Charlevoix apparently received a severe setback Tuesday morning, when Supervisor William Cook announced that the township would start suit in circuit court against the city for the removal of a fence between Boulder Park and the city auto camp, where it is said to obstruct a highway known as Park Avenue extended.

According to Mr. Cook, the matter has been hanging fire for more than a year. In his statement to the Courier Tuesday morning, Mr. Cook related that the matter came to a near-climax last November. At that time a meeting of the Charlevoix township board was held, it being voted to ask the city of Charlevoix to remove the fence in question. Supervisor Cook and Eugene Stroud, township highway commissioner, were delegated to appear before the city council and make the request.

Closely following the township meeting Cook and Stroud went to the council chambers on a regular meeting night, the date of which does not appear on the council proceedings and is not definitely known. Mr. Cook relates that he and Mr. Stroud were asked what they wanted. Speaking for the township, Mr. Stroud informed the council and mayor of the purpose of his mission. During the interview Mr. Cook was asked by Mayor Bergeon who sent him there and how much he was getting out of it. The affair ended when Mayor Bergeon informed the township representatives that the council would take no action on the matter that night. Both Mr. Cook and Mr. Stroud declare they were openly insulted by the remarks made to them by Mayor Bergeon.

The next step taken by the township was to serve notice on the city of Charlevoix to remove the fence within 30 days. A paragraph in the council proceedings of November 26 showed the members voted to refer the notice from the township of Charlevoix to the city of Charlevoix concerning fence removal to the mayor and city attorney.

During the intervening time between the date of the notice in November and Tuesday of this week, Mr. Cook stated he had made several unsuccessful attempts to straighten the matter out peacefully.

At a meeting of the council last Monday night Mayor Bergeon made his report to the members on the proposition. He pointed out to them that the original unrecorded plat of the Charlevoix auto camp showed a highway along its south boundary, which is known as Park Avenue (extended). He informed the council, however, that the plat was not legal. From other authority it is learned that the contract held by the State Bank of East Jordan and signed by Mayor Bergeon, has a clause making it subject to highways shown on the unrecorded plat. The mayor also stated the city's contract stipulated that 33 feet off the south boundary was designated for highway purposes, the same arrangement holding true with the property abutting on the south owned by Flora U. Hair of Boyne City, making in all a 66-foot highway. He pointed out, that whether a road was to be built between the two properties or not was a matter of mutual consent between the two owners, according to his interpretation. It was also his contention that inasmuch as no improvements had been made on the road, the 66 feet had reverted back to the abutting property owners, and further, that the township has no grounds for suit, also that their intention was to take the entire 66 feet off the city auto park. In a following paragraph it will be shown there was no ground for such a belief.

In winding up his explanation to the council, Mayor Bergeon told the members he would in no way try to block the building of a highway between the adjoining land owners agreed to the project. The council apparently approved the report, for no objections were made, although it was very apparent that our council, elected to attend to city affairs, knew practically nothing about the proposition.

During the early part of the evening, while the finance committee was examining bills, one for an abstract was brought up. Alderman Livingston inquired as to the nature of the bill and was informed by Mayor Bergeon it was for an abstract prepared by the Charlevoix Abstract & Engineering company for the auto park property. Mr. Livingston voiced the opinion that the city should have been furnished an abstract and asked for the contract to see if it contained a clause providing for one. He was told by Mayor Bergeon that the contract was in the latter's store. It strikes us funny to find out important city documents were kept in the mayor's place of business, when they belonged in the city offices where a place is provided for them. (So far, to our knowledge, no one has been able to see the city's contract, regardless of the fact that any taxpayer is entitled to inspect any or all city documents.)

Tuesday morning Mr. Cook came to this office and informed us the township officials had instructed the prosecuting attorney to proceed with the suit against the city. He had with him a quit claim deed to the 33 feet stipulated for highway purposes on the property abutting the city auto park on the south, signed by Flora U. Hair, the owner, giving the same to Charlevoix township. He told us he had talked with Mayor Bergeon Monday, showed him the quit claim deed, and gave the mayor a duplicate. (Continued on Page 12)

CANDIDATES FILE FOR CITY OFFICES

CONTESTS ON IN ALL THREE WARDS OF THE CITY.

Mayor Bergeon, Seeking Re-election for Eighth Term, Opposed by Dr. C. J. Winder.

A casual glance at the line-up of aspirants for city offices at the primary election in March does not lead one to believe that the affair will be a "pink tea party." In fact, opposition has cropped out in all three wards, with a scrap for mayoralty honors heading the bill on the city ticket. Otherwise Ray S. Hamilton, Elma H. Cook and John Zeidler are unopposed for the offices of city clerk, city treasurer and park commissioner, respectively.

In the first ward Henry Partridge will be opposed by Oakley Hammond for alderman. In the second ward another race is on between Horace R. Fowler and Ernest Kibbe for alderman, and in the third ward, Archie Aleck, present supervisor, is opposed by W. E. Parmelee and David J. Eckinger bumps up against Jesse Smith in his race for aldermanic honors.

Following is the line-up:

City Ticket.
Mayor—Charles J. Winder, Arthur Bergeon.
City Clerk—Ray S. Hamilton.
City Treasurer—Elma H. Cook.
Park Commissioner—John Zeidler.

First Ward.
Supervisor—Harry A. Craig.
Alderman—Henry Partridge, Oakley J. Hammond.
Constable—Joseph Howard.

Second Ward.

Alderman—Horace R. Fowler, Ernest Kibbe.

Third Ward.
Supervisor—William E. Parmelee, Archie Aleck.
Alderman—David J. Eckinger, Jesse Smith.
Constable—William J. Weikel.

Three candidates are in the field for the office of circuit judge of the 13th judicial district. Parm C. Gilbert, incumbent, will be opposed by J. J. Tweedle of Traverse City, and Fitch R. Williams of Elk Rapids.

POLAR BEARS TO PLAY BOYNE HERE TONIGHT

Preliminary Game Between Boyne and Charlevoix Business Men

Great local interest is being shown in the Charlevoix Polar Bear-Boyne City Indian independent basketball game to be played in the local gym tonight (Thursday). It is a return game between the two teams, Charlevoix having previously lost at Boyne City by a one-point margin.

Not the least interesting part of the evening program is a contest scheduled between two teams to be known as Charlevoix Old Men and Boyne City Old Men. This contest will be called at 7:15, preceding the independent game at 8 o'clock.

SMITH'S ENTRIES WIN HORSE RACES

TAKE ALL FOUR HEATS LAST THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Fred Hardy First in Ski-joring Contest—Many Bobs Out for Evening Coasting

Winter horse racing, a sport that once held the attention of all Northern Michigan, was the chief attraction of the regular Thursday afternoon winter sports program sponsored last week by the Charlevoix Winter Sports Club and Association of Commerce. With school in session and cold weather holding many inside, the crowd was not so large as on previous occasions.

Henry Direct, owned by Jesse Smith and driven by Edgar Smith, won both heats of the first race of the afternoon program. Alice Gordon, Dr. Newman's entry, was second. In the second race Jesse Smith drove "Little Story," his second entry, to victory, over Floyd Black's Mary St. James in two straight heats. The course was from Park avenue to Antrim street and a scraper had been used to put the track in good condition. Jay Adams, veteran racing enthusiast, acted as starter.

Fred Hardy, Charlevoix and regional ski champion, won both heats of the ski-joring races. Mark Smith and William Woods divided second honors in the two heats. The three horses, furnished by Hooker's livery stable, were ridden bareback, with the men on skis hanging to ropes. The way the horses covered the length of Bridge street was not at all slow and these events were watched with interest.

Following the racing events of the afternoon, Bridge street hill was iced for the first time this winter and in the evening a large crowd was out for coasting. Out-of-town bobs were much in evidence with a large crowd over from Petoskey for coasting and the dance at Monte's following. This Petoskey crowd have expressed themselves as being very appreciative of the courtesy extended by R. T. Davis, who sent a county snow plow ahead of them to Bay Shore to clear the highway, which was filled with snow from the storm that broke during the evening.

The school grounds rink drew its usual large crowd both afternoon and evening, and generally it is believed last Thursday's program was a fine success.

PETOSKEY SKATERS WON HOCKEY CONTEST

Defeat Charlevoix Team 8 to 1 Last Wednesday Night.

The first high school hockey game ever played in Northern Michigan was won by Petoskey, 8 to 0, on that city's new rink last Wednesday evening. Petoskey players were too swift and sure, also showing a superior knowledge of the game.

Petoskey scored three goals by Upton, three by Golden, one by Curtis and one following a mixup in front of Charlevoix's goal during which it was impossible to see just who did the final shooting. On the Petoskey team were Golden, Upton, Curtis, Saunders, Mitchell, the latter being goalie. Gill, LaBlanc, Kirby, Foster, Swanson and Christensen played for Charlevoix.

Charlevoix's play indicated that the team needed more practice. The material is good and with more experience they will give a better account of themselves.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX TO HAVE NEW SITE

STRUTHERS PROPERTY ON OYSTER BAY NEW LOCATION.

Plans Call for Completion of Twenty Rustic Buildings for Use in Summer of 1930.

Lewis C. Reimann, Ann Arbor, director of Camp Charlevoix, a character camp for boys located on Lake Charlevoix near Ironton, has just announced his purchase of the Struthers property of 167 acres on Oyster Bay, for the new site of his camp to be occupied during the summer of 1930.

The new camp property is located directly across from Oldwood Point, the summer home of R. E. Olds, Lansing. It has 4200 feet of shoreline, an excellent sand beach and beautiful woods, with open fields for athletic grounds.

Twenty rustic log buildings will be erected this spring by the Potchman Lumber company of Petoskey, to whom the contract was awarded. "Everything will be rustic, even to the hinges and latches on the doors," said Mr. Reimann. "It will be unique in boys' camps and one of the most interesting places in Northern Michigan. The logs will be peeled and left in natural colors. No concrete or paint will be evident. All the furniture, trim, porches, outdoor seats and bridges across the stream will be rustic. The interiors will be fitted up in camp style with rustic tables, chairs and benches and with the assistance of the state department of conservation game trophies will decorate the walls."

A large clubhouse 40x60 feet with a wide porch running the whole length and a two-story annex 40x22 feet for the kitchen, office, storeroom and bedrooms for help will be the main building. Fifteen log cabins will house the boys and the counselors. A large handicraft shop, which is always a popular place in Camp Charlevoix, will house a modern equipment for work in leather, woodwork, archery tackle, wrought iron and rustic art.

The camp will have a capacity for 130 boys and 40 members of the staff and will be divided into three distinct sections for the junior boys, the intermediates and the seniors. Each section will have a rustic washroom, toilet and shower bath house with modern plumbing equipment. A stable to care for 20 horses will be erected and riding trails will be cut through the beautiful woods. A fine dock, diving tower with three spring boards and a water slide are planned for.

The camp property will be made into a state game preserve and nature study will form a large part of the camp program.

Camp Charlevoix will occupy the same location at Ironton this summer, but many activities will be carried on in connection with the new camp. An expert in rustic work will live at the new site and groups of boys will be taken there to spend several days each making rustic articles, building rustic bridges, over the stream which runs through the property, making signs from materials found in the woods and studying nature under an expert nature man.

Director Reimann is planning to have 20 boys next summer and the old campers will receive first consideration in enrollments for the new camp in 1930. Already one third of the boys are enrolled for the 1929 season and applications are coming in rapidly. The new camp booklet describing the camp leadership and activities may be secured by interested parents by addressing Mr. Reimann at Ann Arbor.

Camp Charlevoix is a successful character camp for boys and has made a deep impression upon the people who summer in Charlevoix and upon its year-around residents by its fine christian ideals, its friendly cooperation with the city and its neighbors and by an unusually high type of mature college trained leadership.

WELL KNOWN COUPLE WED LAST SATURDAY

Mrs. Nellie Brown Became Bride of Archie Aleck.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Shearer on East Hurlburt avenue, last Saturday evening a 5:00 o'clock, when Mrs. Nella Brown Cooper, daughter of the late Albert Brown, became the bride of Archie Aleck, Rev. Pye of the Church of God, officiating, using the beautiful ring service. Only immediate friends and relatives were present.

The bride was charming in white crepe de chine with accessories to match. Both are well known residents of Charlevoix, the bride a nurse by profession, and the groom is city street commissioner. After the ceremony a dinner was served at the home of the bride on May street.

LOST FISHERMAN ALIVE AND SAFE

RETURNED TUESDAY AFTER A WEEK SPENT ON LAKE

Entered White Shoals Lighthouse After Drifting Over Night On Ice Floes

Lewis Sweet, the Alanson fisherman who was blown out into Lake Michigan on an ice floe in the afternoon of January 22, and who had been given up for lost by his friends and the residents of Northern Michigan and the army and private flyers who joined the search for him, stumbled into Cross Village and safety Tuesday forenoon. He had been stormbound in the White Shoals lighthouse about 14 miles from Cross Village since Wednesday morning.

Sweet's feet and hands were badly frozen, so much so that the finger and toe nails are coming off. He was found crawling up the cliff at Cross Village by Henry Sullivan, the man who went up with the flyers in search of him. Sullivan loaded him onto his dog sled and hurried to his own home. A doctor was called, who gave instruction by telephone as to emergency treatment; and Sweet was later taken to Petoskey for hospital attention.

In telling of his terrible experience, Sweet said that the terrific blizzard of Tuesday evening completely demolished his frail shanty. "It was quickly blown to bits and gone in every direction," Sweet related. He stuck to the high ice and rode in the cold and storm for about 25 miles out into the upper part of Lake Michigan. Then the wind shifted and drove him back again. The wind carried him south and the ice field grounded at White Shoals. Sweet crawled ashore as quickly as possible. He found the lighthouse building all closed for winter, but he broke in a window. The flyers who were up over the place Thursday were seen by Sweet and he signalled from a window of the lighthouse, but the planes were too high and his signals too small to be of any help.

All Northern Michigan is marveling at Sweet's return. It was thought impossible that he would be alive after spending the night on the open ice during last Tuesday's terrible storm.

DEATH CLOSES ACTIVE CAREER

ENTIRE CITY MOURNS LOSS OF HORACE S. HARSHA.

Deceased Was Active in Business and Civic Affairs During Years Residence Here.

Today Charlevoix mourns the death of Horace S. Harsha and this very fact is the best tribute that may be paid a man who has lived the years of usefulness Mr. Harsha has.

Although in failing health for some time, he was active until within practically 12 hours of his passing at one o'clock Tuesday morning. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday he had walked from his home on State street to Dr. Armstrong's office. Sunday morning he was up as usual, attending to duties about the house. After coming up from the basement at 10:00 o'clock that forenoon he first showed weakness. His son-in-law, Earl A. Young, was called and Mr. Harsha lost consciousness. At about noon he lost consciousness and never rallied.

Deceased was born in Washington, Pennsylvania, August 19, 1854, and was 74 years, five months and 10 days old at the time of death. When a small lad he moved with his parents to Bellefontaine, Ohio, receiving his education and spending his boyhood days at that place. In 1882, Mr. Harsha came to Charlevoix and established himself in the real estate business with the late Frederick W. Mayne. Two years later he opened an office for himself, branching out into the insurance business. About 1900 he took Archiebald Butters, Jr., now of Pellston, into partnership with him and the firm operated under the name of Harsha & Butters until 1910, when the business was sold to A. T. Burnett. That same year Mr. Harsha built what is now the Levinson building in the Birkenhead block, later selling to George H. VanPelt. The year 1910 also marked his retirement from active business, and since then he had devoted his time to fire insurance business and his own interests. Mr. Harsha was one of the original organizers and stockholders of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank and just within recent years relinquished his interest in that institution.

Mr. Harsha served the village and later city of Charlevoix in various official capacities. He was for many years city clerk, was alderman and an active member of the school board. He was a member of the Masonic and Odd Fellow lodges.

In the year 1884, Mr. Harsha married Miss Margaret Cnnes at Wooster, Ohio. To this union were born five children, three daughters and two sons, viz: John, Paul and Mrs. M. D. Slaughter of Detroit; Mrs. Amy Bankson of Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. Earl A. Young of this city, who besides the widow and one sister, Mrs. David McBeth of Terre Haute, Ind., survive.

Funeral services will be held at 2:00 o'clock Friday afternoon at the home on State street, Rev. B. G. Mattson of the Congregational church officiating. Interment will be at Brookside cemetery with Masonic rites.

The intimate role Horace S. Harsha played in the business and social life of this community is well known. He was active to the moment his death sickness overtook him. Always had been known as a busy man; busy in business, busy in charity; busy in those affairs which make for a better Charlevoix. He has been a hard worker and Charlevoix mourns his death.

How many shirts have you? Benj. Brown will sell you a Flannel Shirt for 50c just like the one you buy at regular price. See his adv. on page 4.—Adv. 4t2.

UNDER THE DOME AT THE STATE CAPITOL.

As members of the house of representatives and of the state senate rested over the week end following their first week of real activity in the 1929 session predictions were that the major considerations of this current session would be state finances and criminal legislation. The most important aspect of the financial legislation will be the consideration of the state property tax, which Gov. Fred W. Green is attempting to reduce materially. The phase of criminal legislation which will stand out perhaps even more prominently than capital punishment bills, will be contemplated changes in the criminal code as applied to habitual criminals.

Agricultural legislation will occupy a fairly prominent position on the legislative calendars, however, judging from the bills pertaining to the farm industries and interests which made their appearance last week. Rep. Luther E. Hall of Ionia, sponsored a bill which would strengthen the requirements in the present apple grading law. The measure was designed with the object of more strict standardization of the several grades which are specified in existing legislation on the subject.

A measure, which for the time being has a technical significance only has been introduced in the house. This measure would repeal the Horton Corn Borer Bill, which was passed by the 1927 legislature. Rep. Edward C. Morrison of Lapeer, sponsored the repealing measure because federal funds for state aid in this work, have not as yet been made available. The Morrison net would cause repeal of the Horton measure, only if congress again fails to act in time to appropriate its share of the needed funds.

The situation brought about by the wild leasing of lands, both state and privately owned, in the Muskegon section, following the discovery of oil and natural gas, will be dealt with by a group of bills. The net result of these bills would place the state conservation commission in control of the drilling and production phase of these two kindred industries, oil and gas, while transportation and storage of these resources and the financial structure of operating companies, would be controlled by the public safety commission. Gas and oil would thus become virtually public utilities.

Sen. Chester A. Howell of Saginaw, is the author of a bill which would impose a three cent monthly "severance", or privilege tax, on all oil and gas operators of the state. The tax would be calculated on the monthly gross cash market value of production.

Clarification of the liquor violation aspect of the Harris code of criminal procedure, better known as the Michigan criminal code, will be brought about, it is believed, by recommendation to be made by the commission which, last session, framed the provisions of the present code. Meeting last week with Wilbur M. Brucker, attorney general and Gov. Fred W. Green, the commission seemed to lean most favorably toward the plan of definitely removing liquor law violations from the operation of the crime code. Four such violations, however, would bring a sentence of from 7 1/2 to 15 years in the penitentiary, the suggestion of the commission reads. There was another plan advanced, but not so favorably regarded.

Crimes which would be regarded as effective for the operation of the habitual criminal provision, would be those for which the penalty for first offense would bring a term in prison of more than three years. As liquor violations bring a maximum of one year, they would be automatically excluded from the code.

Three "death bills" have been introduced in the senate thus far this session. The latest to be thrown into the legislative hopper came last week from the desk of Sen. Peter B. Lennon of Genesee county. It would provide electrocution for first degree murder, unless the evidence connecting the accused with the crime were entirely circumstantial. The judge would be called upon to decide this. Circumstantial evidence would bring a life term. One or the other would be mandatory.

Drunk drivers of automobiles would be jailed, without any discretion.

KONJOLA TRIUMPHS AS SUFFERER HAD LOST EVERY HOPE

Once Thought She Would Never Be Well Again; Finds Help Through New Medicine

MRS. A. E. SCOUGALE

One of the most amazing things Konjola does is to bring quick and complete relief to those who have despaired of seeing another well day. Thousands praise this remarkable remedy for ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Here is the statement of Mrs. A. E. Scougaie, 509 North Magnolia avenue, Lansing, Michigan, she says: "Thanks to this wonder medicine, Konjola, I am well again, free from the stomach trouble and kidney ailments that brought on a terrible case of neuritis. Misery followed eating, and I bloated with gas. My kidneys kept me awake at nights; black spots whirled before my eyes; my strength failed and ambition flagged. Then came neuritis, with its torturing pains. Nothing relieved me; I simply grew worse. Believing that I would never be well again, I decided to make one more trial—the Konjola treatment. In a few weeks every pain had fled; stomach and kidneys work perfectly, and I am feeling better than I have for years. To me Konjola was a blessing beyond words."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix, Michigan, at F. J. Fessenden's drug store and by all the best druggists in every town throughout this entire section.

tion of the judge, save for the length of the sentence, according to a bill introduced by Sen. George M. Condon of Detroit. The bill stipulates that the jail sentence would be from 60 to 120 days, however. Second-offense would be deemed a felony, bringing a mandatory term of from 6 to 18 months in prison.

Rep. Charles C. Deland of Detroit, former secretary of state, has offered a plan by which the state's financial program might be handled during the coming biennium, without raising the state property tax materially, and without necessity for imposing a 5 per cent state income tax for the raising of additional funds. The plan, broadly, is to remove about $5,000,000 from the administration's appropriation bill, and to increase the property tax from the proposed $20,000,000 level to about $23,000,000.

Sen. Arthur E. Wood, anti-administration man from Detroit, adopted a different means to change the Green financial program, by submitting separate appropriation bills for every state institution and department. The offering of the bills required several days, because of their number. The bills constitute the different parts of the blanket appropriation bill, already introduced. The difference between the two ways of making appropriations, however, is that while the large appropriation bill might prove difficult to pass, because of individual objections to parts of it, the smaller bills introduced by Senator Wood could be passed readily in individual instances where there was little opposition. It is Senator Wood's idea apparently, to fight for increases for many of institutional bills.

One objection to an agricultural appropriation suggested in the administration's blanket appropriation bill, came to the surface last week, when Dr. B. J. Kilham, state veterinarian, stated that the sum of $125,000, to be devoted to indemnities to farmers for animals slaughtered in the bovine TB eradication campaign, was inadequate. The department of agriculture has requested $250,000 annually for this fund.

NORWOOD.

Guy Empey visited his brother, Percy Empey and family, at the Waller farm near Charlevoix, last week.

The L. A. S. will meet with Mrs. Floyd Wagner this week, where they will be engaged in their mid-winter sewing.

Mrs. James Harris and four children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Plenny Genett, where they all enjoyed the radio.

J. W. Mosher of Beulah, Michigan, on his way to Charlevoix last Tuesday afternoon, was overtaken by the terrific storm and stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown over night.

A terrific storm swept across this section last Tuesday evening, causing much uneasiness among the farmers. Children on their way home from school were forced to turn back and remain in the school house until their parents called for them. Hunters found it quite difficult to reach their homes. Mail service was cut off. Roads were blocked. Trunks marooned by the winds. Cellars threatened with frost where winter supplies were stored. Trees were blown over and two buildings blown down in this vicinity. A tool shed on the Teboe farm and a vacant building on the Runyan farm were blown down with some damage to stored farm equipment.

Mrs. Dice is receiving much praise for her treatment and care of dumb animals during the terrific storm of last Tuesday night. Returning with her horse and cutter from a day's visit with a friend living about two and one-half miles up in the country, Mrs. Dice found that her husband had not returned from a fox hunting trip, and she was left to unhitch her horse and cure for him. The wind blew so hard she was unable to see either barn or garage, so she decided to take him in the summer kitchen, which joins the main part of their home. The horse was rather surprised on entering to see a tall white ice box, gingerly stepped on the slippery linoleum, but soon became accustomed to his new quarters. Later, two neighbors, learning of her predicament, came to her assistance. Friends now say there is no need of a Humane Society in Norwood.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "The Lord is high unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth" (Ps. 145:18.)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mark Baker Eddy: "Prayer cannot change the unalterable Truth, nor can prayer alone give us an understanding of Truth; but prayer, coupled with a fervent, habitual desire to know and do all will of God, will bring us into all Truth." THE SETTLING OF THE SAGE

By HAL G. EVARTS

COPYRIGHT BY HAL G. EVARTS

The girl felt the clutch of stark fear at her heart. She had come too late. Harris was to meet Slade. It seemed that she must die with him if he should pass out before she could speak to him again and tell him she was back. She had a wild desire to run to him, at least to lean from the window and call out to him to mount Callie and ride away. But she knew he would not. She was fronting him. Even the knowledge that she was in town might madden him now. She sat without a move and the driver and guard outside supposed her merely a curious on-looker interested in the scene.

"A hundred on Harris," the driver offered.

The guard granted a refusal.

"I'd bet that 'way myself," he said.

From this she knew that the two men were hoping Harris would be the one to survive; but the fact that their proffered bets backed their sentiments was no proof that they felt the conviction of their desire. No matter how small the chance, their money would inevitably be laid on the side of their wisdom, never against them, as if the wagering of a long shot was proof of their confidence and might in some way exercise a favorable influence on the outcome. So none had ever stood against Slade. She noted Harris' gun. He carried it with the same awkward sling as of old, on the left side in front with the butt to the right.

"Fifty on Slade," a voice offered from the doorway of the hotel.

The guard started for the spot but the bet was snatched up by another. "Will fighting rage sweep through her at the thought that to all these men it was but a sporting event."

Her eyes never once left Harris as he came down the street. "What an almost abreast of the stage Slade stepped from the doorway twenty feet in before him and stopped in his tracks. Harris turned on one heel and stood with his left side quivering toward Slade, the old pose she remembered so well. There was a tense quiet the length of the street.

"Those you live do pour work from behind," Harris said. "Maybe you sometimes take a chance yourself and work from in front." His thumb was hooked in the opening of his shirt just above the butt of his gun.

Slade held a cigarette in his right hand and raised it slowly to his lips. He removed it and flicked the ash from the end, then inspected the results and snuffed it again—and the downward move of his wrist was carried through in a smooth sweep for his gun. It dashed into his hand but his knees sagged under him as a forty-five slug struck him in the back above the buckle of his belt. Even as he toppled forward he fired, and Harris' gun lurked again. Then the Three Bar men were vouching to their saddles. Evans crouched down the street, leading the paint-horse, and within thirty seconds after Slade's first move for his gun a dozen riders were turning the corner on the run. Before the spectators had time to realize that it was over, the Three Bar men were gone. Slade had many friends in town.

The girl had seen Harris' draw merely a single pull from left to right and by his quivering pose the gun had been trained on Slade at the instant it cleared the holster; not one superfluous move, even to the straining of his wrist. The driver's voice reached her.

"Passes draw in the worst for the few that can use it," he said.

The girl was sitting with her head bowed in her hands.

"Don't take it that way, ma'am," he counseled. "He was a hard one—Slade."

But he had misread his signs. She felt no regret for Slade, only a wave of thankfulness, so powerful as almost to unnerve her, over Harris' escape, untouched. She aroused herself of callousness but the spring of her sympathy, usually so ready, seemed dry as dust when she would have wasted a few drops on Slade.

The next day, in the late afternoon, Harris looked up and saw a chap-clad rider on the edge of the valley. Slade had ridden over unannounced on a horse she had borrowed from Brill. She answered the wave of his hat and unrolled the horse down the slope.

He met her at the mouth of the lane and together they walked back to the new buildings of the ranch. The men breaking horses to the new corals were the same old hands. The same old Waddles presided over the new cook shack. Her old things, rescued from the fire, were arranged in the living room of the new house. A row of new storehouses and the shop stood on the site of the old. And in the midst of all the improvements the old eating first erected on the Three Bar stood protected by a ticket fence on which a few vines were already beginning to climb.

After the men had quit work to greet the returning Three Bar boss she went over every detail of the new house. The big living room and the place were modeled closely along the lines of her old quarters; heads and furs were on the walls, pelts and Indian eggs on the floors. Running water had been piped down from a shallow spring. The new house was modernized. Then Harris saddled Callie and Pappoose and they rode down to the fields.

As they turned into the lane they heard the twang of Waddles' guitar from the cook shack, the booming voice raised in song in a melody from a thing heretofore unheard of in the annals of Three Bar life.

"There'll be one real feast tonight," Harris prophesied. "Waddles will spread himself."

They rode past the meadow, covered with a knee-deep stand of alfalfa hay.

"It was only trumpeted down," he said. "She came up in the shape this spring. We'll put up a thousand tons of hay."

He held straight on past the meadow, turned off below the lower fence and angled southwest across the range. The calves and yearlings along their route gave proof that the grazing of the Three Bar herds was already having its effect. Ninety per cent were straight red stock with only a few throwbacks to off-color strains. The two spoke but little and near sunset they rode out and dismounted on the ridge from which, almost a year before, they had viewed the first move of organized law in the Colldriver strip.

He Met Her at the Mouth of the Lane.

A white-topped wagon came toward them up the valley along the same route followed by the file of dusty riders on that other day. A woman held the reins over the team and a curly-haired youngster jostled about on the seat by her side. A man wrangled a nondescript drove of horses and cows in the rear.

"That's the way we both come into this country first, you and I," Harris said. "Just like that little shaver on the seat."

"Will they find a place to settle?" she asked, with a sudden hope that the newcomers would find a suitable site for a home.

Maybe not close around here," he said. "Most of the good sites you can get water on are picked up. But they'll find a place either here or somewhere else a little further on."

He slipped an arm about her shoulders.

"It's been right lonesome plaining without a little partner to talk it all over with at night," he said. "Have you come back for keeps to help me make the Three Bar the best outfit in three states? I can't hold down that job alone."

She nodded and leaned against him.

"That's what they wanted—old Bill and Cal," she said. "But it's also that we want it too. I've come for keeps; and the road to the outside is closed."

They stood and watched the sun pluck over the far edge of the world; and down in the valley below them the hopeful smokers were looking for a place to camp.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Are You Going to Farmers' Week?

The week of February 4 to 8 will be the main attraction of the entire year for all Michigan farmers. Why not arrange to take off a few days and enjoy the splendid program, see the wonderful exhibits, and visit the different departments who are laboring for your benefit.

This is our opportunity of getting the latest information on any farm question or subject that you are vitally interested in. All the department heads and assistants are very glad to have you personally inspect the work of their divisions.

Features of the week will be the grain and potato show that is an annual event and open to state-wide competition. Of particular interest to local farmers will be the exhibit of Charlevoix county potatoes, which include the prize winning samples from the Gaylord show. In addition all departments will have exhibits showing the important activities that are being carried on.

See the horse-pulling contest between three Michigan champion teams, one of which holds the United States record in 1927, while one broke that record this year.

Attend the annual meeting of your cattle, crop and forage state associations. Hear the leading agricultural authorities of the state in the general meetings that are held each day. A continuous round of important contests and events will take place each day for your pleasure and information.

Space does not permit going into detail concerning the multitude of attractions that are planned for you, but after all is said and done this will be the biggest event ever conducted for farmers of Michigan.

Several farmers are already planning to attend this real-latter event, why not you? If going, please inform your county agent and a program will be sent you and if possible, arrangements made to go in cars, which is cheaper than by train. If you can drive, no doubt there are several who would like to accompany you. In other words, let's have each car filled.

Don't forget the dates and decide to go.

To All Automobile Owners.

When you sell or trade in a car, see that the certificate of title is registered with the state department at Lansing, at once. So long as the car is registered in your name, you are responsible for any damage that the car may do to person or property.

It is a common practice for dealers to put off the registering of titles to save registration fees. They also tell the purchaser that there is no particular hurry about re-registering. The certificate of title distinctly states that it must be re-registered within 10 days from the date of sale. For your own protection see that this is done.

When you buy a used car, see that the certificate of title is sent in for re-registering at once. No new licenses are allowed to be issued on assigned titles, the assignment of which bears a date more than ten days previous to the date of application for license. Chas. T. McCutcheon.

PETDSKEY NOSED OUT LOCAL TEAM

WIN HARD FOUGHT BATTLE 15
TO 10 TUESDAY NIGHT

Last Quarter Spurt Put Game on Ice for Visitors—Charlevoix Led Through Three Periods

After being outplayed and outscored through three periods of the most exciting and close-fought basketball games seen on the home court this season, Petoskey high school staged a last quarter spurt and nosed out Charlevoix high school by a 15 to 10 score here Tuesday evening.

Up until the beginning of the third period there was little to choose from between the two teams, although Charlevoix had the edge on scoring and were in possession of the ball more than the visitors.

The first period ended with the score knotted 3-all. Charlevoix counted first on a free throw and then added two more points by a goal before Petoskey made a marker. The visitors counted by the same route to even things up before the whistle sounded. Charlevoix again took the lead during the second stanza which ended 7 to 5. The play was fast throughout the two periods, accounting for many personal fouls. Both teams missed several chances for points from the free throw line, although Charlevoix looped 2 through for their two-point margin.

Charlevoix's offense showed a decided weakness following the opening of the second half. The team seemed to lack the power that marked their play during the first two quarters. The locals managed to hold a one-point advantage throughout the stanza, scoring twice on free throws. Petoskey made three points by a goal and a free throw and were trailing 8 to 9 at the whistle. In the fourth period the visitors staged a spurt which led them to victory. Two baskets swelled their total and they cashed in on three free throws for 5 points. The pace was furious as the Red and White tried desperately to stem Petoskey's scoring spree, and their efforts cost them many fouls.

Bill Novak led in scoring honors for Charlevoix with 6 points. Max Novak and Marshall scored 2 points each and Rex Supernaw one. There was little to choose from between the playing of McCabe, Hinds and Ball of the Petoskey team. McCabe counted 6 points, while his team-mates made 4 each.

Charlevoix's next game will be played on the local court next Monday evening with Gaylord. The game was postponed early last week on account of blocked roads.

Announcing Substantial Reductions in the prices of the DODGE BROTHERS SENIOR

WHEN THE NEW Dodge Brothers Six was announced, at the beginning of the new year, at prices so low as to overshadow any previous Dodge Brothers accomplishment, its universal public acceptance marked a new peak of popularity even for Dodge Brothers cars.

Public recognition was quickly translated into an unprecedented sales volume with an attendant increase in manufacturing efficiency and economy which now favorably affects its companion car—the Dodge Brothers Senior—and permits substantial reductions in the prices of all Dodge Brothers Senior models.

The new lower prices at which the Dodge Brothers Senior henceforth will be sold are directly traceable to the established Chrysler policy of giving the public immediate benefit of every economy due to more efficient manufacturing methods, lower overhead costs and savings effected by the great unified purchasing power of Chrysler Motors.

Not only are these savings now passed on to the public in the form of much lower prices of all Dodge Brothers Senior models, but the cars themselves have been made still better.

Examine the Dodge Brothers Senior in your most critical mood. Scrutinize each small detail. Be most exacting in your inspection. For once you have subjected the Chrysler-built Dodge Brothers Senior to your most diligent and careful inspection you are certain to realize that never before has a car so large, so handsome and so fine been available at so low a price.

NEW LOWER PRICES: NOW $1495 to $1595, F.O.B. DETROIT

VILLAGE OF CENTRAL LAKE HAD BAD BLAZE

Argo Milling Company Branch Mill
Burned There Last Week

The Central Lake Torch has the following to say about the $10,000 blaze in the Argo Milling Company's plant in that city:

"Our city was disastrously threatened on Wednesday of this week, when fire of unknown origin started in the office of the Argo Milling Company about 8:20 a. m.

"When discovered the fire had but a small start, but it being an old wooden building, not much time was needed for a bad beginning. They blew their own alarm as there was no electricity for the new siren, and help was soon at the scene. Here we must give credit to our newly organized fire department and our fire truck. By the time they reached there and for an hour afterwards, it seemed impossible for any kind of an apparatus to save the main building, but with the good help of the townsmen, who willingly volunteered, the men worked untiringly, confining the flames to the inside of the structure, and finally overcoming them. Some little difficulty was encountered in getting the hose and water at work, but chemicals were kept busy by the men, who, as amateurs, showed exceptional ability at the fireman's game. They have been given much praise for their work.

Had the flames reached the outside of the building, the strong wind which was blowing would have soon given the fire such a start that the entire mill and probably warehouse would have been destroyed. This would have been a dire loss to our village, the firm's business amounting to several thousand a year.

We are unable to give the exact amount of the loss, but it is probable it will not run over $10,000 and it is covered by insurance."

In the matter of the petition of Oramel B. Fuller, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for taxes assessed thereon.

On reading and filing the petition of the Auditor General of the State of Michigan praying for a decree in favor of the State of Michigan, against each parcel of land therein described, for the amounts therein specified, claimed to be due for taxes, interest and charges on each such parcel of land, and that such lands be sold for the amounts so claimed by the State of Michigan.

It is ordered that said petition be brought on for hearing and decree at the February term of this Court, to be held at Charlevoix in the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, on the 18th day of February, A. D. 1929, at the opening of the Court on that day, and that all persons interested in such lands or any part thereof, desiring to contest the lien claimed thereon by the State of Michigan, for such taxes, interest and charges, or any part thereof, shall appear in said Court, and file with the clerk thereof their objections thereto on or before the first day of the term of this Court above mentioned, and that in default thereof the same will be taken as confessed and a decree will be taken and entered as prayed for in said petition. And it is further ordered that in pursuance of said decree the lands described in said petition for which a decree of sale shall be made, will be sold for the several taxes, interest and charges thereon as determined by law, extended against each of said parcels of land, at 10 o'clock a. m. on said day, or on the day or days subsequent thereto as may be necessary to complete the sale of said lands and of each and every parcel thereof, at the office of the County Treasurer, or at such convenient place as shall be selected by him at the county seat of the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan; and that the sale then and there made will be a public sale, and each parcel described in the decree shall be separately exposed for sale for the total taxes, interest and charges, and the sale shall be made to the person paying the full amount charged against such parcel, and accepting a conveyance of the smallest undivided fee simple interest therein; or, if no person will pay the taxes and charges and take a conveyance of less than the entire thereof, then the whole parcel shall be offered and sold. If any parcel of land cannot be sold for the taxes, interest and charges, such parcel shall be passed over for the time being, and shall, on such second offer, or during such sale, the same cannot be sold for the amount aforesaid, the County Treasurer shall bid off the same in the name of the State.

Witness the Hon. Parm C. Gilbert, Circuit Judge, and the seal of said Circuit Court of Charlevoix County this 17th day of December, A. D. 1928.
Countersigned, PARM C. GILBERT, Circuit Judge.(Seal)
GEORGE A. RODERICK, Clerk.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

To the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery:
The petition of Oramel B. Fuller, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, respectfully shows that the list of lands hereinbefore set forth and marked "Schedule A," contains a description of all lands in said County of Charlevoix upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein, and which were returned as delinquent for non-payment of taxes, and which taxes have not been paid; together with the total amount of such taxes, with interest computed thereon to the time fixed for sale, and collection fee and expenses, as provided by law, extended against each of said parcels of land.

Your petitioner further shows to the Court that said lands were returned to the Auditor General under the provisions of Act 206 of the Public Acts of 1893, as delinquent for non-payment of said taxes for said years respectively, and that said taxes remain unpaid; except that lands included in said "Schedule A" for taxes of 1899 or prior years were returned to the Auditor General as delinquent for said taxes under the provisions of the general tax laws in force prior to the passage of Act 200 of the Public Acts of 1891, and which taxes remain unpaid.

Your petitioner further shows that in all cases where lands are included in "Schedule A" as aforesaid for taxes of 1899 or of any prior year, said lands have not been sold for said taxes or have been heretofore sold for said delinquent taxes and the sale or sales so made have been cancelled by a court of competent jurisdiction, or have been cancelled as provided by law.

Your petition further shows and avers that the taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses as set forth in said "Schedule A," are a valid lien on the several parcels of lands described in said schedule.
Your petitioner further shows that the said taxes on the said described lands have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned as delinquent; and the said taxes not having been paid, and the same being now due and remaining unpaid as above set forth, your petitioner prays a decree in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of said lands, for the payment of the several amounts of taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses, as computed and extended in said schedule against the several parcels of land contained therein, and in default of payment of the said several sums computed and extended against said lands, that each of said parcels of land may be sold for the amounts due thereon, as provided by law, to pay the lien aforesaid.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

Dated December 10, 1928.

ORAMEL B. FULLER,
Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State.

BRADY WINS INTERNATIONAL SPEED RECORD

Made Best Class C Outboard Speed During 1928 Season.

Roy Brady of the Brady Boat Co., has just received a gold medal from the American judge of outboard record, C. F. Chapman, publisher of Motor Boating.

The award gives Mr. Brady the international mile record of 1928 for class C outboards. This record was made at Detroit in the Labor Day races last September in very rough water. His average time was 33.854 nautical miles per hour, which is close to 39 miles per hour on a statute mile course. The International association, however, does not recognize any time on a statute mile track.

At a meeting of engine manufacturers last spring it was decided to give a gold medal to the winning boat in each class for the year 1928, decision to be made January 1, 1929. Mr. Brady used his own boat, the C-U-Later, and an Evinrude motor. The Evinrude company have written him congratulations and are using a picture of his boat in all their advertising.

COURIER, CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1929

PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

TOURNEY COM- MITTEES ACTIVE

PLANS TO HANDLE DISTRICT EVENT BEING MADE.

Class C and D Basketball Teams Compete for District Honors Here
March 7, 8 and 9.

With the date for the district basketball tournament to be held at Charlevoix this year but four weeks away, plans are being perfected to handle the event.

There are 32 district tournaments in the state, of which No. 26 includes the counties of Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim. Class C schools participating are Boyne City, East Jordan, Manistowish, Harbor Springs and Charlevoix. Class D schools include Bellaire, Central Lake, Ellsworth, Hayne Falls, Albia and Muckinaw City.

Officials of the tournament are chosen and assigned by the state athletic director. Efforts are being made loosely to have Will Burkett, Mt.
Pleasant, who handled the tournament at Boyne City last year, in charge at Charlevoix. Prices of admission must also be agreed upon by the state athletic board. Out of the gross proceeds, the cost of trophies, officials and balls is first deducted. Out of the remainder 20 per cent goes to the entertaining school, 70 per cent to the competing schools and 10 per cent to the state athletic board. Teams are limited to expenses according to mileage, number of players and length of stay at place of tournament. Any possible surplus after all expenses, is divided on a basis of 25 per cent to the entertaining school and 75 per cent to the state athletic board.

Principal O. P. North will manage the tournament for the local school.
He announced Tuesday that four and one-half sections of new bleachers have been ordered and that 10 tiers of bleachers would be erected on each side of the stage to give additional seating capacity.

Private homes having rooming accommodations will be asked to take care of the large number of visiting players and spectators. Mrs. Leona McKinley heads the committee on lodging accommodations. A committee with Miss Hood in charge will take care of decorations and another committee headed by Miss Thomas will take care of bookkeeping and cost accounting. Coach Ray Kipke will be in charge of drawing for places and arrangement of games.

It is planned to throw the entire new grade building open during the tournament with arrangements for rest rooms, checking rooms, etc., to be handled there. It is understood the senior class will be given concession rights.

The tournament is March 7, 8 and
9. If attendance at tournaments of previous years is any criterion, Charlevoix will be crowded those three days with visiting players and fans.
A spirit of co-operation on the part of the townspeople will greatly assist school officials in handling the event.

CHICAGO PLANE AND PARTY VISIT ISLAND

Made Trip from Windy City and Return on Tuesday

At about 12:30 Tuesday afternoon, a large cabin plane carrying Elmer
Kane of the Universal Air Lines;
Shirley L. Short, pilot for the Chicago
Daily News; Robert Stieve and Chas.
Ford, camera men and Chas. Swartz,
Chicago Daily News reporter, landed on Lake Charlevoix near The Inn pier. After a brief stay the plane again took the air and headed for Beaver Island, where it was being sent by the Daily News.

The idea of sending the plane north grew out of the trip of Miss Mary Gallagher from Chicago to Beaver Island to reach the bedside of her mother, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia. The Chicago Daily News is following up the story and at the same time it was understood they offered to be of assistance to the islanders if medical supplies were needed or any other emergency presented itself.

Although desiring to obtain a local pilot, the plane did not stop here long enough to procure one. It was understood the plane was to stop here on the return trip, although they passed over on their way south at about 6:30 but did not land.

hours.

his parents when eight years of age and has since made his home in this vicinity. He is survived by his wife and seven children, his mother and Brookside chapel Tuesday afternoon

RECORD CROWD AT COMMERCE MEET

MANY IMPORTANT BUSINESS MATTERS DISCUSSED.

Winter Sports and Outdoor Life Exposition at Chicago Given Attention by Members.

With a record attendance of members and others present, the Charlevoix Association of Commerce convened at the Masonic Temple last Friday evening. Fifty-five were there, representing all walks of community activity. It was the largest gathering on record outside of an annual meeting.

A sumptuous 6:30 dinner served by the ladies of the O. E. S. lodge brought words of praise from all.
President C. J. Winder opened the business session with a brief and very timely talk, following which the routine of the evening got under way.

Charlevoix's participation in the Outdoor Life Exposition at the Chicago coliseum in May came in for considerable discussion. Several of those present took the floor and presented their views on how the city might best display its advantages and advertising. Many good ideas were brought forth, promising that when the matter is ironed out this city will put on a unique display worthy of its reputation as the leading resort of Northern Michigan. It is planned to call a meeting of the advertising committees of the city council and commercial association in the near future to work on the project.

Charlevoix's 5th annual winter sports carnival was talked over generally before the gathering. Various views were presented concerning the program which will no doubt assist the committee in preparing their events. The carnival opened Wednesday and will close today (Thursday).

R. F. Sloan, Rollie L. Lewis, and
H. A. Craig were appointed as a committee to look up the legal status of the Association of Commerce and report at the next meeting.

Before adjournment a vote of thanks for the ladies of the Eastern Star was recorded on the minutes of the meeting. A suggestion that a perch "feed" might be a feature of the next gathering was heard with enthusiasm.

LITERARY AND SEW- ING CLUB ENTERTAIN

Husbands Guests at Banquet and Program Friday Evening.

The Ladies' Literary and Sewing Club of the Methodist church entertained their husbands Friday evening in the church dining room, with a four-course banquet.

Seventy were present to enjoy the fine program which followed the dinner. Members and husbands responded to roll call with witty maxims.
Mrs. Arthur Bergeon then welcomed the men with an appropriate speech, which was answered by F. F. Bird.
Mrs. Edw. Stewart gave two interesting readings, "Pa" and "Kiss Her in the Morning," followed by two songs sung by Mrs. R. Miller, "The Old Fashioned Home" and "A False Prophet."

Mrs. A. C. Belding, Miss Juanita Secord and Wm. Brown furnished orchestra music for the occasion, while Drew Young ran three reels of movies dealing with local celebrities and winter sports.

BEAVER ISLAND IN LIME LIGHT

EARLY CROSSINGS PROVE HAZ-ARDOUS JOURNEYS.

Thirteen Hours Necessary for Trip
Sunday—Several Islanders Ill;
One Died Sunday.

The first crossing on the ice from Beaver Island to Cross Village was made last Friday under great difficulty. It was only after much hard work that the four men in the party and two horse-drawn sleighs completed the journey. The men reported hidden cracks, thin ice over the channels and very rough, jagged ice were encountered on the trip.

Left in Lead.

The party was led by Joseph Left, who has the government contract for moving the mail across the ice in winter. With him were Charles Gal-lachier, Captain Joseph Floyd and Edward Martin. Both horses and men were wet and tired out upon reaching Cross Village Friday afternoon.
They left St. James at 6:00 a. m. Friday and did not complete their journey until nearly dark. On one stretch of the route they made only four miles in six hours' time.

The route led the men north from St. James and east along the stretch of islands leading toward Temperance Point. Once past Crane Island they swung south again to Cross Village. The outfit was equipped for emergency and the members were glad more than once they had started out fully prepared.

The return trip Sunday was made under even greater difficulty. Leaving Cross Village at about 8 o'clock in the morning, the party did not reach Beaver Island until 9 o'clock that evening.

In the party in charge of Joe Left and Chas. Gallagher were Miss Mary Gallagher of Chicago, and Sister
Mary Genevieve and Sister Clara, Sisters of Mercy from Grand Rapids, and William McDonough and Rowels McDonough of St. James, who have been in Chicago for some time. Miss Gallagher was called from Chicago to be at the bedside of her mother, Mrs.
Charles Gallagher, who has been ill for some time. The Sisters of Mercy are going to the island to visit Mrs.
Fred Nackerman, a friend, who is also ill.

The route going west was slightly different from the one covered by four men who came from St. James Saturday and who encountered unusually rough, dangerous going. It was no safer and took a longer time to negotiate, as is shown in the fact that one horse broke through thin ice and that thirteen hours were needed for the crossing.

Charles Tilley, another islander, who had been seriously ill, died Sunday. We understand his funeral was to be held Wednesday.

ODD FELLOWS HAVE EN- TERTAINMENT WEDNESDAY

Local and visiting Odd Fellows from Petoskey enjoyed a fine meeting in the I. O. O. F. hall last Wednesday evening. Henry S. Sweeney, grand master, and Fred Rogers, grand secretary, were present to assist in the initiatory work. Ladies of the Rehekah lodge served an excellent supper and the program of the evening was enjoyed.

RED AND WHITE WIN TWO GAMES

TOP HARBOR LAST FRIDAY AND GAYLORD MONDAY NIGHT.

Both Contests Close and Won by Narrow Margin—Meet East Jordan
Next Tuesday.

The old basketball dope bucket took another upset last Friday evening when Charlevoix high school divskated a one-point victory from Harbor high at Harbor. The victory vindicated Charlevoix's standing in the race for Northern Michigan honors, but at the same time proves comparative scores mean nothing in basketball. Boyne City trimmed Harbor and then Charlevoix, but lost to Petoskey. Harbor defeated Petoskey and the latter in turn beat Charlevoix, so there you are.

The game last Friday night was as thrilling as the score indicates. With 15 seconds to go and the count 13 to 12 in favor of Harbor Springs, Marshall looped in a beautiful basket. The shot won the battle for Charlevoix 14 to 13.

The local team played a careful game throughout, with every man doing nice work. In the early part of the contest McCall, substituting for Bill Novak, made two pretty field goals and Marshall divided scoring honors with him with four points. For Harbor, McBride with seven and Winegarlen with six, were the point makers.

In the preliminary game the Harbor reserves won handily from the local reserves by a score of 21 to 10.

The lineups were: Charlevoix:
B. Novak and Marshall, forwards;
Supernaw, center; Capt. Max Novak and R. Supernaw, guards. Subs:
McCall for Bill Novak, Harbor
Springs; McBride and Winegarlen, forwards; Grimes, center; Capt. Linehan and Campbell, guards. Subs:
Hill for Grimes, Borth for Linahan.

Field goals—McBride 3, Winegarlen 3, McCall 2, Marshall 2, B.
Novak, M. Novak, Free throws—
McBride, Supernaw, M. Novak.

Score by quarters:

Charlevoix 2 4 6 2—14
H. Springs..... 5 2 5 0—13

After leading through three quarters of their game with Gaylord high school in the local gym Monday evening, Charlevoix high just squeezed through with a one-point victory.

Their defense was working to perfection, but an apparent change in the style of floor play seemed to hold up their offense. Charlevoix was never in danger until the final quarter. They led 2 to 0 at the first quarter and 6 to 1 at the half. Showing an improvement in play, Gaylord narrowed Charlevoix's lead down to three points by the end of the third period, the count standing 8 to 5.
Both teams missed enough chances from the free throw line to put the game on ice.

In a last quarter spurt Gaylord came within one point of tying the count. They scored two goals and a free-throw for 5 points and a total of 10, while Charlevoix garnered 3 free throws for a total of 11 points.

Bill Novak led the local team for scoring honors with a total of 7.
Bergman, a new-comer in the local line-up, played a good game at guard.

In their next home game, Charlevoix takes on East Jordan high school next Tuesday evening.

HARRY ELZINGA HURT IN PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Harry Elzinga, employe of the Charlevoix Coal & Ice Co., was quite seriously injured in an accident Monday afternoon. While driving a team operating the ice-hoist at Widdfield's ice house, the single-tree broke, throwing the whiffletrees backwards.
Elzinga, walking directly behind the team, was struck a terrific blow on the chest by the heavy wooden trees.
Examination at Dr. McMillan's office revealed two broken ribs. The injury was painful and will lay Elzinga up for some time.

Card Party Largely Attended.

The ladies of St. Mary's church held their regular Monday evening pedro party in the school hall this week with the largest attendance of the season. Seventeen tables were in play with Charles Allard and Mrs.
Joe Foster winning first honors. Consolation prizes went to Mrs. Richard Fultz and F. E. Cartier. The party next Monday evening will be the last before Lent.

GAINED 4 POUNDS WITHIN 10 DAYS PRAISES KONJOLA

Suffered From Nervousness for Ten Years—Found First and Only Relief in New Medicine.

MRS. EZRA CLARK

A record of success that is marvel of the drug and medical world has been achieved by Konjola, the new medicine, that triumphs when all else fails. Indeed, this super-compound seems to be at the very peak of its powers in the stubborn cases that have baffled every effort to find relief.

"Everything had failed me in a ten year search for health," says Mrs. Ezra Clark, 1650 Bridge street, Grand Rapids. "It seemed that I would never escape the curse of nervousness, stomach and kidney troubles. Konjola was strongly recommended, but I thought it was just another medicine. But I read and heard so much about it that I concluded that, after all, it might prove to be the medicine I needed. Well, it proved to be that very thing. I gained four pounds in ten days after starting the treatment. Digestion improved and so did my appetite. My kidneys were quickly restored, and in three weeks, my nerves were calmed and I felt like I did years and years ago. I am gaining rapidly in strength, energy and spirits, and I owe this wonderful change to this master medicine. I wish that my voice could reach all who suffer as I did, so that I could urge them to let Konjola make them well again."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store and by all the best druggists throughout this entire section.

UNDER THE DOME AT THE STATE CAPITOL.

Looking back over the past week at the state capitol, survey reveals that legislative and administrative efforts were largely centered about the subjects of state finances and Michigan's criminal code.

Most important action was the presentation to the proper legislative committees, of Gov. Fred W. Green's plan for amending the habitual criminal phase of the criminal code, in such way that liquor law violations would not result in life sentences.

The plan of the administration, for the easing of the criminal code is this: If the fourth felony committed, is of such degree that the maximum penalty as of first offense would be five or more years in the state's penitentiary, then a life term would be imposed under the habitual criminal provisions of the code. But, if the fourth felony committed, were of such degree that the maximum penalty, as of first offense, would be less than five years imprisonment, then a term of from 7 1-2 to 15 years would be imposed under the habitual criminal section of the crime code.

Thus, four liquor law violations would bring, as a culmination, a term of from 7 1-2 to 15 years. Fifth, and later offenses, would be handled similarly, but three liquor law violations, followed by one "serious" felony, with penalty as of first offense, being more than 5 years, then the life term would be imposed. The fourth felony would be made the sole determinant of the sentence as for an habitual criminal.

In other words, when the fourth felony is committed, judges will have to forget, for the time being, the commission of the first three so that the fourth offense may be considered separately. The judge must ask himself this question: "If this fourth felony were really the prisoner's first felony, what would be the maximum sentence? If the answer to that question is: 'Five or more years, then he gets life as a habitual criminal.' But if the answer is: 'Less than five years,' then the sentence of 7 1-2 to 15 years as for an habitual criminal, is imposed.

The plan of the administration is merely a suggestion, which will be considered by the two houses.

Early in the week, members of both houses of the legislature were presented with a 439 page book, the administration's budget for the next two years, which showed them in detail how Governor Green intends to not only raise, but also to use, a total of $68,000,000 for state institutions and departments. The requests for money that were filed with G. R. Thompson, budget director, were in excess of that amount.

Two important conservation bills, including one which would impose a rod license on all fishermen of the state, were introduced in the senate. The rod license measure would bring about $425,000 to the conservation department, it was estimated. A "hunting bill" includes a codification of all game laws and repeal of many old acts.

The administration's plan for including all appropriations in a single bill, apparently has failed but a compromise agreement has been reached whereby each institutional appropriation of the blanket bill will be considered separately by the several institutional committees. The plan reached was about half way between the original idea of Governor Green, and that advanced by Sen. Arthur E. Wood of Detroit, who had already submitted individual bills which were included previously in the single administration measure.

Legislators have failed in their attempt to get $300 a month while in session, with the balance of their $2,190 salary for the two year term, speeded over the remainder of the two years. The auditor general has held that this plan would involve the principle of an advance payment of salary and that the constitutional amendment approved by voters last November stipulated that legislators would be paid "in the same manner as other state employees." Other state employees can't get advance payment in salary, so neither can the legislators, it is agreed, leaving them to draw $45 each pay day, twice a month.

Newspapers of the state are expected to be unanimous in opposition to a measure sponsored by Sen. George M. Condon of Detroit, which would provide that any person in the state, connected with the enforcement of law, would be fined not more than $250 for revealing any fact or circumstance of any criminal case, to newspaper reporters, until the person arrested were tried and convicted or tried and acquitted. It would, by indirection, be a muzzling of the press of the state so far as the publication of crime news is concerned.

Two related bills were introduced in the house during the week, and another kindred measure in the sen-

Charlevoix Public School Notes

Quotation for the Week
"Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy."—Emerson.

Junior High Notes
There are not many schools that are fortunate to have a pupil who thinks enough of school and enjoys it as does Lawrence Korth, a pupil in the eighth grade. He has never been absent nor tardy since he started to school. We do not think many pupils have that record and we all hope Lawrence can keep it up all during school.

We surely should punish our class president, Lila Tillotson, for favoring Boyne City instead of Charlevoix junior high. Our team went to Boyne City Friday night and were defeated by a score of 11 to 18. The players who scored for us were Joe Smith (captain) 7, Wayne Belding 2 and Carlton Ikens 2.

Last Friday morning we had a "pep" meeting to cheer the basketball team up so that they would win

Friday night, although it didn't turn out as we expected.

When the people of Charlevoix hear a load of junior high pupils going thru town, don't be surprised, because the 8th grade is going to have a sleigh-ride and valentine party on February 15.

We are well started on our last semester's work. We all hope the semester goes as well and as fast as the first.

English Department
"Lives of great men all remind us we can make our lives sublime, and departing leave behind us foot-prints on the sands of time."

There should be many successful lives among the students of the American literature class. The study of the lives of such famous men as Bryant, Cooper, Irving and Poe are both interesting and inspiring. In fact, after studying about the organization of "Brook Farm" several enthusiastic students resolved to organize one of their own which would be a success. The studying of the Second National period involves the events leading to the Civil war, the Civil war itself and the reconstruction work which followed, with its effect upon our national literature.

The English II classes have been studying American literature during the period of the revolution. We have been having some interesting discussions over the question, "Did Alexander Hamilton love the American people?" We have decided that he was sincere in his advice about the new government.

Commercial Department
The commercial students have been especially busy the past week, the bookkeeping students working on their practice sets and the typing students trying to win awards. Angie Scott, one of the first year students, won her Underwood certificate for typing 37 words a minute for fifteen minutes. Jaunita Baker won a bronze medal for typing 41 words a minute and Roberta Stafford a silver medal for typing 52 words per minute.

Library News
The public library is one of the best things that ever was introduced into Charlevoix. Students, as well as adults, go there every night. The books and magazines are especially helpful in looking up reference work and Miss Payton is tireless in endeavoring to give her best material to the students. There is a goodly number of encyclopaedias, so that there are generally enough to go around. Some of the most helpful magazines are "National Geographic," "Literary Digest" and other current periodicals which are both interesting and helpful. The school also has a number of sets of encyclopaedias and many other well-chosen books. The students certainly are fortunate in having such valuable material to read.

Thanks to the Polar Bears
Mr. A. Campbell, Manager of the Polar Bears, Charlevoix, Mich.

The Charlevoix high school band boys wish to express their appreciation of the generous check for $104.70 received from your organization for the benefit of the fund which is to be used to buy new band suits.

The money was taken in it a basketball game in which the Polar Bears won from the Petoskey Independents on January 18.

The members of the band have been working diligently both at their music and in their efforts to secure sufficient money to purchase uniforms.

We feel that this has indeed benefited the high school equally as much as the band itself and will not be easily forgotten.

Sincerely yours,
The Band Boys.

Band Report
The high school band played at the game between the Polar Bears of Charlevoix and the Boyne City Indians and, although the director, Mr. Terwee was not present, the boys did exceedingly well under the leadership of Ho Helms.

Eight people from the beginners' class in the band have recently been honored by being promoted into the regular band.

The band played at a bake sale given at the Charlevoix Hardware Saturday afternoon for the purpose of raising funds to buy uniforms. They took in $19.15. The high school wishes to thank the parents and all those who contributed to the sale.

We greatly appreciate the kindness of the Charlevoix Polar Bears for their donation of $104.73 to be used to buy band uniforms. They received the money from the Charlevoix Polar Bear-Petoskey Indies basketball game.

The band uniforms are going to be sent for at once so that they will be ready for the tournament.

Hope is a hen that sits on a lot of eggs but only hatches out a few chickens.

Domestic Science Department
One hot dish is to be served every noon in the domestic science room during the cold winter days for those who carry their lunches. This dish is served in a large enough quantity as to be the main course of the meal. The price is five-cent for each person.

Because of the illness of Miss Hood, the domestic science classes did not meet Friday. The class wishes her a speedy recovery.

Journalism Class

The organization of a class in journalism is a new project this year in Charlevoix high school. The class is under the capable leadership of Miss Keller and, if everyone puts forth his best efforts, we will receive some credit at the end of the year. The class has been meeting every Monday morning at eight o'clock, but it has been found necessary to change the time of the class meeting (Continued on page four.)

Just now, with so many people in the weakened condition that follows a flu attack, it is more important than ever to heed every cold as a danger signal and check it promptly before complications can set in.

Quick Direct Treatment

At the first sign of a cold, melt some Vicks in a bowl of hot water and inhale its healing vapors. Also, place some up each nostril and snuff well back. This quickly opens the air passages.

At bedtime, rub Vicks vigorously over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel. Most colds yield overnight to Vicks two-fold action:

Acts 2 Ways at Once

(1) Its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

(2) At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice, "drawing out" tightness and soreness, and thus helping the vapors to break up the congestion.

Mother especially appreciate this simple external treatment because it cannot upset children's delicate stomachs, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

Mr. North: "Arnold, did you know that there is a town in Massachusetts named after you?"

Arnold: "No."

Mr. North: "Well, there is. It is called Marblehead."

Arnold: "—"

Mr. North: "Never mind. That joke has been pulled off on bigger men than you and me."

Noon Charge at the Gym

Parents may find it a source of relief in the fact that every day there is a teacher taking noon charge at the gym. This is done to make it easier for students from the country and also smaller children who find it hard to walk home and return in the short time at noon. The teachers are sacrificing their own hot dinner in order that the students may be encouraged in coming to school.

The Skating Rink

The skating rink is one of the most popular places in town on these clear, frosty nights. A hockey team has been started among the high school boys and, with a little practice, they will become quite expert at the game.

A New Piano

A new piano has recently been purchased for the gymnasium and the small piano, which was formerly in the gym, has been taken over to the assembly. This is a great improvement for both places as the old piano is in quite good condition.

Mr. Kipke in geometry class: "Are there any questions about this exercise?"

Clara Kelderhouse: "Will you please raise the window?"

Mr. Kipke: "Well, that is one form of exercise."

"Quitters"

By Gwendolen Miller

A quitter is one who stops short of success. Every small town has talent enough within its limits to completely change the viewpoints of the citizens if they are loyal to their high standards and keep on trying. How many students go thru college and have a foundation laid for a good and helpful life in the community, and then lay down at some critical moment?

Thousands, during the last fifty years have tried to invent some machine that would fly, but it was left to Wilbur and Orville Wright to stick it out until they had perfected an airplane.

Many have failed because they did not have the perseverance to hold up under failure, criticism, and sarcastic remarks. Even those who cast slurs at those who are striving toward unattained ideals are the ones who hate a quitter. This one invention of the airplane has changed the source of thought throughout the entire world. It was by this invention that Lindbergh and other aviators have been able to accomplish the marvelous things they have. The possibilities of invention are by no means exhausted and there are as many great things to be accomplished as there have been in the past.

Anyone can accomplish some feat no matter how great. "If he be strong enough, and dream enough, and dream it hard enough, he can attain—no matter where men have failed before."

No matter how fast the clocks run they always wind up in the same place.

Art of Conversation

Speech was intended by nature to enable us to express thought in our conversation with each other. Demosthenes once said, "As a vessel is known by the sound, whether it be cracked or not, so men are proved by their speeches whether they be wise or foolish." It is a matter of common observation that he who talks much cannot always talk well. Speech is an index to the mind as well as the character; the talkative person reveals himself by his remarks. "All have the gift of speech, but few are possessed of wisdom."

One often regrets having said too much, but one rarely regrets having said too little, according to an ancient German proverb: "Speech is silver, silence is golden." Another proverb says, "Be swift to hear, slow to speak."

The boy on the street calls talkative people "windy" which is an apt adjective when used in this sense. "Be modest in speech, but excel in action." Boastful people rarely attain enduring distinction because of their works; those who threaten most are least dangerous.

In conversation with another person, it is well to face him directly, look him full in the face and speak slowly and distinctly; dejected eyes show confession of guilt or folly. Tone of the voice counts as much as the words spoken. To speak agreeably to those with whom we have business is of more importance than rhetoric.

Not infrequently the mouth expresses what the heart does not feel. However, insincerity is always detected sooner or later, for if it is not betrayed by speech it will be revealed by action.

Honest men and women never encourage flattery, though it is human nature to appreciate honest praise when given. It is always bad form to speak ill of the absent. Permit others to speak besides yourself. One who is in the habit of saying little will be listened to with attention when he does speak, for he will not speak until he has something worth expressing.

Mock Trial in American History Classes. Who Ate the Cake?

Guilty or not guilty? It remains to be proven, whether the defendants in the trial in American history class can be proven guilty. Did Miss Irene McCann, assisted by Richard Farmer, break into the home economics room and take and angel food cake as the state witnesses swear upon oath they saw them do.

The witnesses are a bit doubtful as to just what they saw. However, the defendants are positive that on the night of January 12, while they were working late in the typing room, they heard a peculiar noise and upon investigation discovered Miss McCann and Mr. Farmer in the act of eating cake. The next morning the lock was found broken. Although the accused persons have not yet been called to testify, there seems to be no doubt that they will be proven guilty with the amount of circumstantial evidence against them.

The witnesses and lawyers were unable to make much headway, due to the fact that Lawyers Bogart and Higman tried to prove that the state witnesses might have been guilty themselves. The judge also went to sleep, and court was adjourned until the following Monday morning.

It promises to be an interesting case and rumors have been circulating around that the defendant's lawyers, Bogart and Higman, are going to attempt to prove the witnesses guilty of perjury. This will cause further complications. The big question is will the jury report them guilty or not guilty. And what will the judge's sentence be?

County Normal Notes.

By the biographies composed recently by members of the normal class, interest has been shown manifested in the lives of wellknown men and women of ancient as well as modern times.

The appearance of the Normal room has been colorful as well as changeful in the display of art work, bulletin boards and picture stories. This is due in a great measure to the work of three of the students, the Misses Bogart, Siminow and Wooley. They have full charge of these activities for the month of February.

An especially designed program will be given on each of the special days of this month. They are to commemorate the birthdays of Washington, Lincoln, Longfellow and St. Valentine.

SPORTSMEN ASKED TO REPORT TAGGED FISH

Conservation Department Will Get Data by This Method.

Trout fishermen who are pawing over their equipment during the winter months in anticipation of the season's opening May 1, have been asked to consider a request that the fish hatchery division of the state conservation department is making. The hatchery men are asking that next season any fisherman who takes one of the trout tagged by the department report the catch. The information that may be gained from such reports will be considered invaluable by the department's experts who are seeking to gain information on migrations and rate of growth of brook, brown and rainbow trout. The number of the tags, the lengths of the fish and the planting localities have been carefully recorded. Of the older fish, the sex has also been recorded.

The fish division has compiled a list of information which it hopes the fishermen will see fit to forward to the department. It is asking that anglers keep these items at hand where they may be reviewed when supplying the desired facts.

Here are the points stressed: (a) date of capture; (b) length of fish from tip of snout to end of tail; (c) locality of capture; that is name of stream and location by town or otherwise as accurately as possible; (d) sex of fish, if possible to determine; (e) the tag itself should be mailed together with the report. If so desired, the tag will later be returned to the correspondent.

All correspondence relating to this matter should be addressed to Dr. Jan Metzelaar, University Museum, Ann Arbor, Michigan.
